

Greater role for students is goal of AS DU this year

By MARK LOVINGTON
"Unilateral decisions which affect students and are made without giving them a voice in the process are unacceptable to me as they should be to every student."

This statement by AS DU President Jon Kinney promises an active year for the AS DU Legislature.

Concerning campus issues ranging from labor certification to curriculum reform, Kinney hopes to see the Legislature adopt major policies rather than merely react to a specific crisis or condition. An increase in student power in areas traditionally controlled by the Administration is a vital part of Kinney's campaign for greater student involvement.

government has in some instances been less than wholehearted, toward a drive for greater student power. But he is sure that his program will need the support of a strong, efficient and active legislature.

KINNEY ENVISIONS a heavy emphasis on the committee system to do a large repetition of the Legislature's work. Ideas would be refined and small details worked out in committee meetings.

The Legislature then would be able to concentrate on more important, general issues. There are now five AS DU Legislative committees, but there was not enough activity to determine their worth or function.

There was, however, a good deal of haggling in general session on points that might have been more effectively dealt with in a smaller group.

An important aspect of more student voice in the decision making process of the University is greater student representation on University-wide committees, such as the University Policy and Planning Advisory Committee.

Kinney may refuse to appoint students to committees if he feels their presence to be token or perfunctory. Students in merely advisory positions is unacceptable to Kinney. He points out that they can advise without being a member of a group.

KINNEY FORESEES the drawing up of a scholarly paper describing theoretically the role of the student in the decision making process of the University's students' Bill of Rights. AS DU could then work for a larger voice within the framework of such a guide.

Given a larger say or not, what are some of the things that Kinney would like to see come from the Legislature? On most issues, he chose to be vague or say nothing at all at this time.

He promised a major statement concerning residential housing and a discrimination in his Convocation address on Wednesday. He hoped to have a proposal concerning the National Student Association after talking to AS DU members who attended the NSA convention this summer. Details of his plan for educational reform will await further developments, such as the release later in the year of the Curriculum Study Report.

HE WAS EMPHATIC in one area. "I think AS DU should recognize Local 77 in its drive for recognition. We should support in principle the right of the Union to hold elections for representation for any group of employees. If need be we could provide poll observers in such an election."

In effecting rules changes, especially social rules directly affecting the students, Kinney hopes to work with the Deans and not under or against them. "I hope the Deans will be open to changes and will not predetermine, for instance that there will be no changes in women's hours this year. Our discussions should be based on reason and logic within the present situation and not on past precedent. The Deans don't seem to realize that we want to improve the University as much as they do."

KINNEY HAS some criticisms of the legislature. They should, he thought, get to know each other better. "If we need more retreats like we had last year, then we should have them," he said. He also felt that the legislature need to exert more influence with House governments and individuals. "They should be leaders outside of the meetings. It's ridiculous to vote to back Symposium, for instance, and then to end our support by giving it some money."

Kinney emphasized his confidence in the judgment of the rest of the AS DU Executive branch. However, he is running the show and an increase in student power and the ultimate success of the first year of unified student government at the University rests largely in his hands.

The Chronicle wants you

DO YOU WANT TO WRITE?

Or sell ads . . . or take pictures . . . or anything?

Positions are now open in every department at the Chronicle:

Sports, News, Photography, Advertising, Feature

Come see us Tuesday, 3-4:30 p.m.

Chronicle office—308 Flowers Building

"STUDENTS HAVE the right to determine their own destiny," he says. Along with this right goes the responsibility both to see the opportunity and create the opportunity for constructive action."

Kinney is yet unsure of the Deans' reaction, whose acceptance of the new

Panelists (from left) Tiryakin, Strobel, Mahoney and van Klyuwe

Challenge freshman to participate

Panel challenges freshmen to question, be 'actors'

"In 20 years, we will not have an American society as we have known it in the past. I'm really deadly serious."

Dr. Edward Tiryakin, sociology professor, made this prediction to freshmen in Baldwin Auditorium, Sunday night.

This threatened deterioration would happen, he said, unless . . . at least 10 per cent of you dedicate your four years to developing all the knowledge and skills necessary to restore the wholeness of American society which . . . has been transformed into a society where people have complete distaste for society itself and want nothing but personal kicks."

EARLIER, Dr. Robert van Klyuwe,

English professor, had labeled the same audience mostly "privileged, conservative, white, Anglo-Saxon, protestant, Southern, intelligent, lazy, golden Duke students."

Occasion for the remarks was a faculty panel discussion on the controversial state of the university today. It focused on "Today's Undergraduates in the University."

Also taking part in the discussion were Edward Mahoney of philosophy and Howard Strobel of chemistry.

The panel spoke before the freshman class and several hundred supporters. They warned the entering freshman to be prepared for challenge.

"Those who accept all they are told and leave it unchallenged are hardly worthy of the name 'university student'," Dr. Mahoney said.

STROBEL TOOK a different tack from his three colleagues. While they dwelled on the role of the university in broad definition, he spoke in terms of professional training.

"Universities must serve now more than ever to prepare students for careers," he said.

Van Klyuwe, speaking first, rapped the "walking dropout" and went on to urge students to "grapple with yourself and with us." One phrase could sum up the topics of the speakers, "grapple with yourself" would do it.

The need for students to be concerned and involved was the major topic of the panel. "Today's undergraduates" were urged not to dwell in "ivory towers of knowledge."

"IT'S EASIER to live among students who don't challenge teachers and dismay deans," Van Klyuwe said. "But a good university is a restless place."

A university is not "simply a glorified high school — more deans and fewer bees," Mahoney told an enthusiastic audience. It is a place where a student can "increase his social conscience as a human being."

Strobel varied slightly from the end of his speech. "The impatience of working toward narrow ends is spoiled off by other factors," he concluded.

Tiryakin termed the university career as "very crucial years of transition."

