

Students ask reforms, register complaints to Relations Council

Although handicapped by poor attendance, an Open Hearing of the Student-University's Relations Committee wrestled with issues ranging from housemaster reports to the residential college.

The Relations Committee was formed by students, faculty, and administrators to deal with common rights and responsibilities in an atmosphere of cooperation and mutual understanding.

Dave Henderson, chairman of the committee, said that even though the attendance was not as much as he had hoped for, he was "still pleased with the ideas that I heard."

Members of those attending the meeting were concerned about housemaster's reports. It was brought out that the reports probably were not effective because they often are not well-founded. One student complained that often the housemaster is not as familiar as he should be with those about whom he is reporting.

Part of the Committee's functions will be to evaluate the future of the residential college, especially in light of the housing shortages. Henderson asked the opinion of many when he asked whether students can recognize such a system as a residential college in view of the inadequacies that exist.

Some discussion centered around the requirement that all independents affiliate with a house next year. One person felt that he was not truly independent because of this.

During the hearing, it was noted that the students need to be realistic in their general approach to things. Students are human also, pointed out one person, and if by chance the students make the wrong decision about a matter, this should not bring all their efforts to nothing.

Henderson said that he felt students should be truthful to each other about the directions they are going, and that they should examine the methods used to secure their objectives. The group agreed that the concepts and reasons behind existing rules should be studied so as to understand the guiding motive behind the particular regulation. Giving his personal viewpoint, Henderson said that he did not think protests or demonstrations are necessary or even justifiable in searching for the right directions to take.

The general purpose of the hearings was to measure student opinion, and in this respect it was fairly successful.

Women ratify honor system

A proposed honor system for East Campus was overwhelmingly ratified Thursday night.

Out of 180 ballots cast, 95% or 85.6 per cent were marked yes. This yes vote was 76.7 per cent of the total membership of the Woman's College which is 182.

Peggy McCart, chairman of the Woman's Judicial Board, said, "I am confident that the positive vote is indicative of the recognition that self-enforcement is the only valid enforcement especially when we are working toward a regulation system based on personal responsibility and mature decision."

The Board realizes that implementation of the honor system will require "enlightened and education, especially with freshmen next fall."

"We realize that most negative votes reflected dissatisfaction with the regulations system, and we hope that students will continue to work with the Board and the Dean's Staff to initiate further improvements."

Salary, culture of Durham bring faculty 'brain drain'

By MIKE BRONOLD
DIXIE PONDOLI

This is the first of two articles examining the inter-related problems of faculty turnover, salaries and ratings.

In four years Duke has dropped from fifth to sixth place in the nation in average compensation paid to its faculty.

Whether or not as a result of this decline, Duke this year is losing a higher than usual number of outstanding faculty members to other schools.

"We probably have a larger number of resignations for various reasons this year than we have in any of the previous three years," said Provost R. Taylor Cole.

Dean Harold W. Lewis emphasized, however, that the Duke faculty is still "one of the more stable faculties in the country."

The cost of competition, however, is high. Economics Professor Charles E. Ferguson is leaving Duke for Michigan State, where he will receive a $10,000 salary increase. Michigan State does not is draining faculty talent, and the number of resignations may increase as last-minute negotiations continue. In arts and sciences alone, 18 assistant, associate and full professors are leaving for new positions next year.

Dr. Cole pointed out, however, that the "brain drain" must be considered relative to "the number and quality of those you're adding." In many departments at Duke, additions next year will exceed losses numerically.

But quality is not that easy to gauge. "Rarely do you fill the same place that has been vacated," Cole said. "If a man contributes something to a department, he has contributed part of himself."

Academia is an extremely competitive world. Demand for faculty talent far exceeds supply. According to some department chairmen, Duke is especially vulnerable to "riding" for a number of reasons.

"It is absolutely necessary that we be competitive salary-wise," Cole stated. The cost of competition, however, is high. Economics Professor Charles E. Ferguson is leaving Duke for Michigan State, where he will receive a $10,000 salary increase. Michigan State does not of members of this task force who are also joined by Y members and ASDU committee workers. Together they form a united group with tremendous potential for harnessing student efforts answering social problems of this area.

Their projects include staffing Edgerton programs, tutoring, labor problems, and programs with the mentally disturbed at Butler Institute and Murdock.

The care task force plans to inform students of the various counseling services available to students. The group also hopes to arrange to affiliate chaplains with dormitories, and to set up hospital visitation by students. This year's "Ecumenical Seminar" group will be continued next year by the study group.

D. Shows, a Duke doctoral candidate in psychology, is working with the care group in an investigation of married students' problems and a study of what can be done to counsel and help them.

An ad hoc group of UCM planning activities for freshman week has scheduled a "Black-street happening." The event, promised to be a rousing and shocking one, will ask freshmen who they are and where they are going, while giving them an introduction to UCM at Duke.

Price also noted that although faculty will have access to the student's "jacket" of confidential records, a list of those who borrow the records will be kept.

At Thursday's meeting the UFG also discussed and approved the following changes in curriculum.

Students, too, may now take a sabbatical.

New Christian movement plans for coffee house, frosh happening

By ROBIN WAKELAND

A coffee house, an all-university worship service, a "black-street happening," a seminar on the Arts and a Vietnam teach-in are all children of the newly formed University Christian Movement.

The UCM is a unit of concern for efforts and programs of Duke's small religious groups.

The movement plans to concentrate its efforts in five fields: faith and the arts, worship, social service and action, and caring. These groups are all open to any interested member of the University community.

Faith and the Arts has taken over temporary sponsorship of the coffee house scheduled to open Sept. 22. The group will provide an umbrella structure and an official backer for the coffee house in order to set it up and insure its success.

Project '67, a program to present and explore contemporary problems in the language of the future with a mind on the future, will be carried out by the task force on study.

Topics to be examined in seminars include "What is Sexuality," "The Draft," "Consequences of Drugs" and "The Meaning of Africa and Racial Revolution."

An ecumenical university wide worship service to serve as a covenant renewal and affirmation of faith has been planned by the worship task force. The service will include liturgy from various denominational groups, as well as writings from non-religious sources.

National University Christian Movement president Charlotte Bunch will be present at the service which will be May 18, at 8 p.m. at the Episcopal center building.

Durham problems and student response to them is the particular concern of ASDU hearing.

There will be an open ASDU legislative committee meeting Monday at 7 p.m. concerning the resolution to send observers to the NSA Conference this summer.

Biology department display recommends birth control and illustrates devices

Want birth control information? Can't get it on student health?

Try the display in the Biological Sciences building.

The "ideal contraceptive," according to the display "... must be absolutely harmless; wholly reliable, free of any objectionable reaction, inexpensive and simple to use."

Methods shown range from the modern, refined "pill" to the older condone—the most widely used contraceptive in the U. S. It is effective and cheap.

Both sterilization and abortion "avoid the problem associated with repeated decision-making around the time of the sexual act," according to the exhibit.

"Next to the atom bomb," the display says, "the most ominous force in the world today is uncontrolled fertility."

"Either the birth rate of the world must come down, or the death rate must go back up."

It also quoted one author as saying that "Presumably God gave man both sexual organs and intelligence. The latter should be used at least as frequently as the former."

Fund: $1800, new trustees

By MARTY LLOYD

The student members of the Board of Trustees for the Fund for Experimental Education have been named—amid word of the first financial successes of the new movement.

Over $1800 has already been donated to the Fund, according to Doug Adams, Director of the Fund, Crain E. Miller, Bob Doggett, Tom McClain, Mary Emerson, Peggy Pringle, and Mary Ellen Fullerton were appointed to the Board Thursday night. Bob Creamer and Hershey Nelson will serve as ex-officio members.

The donations came from a variety of sources including music societies, ASDU, and the Senior Class of both Trinity and the Woman's College.