CALLING "THE UNIVERSITY" a "foster cocoon" he said it is "somewhere between a biological parent and a commercial outfit."

Before the end of four years, he told the freshmen, you will quite likely find your old self dying. "Your old values will be changed, he said, and may not be replaced immediately."

The university, he noted, must rescue society from the "I'll get what I can and to hell with the rest of society" attitude."

Fraternities lie came up for both attack and defense Sunday night.

THE CULTURE and diversity of a university are "impeded by the unfortunate continuation of fraternities and sororities," Mahoney charged.

Tiryakin replied later by saying that "fraternities and sororities are symbols of the kinship of the university." He spoke in favor of such kinship.

Van Klyuwe summed up the panel's major advice to the class of 1971 when he replied to a question from the audience: "The action is where you are if you're an actor."

New discussion lounge

hits TRUE topics

By ALAN SHUSTERMAN
Typical and Real University Education arrived on the Duke campus Saturday night as a turned-on discussion began in the TRUE formerly FRED lounge.

The lounge has not been silent since. TRUE, Typical and Real University Education, is sponsoring a twenty-four-hour "opportunity to express yourself" during Orientation Week, as the initial phase of a continuing program of supplemental academic challenge.

In the lounge, located across from the Oak Room, informal discussion drifted through such topics as the Vietnam War, civil rights and riots, curriculum reform, drug use, the search for personal identity, sex and morality, and popular cinema and music.

MOST OF THE early participants discovered the lounge by chance. The Monday stayed for several hours. One freshman remarked, "I haven't learned so much in years."

Several persons expressed amazement at the fact that they enjoyed spending an entire Saturday night in serious discussion.

A SOPHOMORE called TRUE "the most exciting educational opportunity I have seen yet at Duke."

THE LOUNGE is a preliminary portion of the Typical and Real University Education (formerly FRED, Free and Real Educational Discovery) which will continue throughout the semester. "Depth" discussion groups will organize later around topics which interest students and members of the faculty.

(Continued on Page 4)

"The Action is where you are if you are an actor."
—Dr. Robert Van Klyuwe

"Those who accept all they are told and leave it unchallenged are hardly worth the name 'university student.'"
—Dr. Edward Mahoney

"Universities must serve now more than ever to prepare students for careers."
—Dr. Howard Strobel

Fifth Decade campaign, two years old, surpasses $66 million mark

THE FIFTH DECADE campaign, launched in 1965 as "the most ambitious fund-raising drive yet undertaken by a university," has received two-thirds of its $102 million goal.

With $66 million pledged or in hand, David Ross, newly-appointed Director of Development, insists "we are on schedule."

Most of the funds, about $27 million, come from government which is expected to give almost half that amount in 1967.

The Duke Endowment, operating independently of Duke University, has given $14 million in specific grants above its yearly allotment to the University.

Contributions from individuals totaled about $5 million. Foundations and corporations gave about $9 million. Church groups and others donated $8 million.

DUKE IS now concentrating on a campaign to meet a Ford Foundation grant which provides $8 million if Duke raises $32 million from private, that is non-government sources. Over $9 million of that amount has been raised.

Duke was selected for the grant in June, 1966, one year after the Fifth Decade program began. MacGeorge Bundy, president of the Ford Foundation, said at the time he hoped the grant would challenge Duke to "attain parity of educational quality with leading institutions in other regions." Because of the offer from Ford, the University extended its deadline one year to 1969.

The fund-raising campaign has entered its second stage, according to Ross. Duke has opened its area campaigns for Special and Key Gifts. This means the University will now concentrate on getting contributions below $100,000 in 19

THE FIFTH DECADE program, actually an overall effort to raise $167 million in ten years, is aimed at increased construction, improved faculty salaries, increased enrollment, and a broader base for the University's finances.

The Master Campus Plan for the Fifth Decade shows a new campus between East and West, consisting of a new administration building, a rathskollar, University center, and other buildings.

$75 MILLION of the projected $102 million is allotted for construction. Most of the buildings to be completed by 1968, the first phase of the program, are underway. A notable exception is the Engineering building. "Grants have been slow in coming in for it," according to Ross.

$15 million of the goal will be used for added University endowment. $13 million will go for current budget support.

THE PROPOSED ATTEMPTS to increase faculty salaries are part of an overall plan to maintain a faculty salary scale that will qualify for a "AA" rating at both minimum and average levels of the AAUP scale. The greatest increases in salaries will take place in the fields of engineering, humanities, geology, and medicine.

Ross, who will co-ordinate much of the campaign, served as assistant to Thomas Broce, whom he replaced. He is a 1960 graduate of Ohio Wesleyan with a major in business administration.

Ross formerly served in the public relations department of Ohio Wesleyan.

Cambridge Inn to aid 'escapees'

By MAC HENRY
A new excuse to escape studying has arrived. Cambridge Inn, the branch of Dining Hall Director Ted Minah will open Wednesday night.

The snack center will be open every evening from 7:30 until midnight.

On entering, you will encounter a large open refrigerator which can be "raided" for delights such as sandwiches, cakes, pies, and eclairs.

You can prepare a mix shake on the shake machine, draw some "draft" root beer from a barrel or reach for soft drinks, tea, or coffee. Soup and ice cream are also available in this self service area. There will also be a staffed section from which charcoal broiled hamburgers, hotdogs, sandwiches or pizza can be bought.

Each day a different sandwich, to be warmed on the electronic radar range, will be featured. The pizza will be made there daily.

After acquiring your snacks it will no longer be necessary to hunt desperately for a table or return to your room. The Gothic Dining Hall is being decorated to feature an "attractive, intimate atmosphere for friendly chats."