Adams emphasized the fact that a great deal of money has come from 31 individual donors. He said, "I hope as many individual students as possible will give in order to show the faculty and administration that the idea of experimental education has a broad base of support."

Seniors who wish to support the fund can advise the Bursar's office to refund their $25 pre-registration and housing deposits directly to the Fund, according to Adams. If only 100 donors did this, the Fund would be halfway towards its goal of $10,000.

Adams praised University Counsel E. C. Bryson, Mr. H. S. Morgan of the Bursar's office, and Dean of the Area of Student Affairs, William Griffith for their cooperation in helping establish the Fund.

Faculty body approves new journalism course, students' sabbatical

By PEG MCCARTT

Introductory Journalism 103, the University's first course in journalism, will be offered for one semester hour credit next fall.

The interdisciplinary course, designed to acquaint freshmen interested in University publications with the field, will also be open to upperclassmen, who may register for it in the fall.

The course will include the study of historical, ethical, and technical aspects of American journalism, with emphasis on interviewing, copywriting, layout, and photography in collegiate publications.

The students will be expected to apply various aspects of class lectures and discussions, including the writing of news and feature stories and the conducting of research and interviews for articles. Professor Walter Spearman of the UNC School of Journalism will coordinate the course.

Tentative approval for the new course was given May 4 by the Curriculum Subcommittee of the Undergraduate Faculty Council under Dr. George Williams. Final acceptance came in a meeting of the full Council's meeting, the UFG also discussed and approved the following changes in curriculum.

Price also noted that although faculty will have access to the student's "jacket" of confidential records, a list of those who borrow the records will be kept.

A sophomore, junior, or senior in good standing may apply to writing his dean for a leave of absence for one or two semesters. If granted, the leave will begin at the end of the semester in which application is made.

Students who leave a student must inform his dean during October (or a fall leave) or during March (for a spring leave) of his intention to return for the next semester or to extend his leave. Failure to meet the deadline for notification will result in forfeiture of one's place in the University and will necessitate application for readmission.

Under past policy, a student who left the University voluntarily, intending to return, was required to withdraw and apply for readmission. Readmission was never certain and often not affirmed until shortly before time for re-entry.

Leave of absence policy will avoid these difficulties while enabling students to pursue relevant academic activity at another institution. The Academic Leaves must have the approval of the Director of Undergraduate Studies in the student's major. Credits will be transferred according to present procedure.

Students spending a semester or more abroad leaving a foreign language may apply for a leave of absence. Students wishing to participate in non-academic activities such as social work or travel.

Leave may provide a period for evaluation, including music, sports, etc., as well as facilitate absence in case of medical or other emergency.

though his main reasons for leaving are a desire to return to the Northwest and a preference for a smaller school, he commented that "Duke has given him a move in the way of innovation" in the curriculum.

"If I thought that an experimental college was using some tech. that I could see some money behind it got started here. I would have strongly considered staying."

Dr. Salmon also felt that curriculum change is called for. "Five courses are too many." He would like to see inter-disciplinary courses and fewer uniform requirements, he said.

Dartmouth's liberal arts program attracted him because of its three courses per trimester program.

"It's a treadmill kind of affair," said Chairman J. M. Fein of Romance Languages. "You expend a great deal of energy just trying to stay where you are."

Plan for professional analysis

The following article was sent to us from the Proudfoot Division of the History Department.

Faculty Efficiency Analysis Ratings (FEAR) statisticize Professors' Educational Performance... Each Professor's rating comes from his Student Organized Consumer Ratings (SOCR) (Student Organized Consumer Ratings) rating card... replication on a scale from 1 to 10,000 for each course covered as follows: New Visions of Ethiopian History—Prof. Herodotus Thucydides Polybius Patch on one Rating

Communication	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
Opinionation	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
Information	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
Notitissness	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10

COIN average by 3/3 Students
Achievement (A) by all three of this perfect group)
Student Hours 3
At a penny of this gives Polybius a CASH rating of $3900.00

But ratings of perfection are easy and non-illiberal, and our real-life problem lies with courses at the following:
Etruscan Band Instruments—Asst. Prof. Toynebe Ranko

For their average B (3) grade, Prof. Toynebe gave him 9 for both Communication and Information. But he got a 1 for Opinionation after a duel at the Faculty Club under an unprintable remark about his dissertation, The Electric Guitar at Allah: A Study in Etruscan-Carthaginian Naval Practices (Scribner Press, Tarboro, N.C.) and a Nuttiness 5 for his classroom rendition of the Phoccean graffiti on his chosen musical instrument. Ranko's COIN rating is thus 9 x 1 x 9 x 5 for a rather low 405, while his CASH rating rises to a good 405 x 3 x 100 x 3 hours or $9465.00 for this popular course.

CASH rises by Salary gives by him his Salary Myopia-Efficiency Rating (SEER). Here Assistant Professor Ranko clearly has it over the aging and better-paid Professor Polybius. Etruscan Polybius cannot be demoted, Ranko must be promoted to a Name Professorship.

Cumulative SEERs can be computed and published for any course, professor, department or university. They can be used by deans, consumers, Committee Z (costing real analytical problems).

Voting patterns

The vote on East for the Honor System shows a new attitude... We indeed more liberal than the Women's College to abolish most if not all its parental titles.

Compared with the vague, jumbled rules which replace the new Women's College Regulations are well written, organized and communicated by allusions to in loco parentis-type clauses. If one grants the Women's College the right as a community to make rules at all, and we believe that one must, then the new Regulations are indeed more liberal than the Women's College to abolish most if not all its parental titles.

The affirmative vote for the Code shows that women are willing to shoulder more responsibility in response to continued change.

There might be some lessons for ASDU and WCSGA to be learned in the East vote. By voting in individual forms, 76.7 per cent of the total vote was reached. The ASDU election vote reached under sixty per cent of the West vote. The use of house meetings and dorm representatives who could actually interpret the regulations with a background of knowledge allowed a more intelligent vote.

We have noted several dorms on West that have amended theirs before the ASDU constitutional amendments vote. We hope that more will do the same. There should be discussion of each of the changes. Most are technical and will not substantially affect the real or implied power of ASDU.

But of scholars? It never going to be a balanced one initiated by a group of students working in close cooperation with the administrative staff of the University. These changes show what can be done when students and faculty are working together. Most of the bargaining table to initiate change. All the affected areas, the changes are usually forthcoming.

Residential living?

Yesterday's hearings held by the Student-University Relations Committee reflected genuine concern for University policy in many areas. One mentioned was the residential college.

It is very difficult to look at the University campus and call it a residential college. As we see the President and faculty vacating homes along Campus Drive it becomes obvious that the residential college is meant only for the earliest.

And really it's meant only for the undergraduate. The Graduate Center across from Hanes can hardly be called a community. Most of the grad students have been seen through the residential myth and have moved into Durham.

Let's accept the established truth that our "community" is never going to be a balanced one at Duke. Even the visionary proposal printed on the right will not bring to Durham what an Englishman would deem a decent substitute for a residential college.

Much might be gained by an Oxford-Cambridge-type community in this Gothic wonderland. But one look at the East and West dormitories shows that little can be done to give students the privacy implicit in this arrangement. Open houses are a diversionary step toward providing areas for students to gather informally.

What this community needs is a Student Union that serves that function. East has never had one, and the West Union has always devoted most of its space to offices and a cafeteria.

And so we get up and look at our Fifth Decade file with the campus map which shows a "University Center" in light blue. Fine, but that's not coming until 1970.

Let's start now to use what facilities we have to meet the needs of students. Ted Minnie's evening cuisine is a start in West. A similar program could be set up in the basement of Area 2.

This is one area that the UPPAC committee might consider for brown-bagging of beer and wine by students. Such a program, arranged and equipped with music and dancing facilities, might do wonders for student morale, and provide directly needed space for students to meet on campus informally.

Where are supporters of the war?