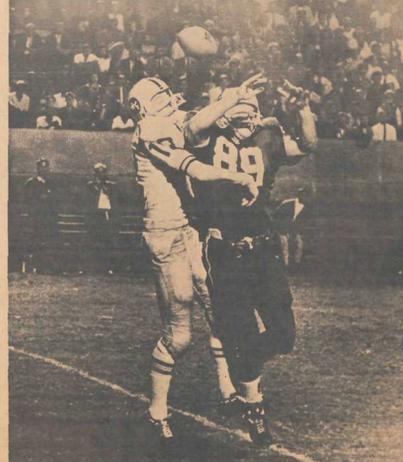

Deep red draperies are being hung and the chairs are being re-upholstered in red. Over the entrance to the dining hall a 12' x 9' banner will hang featuring the University Crest on a gold field.

In addition, there are fourteen impressive limestone carvings of the coats of arms of the colleges of Cambridge University, which have been painted in authentic colors by Mr. Minah's daughter.

Mr. Minah hopes that Cambridge Inn will prove popular due to its casual atmosphere and abundant tables (which the Dope Shop does not offer).

"I hope," he remarked "that it will be not unlike raiding the kitchen at home." It will be, providing your home is Buckingham Palace.

Tight-end Henry Carter catches an AI Woodall bomb in Duke's 31-13 runaway victory over Wake Forest Saturday night (Details, page 3) (photo by Don Goodkin)

Editorials

A MUST expenditure

Possibly by now men are fed up with traditions and pseudo-traditions and the chronicle call-to-arms about the afro-cloze. Well, there is one genuine Duke tradition that the Chronicle can endorse heartily. No call-to-arms this time, mind your arms (and torso) 204 Flowers from 10:50 on Tuesday and be fitted for a "Duke Blazer." Take some of that money you have to burn and put it in a real blazer, that's our recommendation. With this investment you will have a blazer with a navy blue wave in the rising tide of conformity and be well on your way to being lost in the shuffle of IBM cards.

Since the University seal is stitched into the pocket and is supposed to be used only on "official documents" this will make your coat an official document, too, which is what you are here to get, even though this one is not made of sheepskin.

We understand that in order to increase the popularity and usefulness of the blazer, the pocket will come in a reversible zip-on model with a predominantly red madras back. This option, we are assured, is quite reasonably priced. It would seem a perfect thing for the Duke gentleman who wants to really let himself go once in a while in a responsible manner.

Activism in relief

We returned from the faculty panel discussions last night with one indelible impression. The class of '71 has a real interest in hearing about student activism, but at this point neither wants to be pressured into it nor counseled against using it when expedient. We are interested in seeing the class coalesce within a community which will emerge with the return of upperclassmen and daily classes. One issue which we suspect will capture the class' interest and inclination toward student activism is women's rules.

Student concern about women's issues was ripe when Paula Phillips '67 was elected chairman of the East Judicial Board over a year ago. Much of her platform discussed changes which are now in the famed "Gray Pages" of the College Handbook. Discussions on a changing women's board were held last year, and was instituted last February. The main body of revisions became effective this fall, and was the result of long negotiations between the Board and then acting Dean Ellen Huckabee.

We understand that Dean Ball has called this year one "first and evaluation"—no comprehensive examination of the whole system. The Deans' staff will be looking this year for student reaction to the new extension of freedom, for commitment to "responsible" action within the defined system. They will likely be taking specific areas as indicators of campus support of the present honor system and new more lenient rules. Firm support must precede consideration of further revision.

One indicator used will likely be the noise level of the women's dorms. Central to any extension of night hours, the consideration shown those who prefer "civilized" sleeping schedules will weigh heavily with the East Deans.

Another indicator is the information gathered by the house counselors on at-large. Are women signing in and out properly? With more men off campus, is off campus social life getting out of hand? Are women living under the honor system?

A third and potentially overly studied indicator is our dorm-of-experience, the Graduate Center. A result of the population explosion of 18-year-olds on East, the Grad Center colony of 56 women is unique because they carry keys to their dorm for night entry. As some key system must come with further exension of hours, the success of the Grad Center system will be watched carefully. We hope that little emphasis will be placed on this "experiment" as an experience with educational living. The initial reaction of the men of the Graduate Center confirms our thought that this experience will be close to irrelevant. There's something unique about single dorms.

At the same time that no complete re-evaluation of the women's rules is possible, there is still possibility for review and revision of specifics. Dean Ball has written concerned upperclassmen of her willingness to give immediate consideration to suggested changes. We see two areas that might receive favorable treatment, use this fall, with such a cooperative attitude prevalent.

First is revision of East's drinking rule to bring it 1967ward, on the model of West's system. Originally put off from last spring's comprehensive rules evaluation, the primary block to swift revision of policy are proof of campus support for drinking in the dorms, and a report due from a University Policy and Planning Advisory Committee a month late in October. The report is waiting the return of silling University Council Bryson.

The second area for movement this fall is further revision of the special leave procedure. Now standing is a clause that women must have continuous permission which won't be given to sign out to a hotel in the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area. We have confidence in any Duke student's ingenuity in avoiding problems here. But a rule which merely requires the expenditure of a few more gallons of gas to provide for the one who wants privacy to get it in this way is in a special class of rule.

Wright Tisdale, chairman of the Board of Trustees, commented to us last November that he saw little point in having "a set of rules, for young people mostly, that he would like to see enforced, so that the young people grow up in an environment of breaking the law or breaking the rules. This is most unsound."

The Woman's College Regulations come close to comparing favorably to Tisdale's philosophy. In the areas in which more work needs to be done, we expect the freshman women to nurture the atmosphere now and during their whole four years at the University the atmosphere conducive to change.

Editor's Note: Tran Van Dinh, Vietnamese author, columnist and lecturer will write a regular weekly column this year for the Chronicle Press Service. The Chronicle will reprint it as space is available.