By ELLEN LOCKWOOD
Where are the defenders of administrative policy? That's what I want to know. The absence of such defenders is a tragedy.

Teach in (May 3) indicates either one of two things (1) that communication between dove and hawk has completely broken down or (2) administration supports no longer. The absence of such defenders is a tragedy. The absence of such defenders is a tragedy. The absence of such defenders is a tragedy.

(1) Is the new South Vietnamese Constitution truly a democratic one? I note that nothing was mentioned in this constitution about land reform, but the Rights of Man and the Bill of Rights would be effective ONLY if the 'powers that be' (the Ky regime) consider these Rights in the national interest. It is also noteworthy that Ky's regime presently calls for imprisonment and/or death for political dissenters. (2) Is the expectation of Chinese Communist aggression in all of S. E. Asia a valid one for our dangers? American large scale military might in Thailand, S. Korea, Formosa, The Philippines, Okinawa surrounds China. American nuclear potential would suffice to bring about the "Silver Age," to put it in the word of Curtis LeMay.

(3) Will the U.S. really lose FACE if she de-escalates? It seems that many countries have left greater commitments than ours in other lands with much more at stake. France left her own colony Algeria, and the loss of too many lives. We may observe that she is praised today for her courageous moral and practical decision to give up the colony.

(4) Has Ho refused our peace proposals because each one has forced him into the invader's position? The common proposal, "we'll stop the bombing if you'll prevent infiltration from the North" means that Ho is invading South Vietnam. He views the conflict as a result of many South Vietnamese who turned their backs on the old government, and a former President whom the United States supported.

(5) Will the South Vietnamese and Americans be left to the NLF if we initiate a cease fire with no strings attached for the purpose of peace? Will the NLF be allowed to continue? (This does not mean a cease fire for the purpose of making Ho and the NLF accept our fallacy; that they are invaders.) As we will not accept an application for one semester in the field resulted on both sides when bombing is carried out.

A plan for a residential college

I'd like to do some thinking out loud in print about how a viable Residential College system might be established at Duke.

Such a system would entail the replacement of fraternities (local and national), independent houses and freshman houses, as living groups, with approximately eight residential colleges.

These colleges are to be formed initially on the basis of physical plants. The colleges would be Trinity College (consisting of the present New Dorm complex), Wannamaker College (Wannamaker complex), Kilgo College (J College tower, L. M. N. O. and P sections), F. J. College (both FJ sections), Sigma Nu, Phi Delta and ATO sections), Craver College (Craver and ATO sections), Tarboro, ICS) and a portion of Theta Chi, TEK, KA, ZBT, Delta Sigma and Lambda Chi sections), Bassett College (Animal Quad complex), Carr College (Clark Tower Quad complex), a college in the GG-HH area and an off-campus Experimental College.

Selection and placement: Freshman would be assigned on a random basis to one of the colleges where he would live for the next four years, if, as an upperclassman, he does not choose to move off campus.

Size and facilities: The colleges will range in size from 250 to 400. Eventually, each college will have study, social and eating facilities, as well as recreation. The premises assigned (initially) to each college would be a Resident Fellow (graduate student), Faculty Fellow and a Scholar in Residence who would live in or near the college for one semester, teaching the College Colloquium for credit. After a short period of time all of these personnel will be selected by the college's governing Board of Regents (elected students).

Government: Under such a residential college system, several governmental changes would have to be made. A.H. and the present committee structure of WCSGA would be replaced by an eight-man College Moderator (chairman of the Boards of Regents) committees similar to the House of Representatives on East. Legislators to ASDU from West Campus would still be elected on a class-wide basis, but without regard to their affiliation. The size of the ASDU Legislature would be halved.

Dean's Staff: The dean's staff would be reconstituted, having one dean assigned to each of the colleges, all under the Dean of Men.

Colleges envisioned are the new dorm complex, where dining facilities are already on the drawing board, are already completing libraries. Also, some areas are more adaptable to the ideal than others. Wannamaker, for example, has four large chapter rooms running along the basement-patio level. One can readily see the possibilities for dining facilities, a study room, a library and a social room. Others, such as Kilgo, present greater difficulties.