The columnist fought against the French during the Resistance War. He later joined the South Vietnamese Foreign Service and has served in various Asian and Latin American countries. His last post was acting Ambassador of South Vietnam to the United States.

A present he lives in Washington, where he is a correspondent for the Saigon Post. He says, however, that his dispatches are rarely published, as they are usually censored by the Saigon government.

By TRAN VAN DINH

Politics in South Vietnam in the recent years have always had elements of a tragedy-comedy.

As the main theme of the play is "democracy," the interested audience "democracy" the actors have to wear a mask to suit the purpose. The mask applied "democracy" would take place, over 80 per cent of the people would vote. Washington's strategy for success until the stage collapses leaving dead bodies and broken furniture on the scene.

For the seventh time (two Presidential elections in 1955 and 1960, 1959, 1963, 1966) South Vietnam was divided into "democratic" and "communist" Geneva Agreements, the third election in South Vietnam went to the polls. On October 2, 1966, 8,024 polling stations, 8,024 polling stations, proceeded to cast their votes to elect a President and 40 senators. The number 14 registered voters had jumped from 1,850,000 one month to the present 5,820,251.

"We ARE profane in Vietnam, but not that profane," said Tran Van Hoang, a civilian candidate who finished fourth in the election. General Nguyen Van Thieu, the incumbent state and military candidate, was a tough act to follow. Some soldiers have been given five voting cards.

The vote was given first eleven ballots, one for each presidential ticket, two for each senatorial ticket (eleven a symbol) then 48 other ballots, one for each senatorial ticket, 40 senatorial tickets, 40 senatorial tickets for presidential, 40 for senatorial. He hardly could do that fast a reader's ticket did not care. He looked at the list of candidates who will be around in 1967, the next year after the election day.

GENERAL Nguyen Ngoc can, the chief of police often called a reader's ticket, had declared on August 22, 1967, "I am a policeman who is stationed in the United States. I do not care for the country. As the national police are the police in close contact with the lowest echelon, there were to be no vote, and when you vote, how to vote, and when you vote." (Saigon Post, August 23, 1967.)

EVEN WITH these precautions, the military junta was not sure. Dictators everywhere and at all times are afraid of their people or even of their own shadow.

The Chronicle Forum Experiment in topical education

Editor's Note: The Chronicle Forum is open to any member of the Duke community wishing to express an opinion on a current issue. Formal members of the Chronicle Press Service are invited to submit letters to the editor. Prospective contributors should contact the editor.

By TUPP BLACKWELL

"Too many people go through life like some people go through revolving door — on somebody else's push."

"Money can't buy poverty."

"Someday the day will come when the day won't be a peace day!"

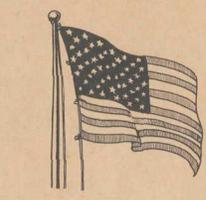

These are quotes 'TRUE?' They are part of the verbiage that's come out of the TRUE lounge in the past few weeks. What can people doing there 24 hours a day? Talking? Topical and Real University Education is exploring self-education as a means of stimulating thought outside and beyond the classroom.

WHY OUTSIDE the classroom? Unfortunately, students and faculty have found it difficult to create stimulating education in a lecture situation. The recent establishment of ASUO Academic Affairs Committee, the committee on curriculum review headed by Dr. Robert Krueger, and the fund for the Department of Education at Duke are evidence of the widespread dissatisfaction on campus.

The TRUE lounge is an introduction to the Reactions continued: Tragi-comedy

"We will not tolerate violence, no matter by whom it is done, nor under what slogan, or"

—President Johnson, during the Detroit riots

On the even of the election day, two rallies in Saigon, the Than Chung (Sacred Bell) and Song (Light) were closed. Three weeks earlier, another rally, the Dan Chung (People) was shut down. All these despite the fact that officially generalship was abolished and the Constitution guarantees the freedom of the press.

Declared General Thieu when asked about the closure of the newspapers: "Even in a democracy, one has the right to suppress newspapers that add one's enemies."

Richard Chief of Police Loan: "Democracy is fine for the politicians, but me, I favor national discipline." (Washington Post, September 3, 1967)

General Ky much earlier had been more specific on "democracy" and had stated that he "might respond militarily" if a civilian whose politics he disagreed with won the election. "In any democratic country, you have the right to disagree with the views of others" (New York Times, May 14, 1967). And on May 27, 1967 General Ky repeated "If any opposition ticket" in South Vietnam's presidential election was won by trickery, we will overthrow it."

Who else in South Vietnam could use tricks but the junta itself? General Ky's dream came at the time when, at his inauguration, a "military committee" was formed to serve as a kitchen cabinet for the Thieu-Ky ticket wins. In the most unlikely case of its ticket, using the committee would serve to overthrow the civilian elected President.

All these in a necessary precautions and threats were made and made even when possible computers were used in advance for the run.

General Duyn Van Minh (Big Minh) former chief of state and Dr. An Truong Thanh, former Minister of Economy and Finance who planned to run on a peace platform, were banned from running.

His parallel analysis of the campus activists came again aided by first-hand experience, was incisive of "confrontation politics," he said: "A distinguishing tactical of the 'political activist' is to pick an whole scene," Ambassador Lodge declared.

The results of the elections: 83 per cent of people voted (as predicted by the U.S. Embassy in Saigon). The Thieu-Ky military ticket won by 25 per cent of the votes. Already seven out of ten civilian candidates have lodged protest of fraud with the Constituent Assembly which will have until October 2 to certify the validity of the elections. Dr. Phan Khac Son, the civilian candidate who finished third and who is also the chairman of the Constituent issue and confront the power structure as dramatically as possible. It is, in fact, this orientation to specific issues which is the genius of the new student politics. Generally speaking, ideology is suspect among leadership. The issue-by-issue protest becomes, therefore, a rallying point for a loose coalition of groups. Occasionally one sees some strange bed-fellows.