Fraternities: All local and national fraternities would be disbanded, their members, either on or off campus, for social purposes. Living facilities on the premises would be provided. Financially, the national fraternities at Duke have been paying dues to their national organizations for construction of fraternity structures elsewhere for many years. A request for a refund of these dues, which could, in all fairness, be refused. In fact, a highly placed JCF official predicted that under such circumstances, more rather than fewer national fraternities would like to participate at Duke. The Inter-Fraternity Council would be the governing body for all national and local fraternities. Open relations would be in effect throughout the year.

I make no claim of originality for this plan. The Residential College (including selection procedure) and fraternity set-up I have described has been in operation at Yale and other schools for many years. Any close to home, West Campus Chairman Bob Newton has been sounding out the fraternity lodge idea for the past several weeks.

I would take a minimum of ten years time to get the plan fully implemented. A great deal of work would be required. The proposal as outlined. Perhaps that is more of both than we can afford. The strongest thing I can say is that the plan is better than what I think it can work. Think it over.

No 'Y' scholarship

I am writing this in response to Jim Fox's article in the May 6 issue of the Chronicle in which he stated that "both the YM and the Student Union maintain summer school scholarships." For those who are not familiar with the members I would like to say that at no time has the YMCA maintained or sponsored any type of summer school scholarship for its officers.

Vietnam poll

I would like to suggest that the poll on Vietnam which appeared in Saturday's Chronicle (although not sponsored by the Chronicle) raised some questions which were at worst "loaded" and at best grossly unfair. One of the questions asked the reader to choose between "I object to all wars," and "I object to some wars, and I do not object." If either of the first two choices is checked, it might be interpreted as definite opposition to the Vietnam War. If the third choice is checked, it might be interpreted that the person either did not care or was in favor of war.

It is perfectly possible to oppose the war in one area and support some wars politically, economically, or what have you. It is possible to oppose certain aspects of the war, such as the dropping of nuclear on civilians and still support the overall objectives of that war.

Either, it began over a decade ago, and it must therefore be evaluated in that light. It is not sufficient to say, "I object to our present involvement."

One can only hope that in the year... I would take a minimum of ten years time to get the plan fully implemented. A great deal of work would be required. The proposal as outlined. Perhaps that is more of both than we can afford. The strongest thing I can say is that the plan is better than what I think it can work. Think it over.

The Fifth Quarter

with
Mike Pousner
Sports Editor

Sports fans, you might take time away from your boozing, carousing, or job this summer, to consider coming back to school early for our first football game.

Coach Harp's Devils will take on Wake Forest at Raleigh, Saturday, Sept. 16, in the nightcap of the heralded Big 4 Football Day Doubleheader. The game will be played in State's Carter Stadium.

I'm opposed to these "home" games, which are 39 miles away from Durham, just as I'm opposed to the idea of games before the students have to be back. Of these subjects we will talk more in the fall.

But it's spring now and the weather has been too nice to get overly angry. So I'm concentrating on drawing you to the Duke-Wake game, especially since your presence will be needed.

As you probably know (or as Central Records had better inform you) registration day for upperclassmen will be Sept. 29. Since the fresh arrive for Orientation on the 15th, the possibility thus exists that the only Duke rooters at the football game will be the freshmen, Y-FAs, Y-Men, and other upperclass men who will be back early for one reason or another.

The team will certainly deserve a more numerous Duke contingent than this, especially when you consider that this counts as one of our "home" games.

Besides, you wouldn't be going to Raleigh just for the good of "Dear Old Duke." You will also get to see what promises to be an exciting, close football game between two old rivals.

And the price is nonexistent. Duke upperclassmen's I.D. will be sufficient to obtain admittance. All he (or she) has to do is go by the Duke Athletic Office and show it to obtain a ticket. Unfortunately, Athletic Business Manager Rod Lewis has informed us that there probably will be no way for our students to see Duke's C. St. John's game. The ticket for both schools will then be in full session, that encounter is fated to be a sell-out. The stadium will be emptied between games.