Price: a change of heart?

CRITICISMS of both the hippies and the hippies' dropping out is a "batter and frequently "negative" gesture. Activists' campaigns often in solve "intellectual process" and often "ill-advised." Both groups he criticized for providing few, if any, alternatives.

Keeping alive a current administration custom of making the most significant changes of the evening temporarily, Price suspended his criticism of the issues of the time, you will be a revolution.

There were three elements in Price's analysis of student political activism which have created problems in student-administration relations in the past.

The first disturbing element was his reference to the activists' "attack" on the University. He has the tendency to confuse sometimes of University policy with attack on the University. This confused attitude can lead to a more virulent defense of the status quo by the grounds that the institution itself is under attack.

Throughout his discussion Dean Price made constant references to the "coercive tactics" used by the student leadership. In this is a hint of the instant distrust of any student group that has become a hallmark of his attitude in the past.

The third unsettling element in the address was the statement that the activists who complain of being treated as computer cards by the administrative apparatus are displaying themselves imperiously. The Dean came to the podium Friday evening to display scars from his unsuccessful, often personally-fainted fight with student leaders over ASUO.

Although these three elements are more than vague reminders of last year's bitter student-administration impasse, the fact that they are now at least covered in more

Assembly' complained that in many, many areas, his own and established the turnout at only 10 per cent. In some communities it is not going to change the situation anyway.

O. Curtis Price (to Washington): a Saigon lawyer, Mr. Truong Dinh Dzn who contacted the platform of peace and anti-military junta in the clearest terms possible, finished second with 17 per cent of the votes.

WASHINGTON and Saigon do not think only victory but they expect "representative, democratic government" to emerge even with the old cast. But the September 3 elections is only the first act of the show.

More to come. There will be in the coming weeks a deadly struggle between General Thieu, No. 1, and Vice Air Marshall Ky, No. 2 who will try lawyer. Ky is not going to be a figurehead as a vice president. He is the platform of the Premier and the Air Command with the profits in powers provided by these two functions. But Thieu, cunning and less talkative, may strike first.

In the final act of the show, there will be a long attack by S. S. and its suffocating military might against a badly growing and dead bodies and turned villages of a deserted Vietnam.

Letters

The Chronicle encourages its readers to voice their opinions through letters to the editor. All submissions should be limited to 300 words and will be subject to editing. All writers should include their names, addresses, phone numbers. Names will be withheld upon request. Being letters to 308 Flowers or mail them to Box 4066 Duke Station.

reasonable terms is in itself enouraging.

THOSE FEW upperclassmen in the audience who were familiar with Dean Price's comments and activities last year were curious as to why he chose this particular occasion to extend the verbal olive branch. Two answers most likely present a genuine move towards a more objective approach on the part of the Deans' staff, Friday evening simply being the first opportunity to present. Or the speech may have been a political statement of past administration position meant more for the ears of freshmen unfamiliar with the political realities at Duke than for vocabulary and suspicious upperclassmen.

The remarks by the administration representatives at Convergence have been well may reveal the true implications of Dean Price's address.

Patronize Our Advertisers

AUTHENTIC UNIVERSITY STYLES

BILLS MAILED HOME

OR STUDENT CHARGE ACCOUNTS INVENTED

THE YOUNG MEN'S SHOP

The Duke Chronicle

The Student Press of Duke University

The opinions expressed on this page are not necessarily those of either the administration of the University or a majority of the student body.

Editor: Steve Johnson
Managing Editor: Alan Ray
Business Manager: Mike Shahan
Coad Business Manager: Pam Graves
Circulation Manager: Erik Anderson
STAFF:
Associate Editors: Peg McCart, Jim McCullough, Mark Pinsky
Assistant Editor: Dave Shaffer
Sports Editor: Mike Pounset
Head Photographer: Bruce Vance
Asst. Managing Editors: Bob Ashley, Alan Shusterman, Bob Wise

TODAY'S STAFF: Don Goodkin, Fran Hays, Mac Henry, Armita Stone.

Copyright © 1967 by The Duke University Chronicle. All rights reserved. Printed and published by the Duke University Chronicle, Box 4066, Durham, North Carolina 27708. The Chronicle office, 308 Flowers.

The Fifth Quarter

with Mike Pousner Sports Editor

Devils clobber Deacons with 3rd quarter TD's

Traditionally fine

Note: The following column originally scheduled to run in Friday's freshman orientation issue was taken out so that the Chronicle could adequately preview the Duke-Wake Forest game for frosh. A post-game analysis of Saturday's "massacre" will be published here in Wednesday's column for the benefit of late-arriving upperclassmen.

Welcome, freshman, to a school that combines excellence in academics with a fine athletic tradition to an extent rarely found in schools of higher learning today.

There are no athletic dorms at Duke. Nor is there a physical education major. Furthermore our "jocks" (as we lovingly call them) take no more so-called crisp courses than your upper-class buddy intent on exiting the war in Vietnam. Our athletes, while they might at times seem to lead a more enjoyable life than most students, have to struggle just as hard to make grades.

Despite these limitations that would seemingly hurt us in recruiting against some of our less intellectually inclined sister institutions, Duke has still managed to carry itself very well in inter-collegiate athletic competition over the years. The record of the Devil football team ranks in the all-time collegiate op. 20. The basketball squad has achieved unparalleled success over the last decade.

THE PARADOX inherent in these two sets of facts is an understandable when one considers the emphasis at Duke on the student-athlete. The athletes have to meet the same admission standards as his fellow student. And he has to spend a great deal of the time away from practice and games in study or he will find himself falling further and further behind his less muscular counterpart in the freshman class. These jocks who think that Duke is a school where athletes can come to class once a month and be greeted by sighs from co-eds, gazes of awe from their male classmates and automatic "A's" from their teachers are soon gone. Of course, the athletes do get "paid." They get a four-year scholarship from DUAA. But they are certainly not as revered as on other campuses.