Raleigh will be available to take one and all from the chapel to campus for the night cap, according to Al "He's the King" Cone. As far as housing goes, we should know by the next "Chronicle" issue if upperclassmen will be officially able to come into the dorms. Even if they can't, this certainly shouldn't keep away the many Duke students who live even remotely near the capital city.

And besides these advantages, consider the many other "intangibles." Guys, here's your big chance to check out the new freshman girls. Girls, you will have four days to win over that special guy before the mass of your competition arrives. And for you studious ones, what a great opportunity to start looking for next January's final!

Back to the game itself—and let's hope the many publicity officials who are planning all kinds of new events will remember to allot some time for it—look for a typical Duke-Wake battle. The two teams didn't play in 1966. In 1965, Duke clubbed the Demon Deacs in a game which was almost a preview of last year's Duke-Notre Dame game—with Duke playing the role of Notre Dame. The year before, Wake defeated Duke for the first time in 13 years.

Wake's Head Coach is the mercurial Bill Tate, runner-up for National Coach of the Year Honors in 1964. According to press reports, Bill's had a grin plastered on his face all Spring; so he must have a pretty good team. Wake's record wasn't so hot last year, but most of the players are returning and several key prospects move up from the fresh team.

As far as our Devils go, they should prove better organized in Tom Harp's second season as head coach. Graduation will take away some exceptional talent (for instance, All-American Malleshon and future Packer Danaway), but the Devils are experienced everywhere with the possible exception of the offensive line.

The Wake-Duke game will be a test under fire for some of Harp's new position alignments. Jake Devoshere will be performing as a tight end, and Chuck Greco, formerly a linebacker, is now a guard. Bill Phipps, an ex-defensive end, is presently a halfback.

Jay Calabrese will be returning for another yardage-gobbling season as will be "evergreen's hope not to be reinjured," Mike Murphy. Other returning lettermen include veterans Rodger "Deuce" Parker, Mike Remaker, Healy Carter and Frank Ryan. The quarterback will probably not be known until after fall practice—Larry Davis and Al Woodall lead the pack.

We play very few home games (a rollicking three for the 1967 season) in Durham, so the Devils will need that home school spirit when they're as close as Raleigh. Remember also, that Wake will be in session then, and will have a full student delegation at the game. It would be nice if Duke had more than its freshman class there.

No home game support

A letter to sports editor

Ed. Note: The author of this letter is a member of the fresh baseball team. Though it will be published after their last game is over, it is significant because it expresses the desperate need for support felt by many athletes in "minor" sports here.

Here at Duke, baseball suffers terribly from lack of support and participation. At almost no other major college or university can a winning team play consistently to empty stands. Yet that is exactly what Duke's freshman baseball team is doing.

Hope For Future?
This team, representing Duke's baseball hopes for the next three years, has accomplished more than any other such squad in the past few years. But a little more enthusiasm on the part of the student body could have spurred this team to a record more consistent with its potential.

Home on the Road
Before you shrug your shoulders and placate your conscience by telling yourself that your presence at a game couldn't make any difference, consider this fact: Duke's freshman team has lost only one out of five games on the road this season while losing four out of five home games. And a late timing comeback by Wake nearly denied us of our lone victory thus far.

Why is it that the Duke Frosh have whipped UNC and State soundly in their own backyards but have mounted only token opposition against them in the familiar surroundings of our stadium? Lack of spectator support seems to be the sole reason for the majority of these losses. Players try to joke about the lack of concern for baseball here. However the jokes come out sour and sarcastic as we remember the hundreds of hours spent preparing for these games and the school work we didn't do as well as we would have liked because we wanted to play baseball for Duke University. When one goes into the empty stands before a game, he can't help but wonder if he weren't foolish for devoting himself to baseball for 20 to 25 hours a week.