It is therefore encouraging to find that many athletes enroll at Duke for the very reason that this is such a fine school—they want to attend a college where they can get a good education and compete against major competition. In recruiting, our fine coaching staff informs the prospects of these facts, and resists the temptation of pressuring the boys into attending a school that they're not suited for.

The fruits of this emphasis on the student-athlete at Duke are many. Duke football and basketball stars have gone on to successful careers in many fields—seemingly worlds apart from those where the emphasis lies basically on brain. For example, Jay Buckley, a center on the 1963 NCAA runnerup basketball team has been employed by the federal government in scientific research in the field of nuclear physics; Jay Wilkinson, an unbelievable gifted halfback attended divinity school in preparation for a career in the ministry. In addition, several famous Duke players have made Sports Illustrated's "Silver Anniversary All-American" for success later in life.

And the tradition continues. Roger Hayes, quick defensive end on this year's squad is an Academic All-American. Bob Lasky, a tackle who doesn't resemble the kind of fellow you'd like to meet in a dark alley, carries a 3.8 average. Not bad for a prep school student.

This is not to say that every Duke athlete carries a "Bartlett's Familiar Quotations" strapped to the inside of his athletic supporter. But such statistics do furnish excellent evidence for the idea of the student-athlete at Duke.

AND WHEN these athletes can participate in a winning athletic program, a university is further blessed. For years, Wallace Wade's and Bill Murray's football squads were the scourge of the East Coast. Though the last four seasons have seen mediocrity emerge from the once great football tradition, there is evidence (take the Wake game, for instance) that the grid Dukes are prepared to make a resurgence as Tom Harp enters his second year as head coach.

And in basketball the Devils have really smuned. The Duke roundball team has finished in the Top Ten in seven of the last nine years, including two national second-place finishes. Such All-Americans as Art Heyman, Jeff Mullins, Jack Marin and Bob Verha have emerged from Coach Vic (say that name with reverence) Bubas' planning board.

Perhaps the idea of the scholar-athlete is best evident in the so-called "Duke minor sports." Duke has given few, if any, scholarships in baseball, golf, lacrosse and tennis. There are good reasons for this. Duke, a private institution, doesn't have the money to pour into these sports that some state schools do. But as athletic Director Eddie Cameron notes, "At Duke we try to get more students to participate in these sports." The emphasis is on trying to weed the professionalism out of these sports at the college level. Their participants practice hard, but not to the exclusion of bookwork.

Check the results, though. Duke might not annually lead the conference in overall sports success. But last year's golf team placed second in the conference. Baseball star Dick Groat and Ron Davis, Houston Astro outfielder, are two graduates of the team. Former world record miler Dave Sime, now a doctor, starred for the Duke tracksters.

Perhaps there is a place for the conscientious student in inter-collegiate sports after all. Maybe athletes can no longer examine the issue of the word and strive to make a name for themselves on more than their biceps. Maybe not. But in any event, it is an exciting feeling to attend a school where one can obtain a superior education and at the same time root for teams that compete successfully against less aesthetically-inspired universities.

—photo by Skip Coleman
Coach Tom Harp At victory dinner

Commentary Forked tongue

By MARK WASSERMAX
I decided to arrive early this year for the first Duke "home" game. Although I must admit to a certain degree of disgruntlement over the first five minutes of play and my initial glimpse of State's horrendously picturesque Carter Stadium, the evening was an enjoyable one.

There were many familiar scenes to warm one's heart. Al Cone has returned to haranguing the indifferent Duke cheering section after being redshirted for a year. Once again we were entertained by his bubbling female cohorts and their equally bubbling escorts. Once again the Devils have won their first contest and have brought joyous hopes to our easily excited student body.

There were, too, some new sights. The Duke line both ways looked the best it has in four years. The defensive secondary seems to be bearing fruit after some porous past performances. And last, but certainly not least, Duke played some wide-open football.

Yes, it was a good game, but the Devils as Coach Tom Harp will readily admit need plenty of more work.

DEVILS TAILS... "Gramps Ryan" was seen being tucked in early after 127 yards total offense, including an unbelievable catch. A good night's work. ... No ice packs for Al Woodall's arm a la baseball; don't want to cool off that arm at all. Soccer style kicking has come to Duke. There was Riesenfeld two years ago when he was asoph? I'd list the player's having birthdays this week, but I don't know any so I'll now hold my peace for awhile. ...

Here are pictures of action from Duke's 31-13 romp over Wake Forest, Saturday night. At right, photographer Don Goodkin captured one of the key plays of the game: tailback Pete Schaefer catches a TD pass from Al Woodall early in the third quarter. The Devils were leading only 10-7 and were in a fourth down situation when Woodall, rolling out from the four-yard line spotted his receiver in the corner of the end zone and hit him. Thus inspired, the Devils went on to tally two more touchdowns before the Deacons could score again.

At left, soph tailback Don Baglien stiffarms a would-be tackler on the way to a four-yard gain.

Duke blew several excellent early opportunities to score but used some surprising long-distance antics to overwhelm the inexperienced Deacons. Though the two teams were surprisingly even in the first down and rushing yardage statistics, the Devil's superiority in the air proved the deciding factor. Woodall and Larry Davis combined for nine completions for a very respectable total of 113 yards.

(Photos by Don Goodkin)

Subscribe Now
Durham Morning Herald

DECORATING?
The Downtown Gallery

1965
Chapel Hill St.
over Book Exchange

Extra point:

this Gant oxford... button-down... holds its press... permanently

Press [Not] throw away the iron—this colorful Gant oxford button-down (called Press) will hold its original pressed-in look—washing after washing. The fabric: Gant's own, ingenious blend of polyester and cotton. Tailored with singular precision—patently Gant. Trim Hugger body. In cinnamon, white and blue. About $9 at discerning stores.

GANT
SHIRTMAKERS

Sold at: THE COLLEGE SHOP / VAN STRAATEN'S / THALHIMERS

★ ASK ANY UPPERCLASSMAN

The Best Place to BUY and Sell Your Textbook Is

THE BOOK EXCHANGE

DOWNTOWN FIVE POINTS

Used and New Books for All Your Courses

BUY AND SELL AT

"The South's Largest and Most Complete Bookstore"

CHRONICLE CLASSIFIED

Duke Chronicle Classified Advertising Rates

3c per word 30c minimum per insertion Prepayment required

Copy Deadline

Two days prior to date of publication: bring copy to 303 Powers Building or mail Box 406, Duke Station, Durham, N. C. 27702

Help Wanted Male: Salesman with one previous million dollar experience for part time work M-F, 10:00-1:00. Adm. Exp. THE YOUNG MEN'S SHOP, Downtown, or North Gate.

Help Wanted: Anna Maria Pina House.

Two deans welcome freshmen to Duke

Dean Price speaks to men on "generational gap"

By BOB ASHLEY
If you are disturbed and think about the issues of the time, you will be a prepared man. This was the message of James L. Price, Dean of Trinity College, to incoming freshmen that Friday night in Page Auditorium.

Price, in an apparent change of emphasis this year, spoke for nearly 45 minutes on the "hippies" and political activist subcultures of American youth.

He told the freshman, "I hope that you men will be able to find a new style more compatible to your own objectives."

He spoke of "potent youth culture discontinuous with the organized society of adulthood" and said that the activist portion of this culture has an "obsession with power."

"Their refrain is the acquisition of power, wresting it from the power structure, surely there is a danger in their distrust of society — in their assumption that power is something that only if they obtain power can evil be eradicated."

"LOGICAL TOO," he asserted, "is their tendency to see most, if not all, issues in terms of polar viewpoints, and to regard dissenting student protesters, who happen to side with "the enemy" on a particular question, as "sell-outs."

"Reliance will come to be placed more on persuasion than the longer run than on confrontation in the shorter run. There are no encouraging signs that this may be happening."

SUMMING UP his observations on activism, Price told the freshmen "If your goal is to change society before society changes you, then you must transform your private alienations into truly private public aspirations; refuse to be dehumanized by the 'real world' and by the constraints of your convictions, but also affirm a better one, a world inspired by a vision of a good life more human and humane, beyond material prosperity and gadgetry."

In contrast to the activists, "hippies try to 'drop out,' and to 'disengage' themselves from the world. For the hippies to be truly alive and human in today's world," he said, "they must have the courage to drop out, not disengage themselves from whatever natural or chemical means necessary to emigrate themselves from the world, or to slough off its intolerable demands."

"The political activist on the other hand, and to truly alive and human in today's world, a man must become involved directly in the social and political arena of the real world."

"Both groups reject the establishment, but the responses to that society, and their strategies, seem to me to differ widely."

In first speech Friday night

MARGARET BALL
More than yesterday

'Happening' set Friday

One of the innovations in the Freshman Week schedule this year is the "Block Party Happening" at 6:45 p.m. Friday evening after the traditional "Church Night" program.

The idea behind the "happening" is wrapped up in the history of the University Christian Movement, which began last year as an attempt to merge the goals and resources of the denominational church groups on campus.

The new feature of the program this year is the "happening" open to all members of the University community and assigned to introduce UCA's methods of operation.

Although details were not made available to the press, indications are that such things as demonstrations, picketing and dramatics will be included. Anyone with a grievance is invited to make a sign (such as "FIGHT Militarism") and carry it in the mock picket line.

"Church Night" will last until around 8:30 p.m., or "until everyone goes home," according to Tom Raper, who is in charge of the project for UCA.

"Church Night" has traditionally been the night which the denominational church groups held open houses for their freshmen. As in the past, this year the denominational activities begin at 5 p.m. and most will include a supper.

'Opportunities for women today' discussed by Dean Ball

By ARIMINTA STONE

"Modern Woman" has become one of the first victims of automation," Margaret Ball, Dean of the Women's College, told East freshmen in Baldwin Auditorium Friday night.

"Modern Woman has choices about what she will do in her spare time that her grandfather never dreamed of," Dean Ball said, referring to the effects of automation in the role of the woman as housekeeper.

Dean Ball talked of 'Objectives, Priorities and Values. She told the group that she had asked the questions which she now presented to them at a senior banquet in 1964.

"She urged them to develop a system of values "which you will be willing to defend against all comers because you have thought them out." Would they put a system of values which she asked, that they would be willing to share with their children?

"I urge you," Dean Ball said, "to consider these objectives, priorities and values in the next four years and produce affirmative answers."

ircular and extra-curricular activities she told the freshmen that their courses might make heavy demands on their time.

She told the students that last semester's broadening of rules policies offered them a greater degree of freedom than any freshman class before them.

She told her audience that although most of their values were probably already established before they came to college, exposure to new sets of values might bring them to "feel hard" but theoretically and practically work out.

She urged them to develop a system of values "which you will be willing to defend against all comers because you have thought them out." Would they put a system of values which she asked, that they would be willing to share with their children?

"I urge you," Dean Ball said, "to consider these objectives, priorities and values in the next four years and produce affirmative answers."

Slavic department sets new courses

The Department of Slavic Languages will offer three new courses this fall.

They will be 179, 20th Century Russian Prose, MF 293, 225, Leo Tolstoy, TH 24; and 233, Ivan Turgenev, T 24.

All three courses will offer three semester hours credit.

Course 179 will be a textual analysis of Russian Prose since the turn of the century. Two years of Russian or instructor's permission are prerequisite.