Support Does Count
Anyone who thinks his active support of the team would be of no consequence should witness the aggressive spirit of the freshman team when it is playing before even unfriendly spectators. How much more aggressive we would be before a partisan crowd! Now one must certainly conclude that with support, this team could easily have won most of those one and two run losses at home. Not only that, but with student support and interest in baseball, surely many former high school baseball players would seek to play college baseball; thus improving the quality and depth of our present team.

But before we delegate baseball to the past this year, let's see what our freshman team can do with student support. Show your spirit by attending the last game of the season-to-date. The opportunity for this "home" game is State, and game time is 2:00 P.M.

Volpp heads business

Dr. Louis D. Volpp, a specialist in economic theory and marketing, will chair Duke's new Department of Business Administration. Volpp is now associate professor of business at the University of Illinois.

His first task, according to Provost L. Taylor Cole, will be to recruit faculty members and to organize the new department.

Dr. Cole said the creation of the new department from the current Department of Economics and Business Administration reflects the University's plans to place more emphasis on business administration and eventually offer a masters degree in the field.

A $50,000 gift from the Hanes Corporation of Winston-Salem indicates that the Southeastern business community has strong interest in the new program. Dr. Cole stated the gift will provide for a professorship in the new department.

Dr. Volpp was associate director of the graduate school of business administration at the University of Illinois from 1961-1964.

Women still in frat rush

By DAVE LITTLE

Girls will remain a part of formal fraternity rush. A 12 to 6 straw vote of the fraternities at Thursday night's Inter-Fraternity Council meeting staved off any consideration of eliminating girls from a specified night of next year's rush.

However, individual fraternities are left the privilege of not using girls for all or any part of rush.

Several other rush innovations for earlier in the fall were also considered by the IFC. A proposal for holding informal open houses in fraternity sections on three Saturday or Sunday afternoons in the fall is now being considered by the individual fraternities. It will be brought to a vote next Tuesday night.

Another option vote defeated a proposal to hold a large social function in the fall which would include all fraternities and interested freshmen.

The IFC Academic Restriction Committee discussed a revision in the policy of extending bids. Any fraternity in serious academic trouble cannot extend a bid to a freshman who is also in academic trouble.

New policies ok'd for frosh English

English 2 will offer a revised format to the class of '71. Thirteen-weekly section meetings in a variety of course offerings have been approved by the English Department and the UFC to replace the present English 2 course, which includes uniform section study of British and American poetry and drama.

A student may choose a course in prose fiction, concentrating on themes and forms of 19th and 20th century novels. He may opt to study themes, technical aspects and forms of poetry or to study drama.

A study of the epic form, convention, theme, and image of man, both classical and modern, will be offered.

An option is provided for several seminars, each limited to 12 qualified students, although these are not anticipated for next year. These students would investigate in depth topics on the nature of literature, as society and the novel, poetry and experience, the personal epic, literature and psychology, or the moderns theatre.

Although English 1 will continue the pattern of lecture, section meeting, and conference, reading assignments will be reduced and writing problems will be emphasized.

The number of sections on each topic will be determined by the number of students and instructors interested in the specific topic.

Brinkley to speak on admissions

William L. Brinkley, Director of Undergraduate Admissions at Duke since 1946, will hold an informal discussion in the Psychology Building, Tuesday, May 16, at 7:30 P.M. under the auspices of the Major Speakers Committee. His topic will be Admissions Policy — Past, Present, and Future. After more than twenty years' service to his alma mater (A.B. 1944), Brinkley is leaving Duke next year to assume a similar position at Johns Hopkins. The Major Speakers Committee felt that Brinkley could provide interesting insight into the way Duke students and Duke University have changed over the past two decades and that the Duke of the future might be like.

Brinkley has held many offices in organizations related to admissions counseling. He has been a member of the Executive of the Association of College Admissions Counseling, a member of the Committee on Entrance Procedures and Practices of the College Entrance Examination Board, President of the Southern Association of College Admissions Counselors, and President of the North Carolina Association of College Entrants and Admission Office.

A question and answer period will follow the opening address by Brinkley.