Course 225 will be a study of Tolstoy's life and works, 233 will deal with Turgenev's novels, short stories and drama.

Government-backed

Loan plan faces opposition

WASHINGTON (CP)—A recommendation that the federal government establish a new loan program to help undergraduates pay for their education faces stiff opposition from two powerful education associations.

If adopted, the plan, proposed by a White House advisory panel, could drastically alter the present system of financing American higher education.

The proposal calls for the establishment of an Educational Opportunity Bank authorized to borrow money at going government rates. The bank would lend money to any undergraduate college or other postsecondary student for financing his education in return for an agreement by the student to pay back a small percentage of his annual income for 30 to 40 years after graduation.

Colleges and the Association of State Colleges and Universities. The two associations represent more than 300 institutions of higher education enrolling more than half of all U. S. students. An official for the American Association of State Colleges also opposed the proposal.

Preliminary estimates indicate the bank could be self-sustaining if it charged borrowers 1 per cent on their gross income over 30 years for each $3,000 borrowed, thus, for example, a student who borrowed $2,000 a year for four years of college, or a total of $8,000, and earned $10,000 in some subsequent year would pay $266 that year, or $22 a month.

The panel said a borrower would have the option at any time of withdrawing from the plan by paying, in a lump sum, the amount borrowed, plus interest compounded at 6 percent.

Colleges and the Association of State Colleges and Universities. The two associations represent more than 300 institutions of higher education enrolling more than half of all U. S. students. An official for the American Association of State Colleges also opposed the proposal.

Preliminary estimates indicate the bank could be self-sustaining if it charged borrowers 1 per cent on their gross income over 30 years for each $3,000 borrowed, thus, for example, a student who borrowed $2,000 a year for four years of college, or a total of $8,000, and earned $10,000 in some subsequent year would pay $266 that year, or $22 a month.

The panel said a borrower would have the option at any time of withdrawing from the plan by paying, in a lump sum, the amount borrowed, plus interest compounded at 6 percent.

Language Lab Problems Student expresses dismay

VIET NAM is going to get worse, and in three or four years we will be doing the same thing somewhere else — there are four or five major candidates. Inflation will rock the economic structure.

"The psychedelic thing has already won, As Timothy Leary says, too many people have already tried it and liked it. And the gap between the generations will widen. The old people won't be able to understand our generation at all."

Still, Bob contends that his decision to move to Canada was not political.

"Personal freedom is the reason I came up here. I want to have the right to say no to people. I've got better things to do than be used like a robot-killer dog in the Army. No one has the right to tell me to go drop nukes on people. I want the right to run my own life."

Canada exile is alternate to draft

By ROGER RAPOPORT

The Colgate Press Service (CPSS) modern woman plan to fill her time with golf, social rounds, clubs and some intellectual fare? Should she listen to her father saying "at least earn a teaching certificate and worst comes to worst, you can earn a living?"

"Four years are not enough to exhaust the excitement of Duke's curriculum," Dean Ball said. In addition to co-curricular and extra-curricular activities she told the freshmen that their courses might make heavy demands on their time.

HE CAREFULLY weighed the alternative methods of avoiding a military draft. He would not take C.O. status because of his demeaning. He has no intention of operating with the military system in any way.

"The other route was jail — up to five years and $10,000 for failing to report for induction. A long-standing pact between the U.S. and Canadian governments prohibits his extradition.

"From up here," says Bob, "American really looks like it's going nuts." In fact he goes so far as to claim that the United States is "on its way to a collective nervous breakdown."

An armchair analyst, he gives half a dozen reasons for projecting a national crash.

the Air Force in April. "My father and I gave up discussing Viet Nam, it's useless."

HE CAREFULLY weighed the alternative methods of avoiding a military draft. He would not take C.O. status because of his demeaning. He has no intention of operating with the military system in any way.

"The other route was jail — up to five years and $10,000 for failing to report for induction. A long-standing pact between the U.S. and Canadian governments prohibits his extradition.

"From up here," says Bob, "American really looks like it's going nuts." In fact he goes so far as to claim that the United States is "on its way to a collective nervous breakdown."

An armchair analyst, he gives half a dozen reasons for projecting a national crash.

Bob finds Canada "far more relaxed and less hysterical" than the U.S. Canada has no

VIET NAM is going to get worse, and in three or four years we will be doing the same thing somewhere else — there are four or five major candidates. Inflation will rock the economic structure.

"The psychedelic thing has already won, As Timothy Leary says, too many people have already tried it and liked it. And the gap between the generations will widen. The old people won't be able to understand our generation at all."

Still, Bob contends that his decision to move to Canada was not political.

"Personal freedom is the reason I came up here. I want to have the right to say no to people. I've got better things to do than be used like a robot-killer dog in the Army. No one has the right to tell me to go drop nukes on people. I want the right to run my own life."

Bob finds Canada "far more relaxed and less hysterical" than the U.S. Canada has no

Fellows program expanded for counseling 2 fraternities

The faculty fellows program, which is a fairly recent innovation at Duke seems on the road to encompassing all the living groups on West.

The origins of the program are in the freshman faculty adviser system of five years ago. One faculty adviser was assigned to each group of 12 to 15 freshmen and theoretically counseled the students on academic matters.

The freshman faculty adviser system fell apart two years after its inception, partly because of lack of student participation and faculty interest.

In its place a system was begun whereby faculty advisers were assigned to a few living groups on an experimental basis. It was not so much for academic counseling as for encouraging academic affairs in the living groups.

THE FACULTY ADVISER program was later formalized as the Faculty Fellow system and a Fellow was assigned to each of the seven interfraternity Council and Trinity College Duesmen. Price began consideration of the possibility of introducing the program to the fraternities.

As a result of the discussions, six fraternities requested that a Faculty Fellow be assigned to them. Fellows were assigned to the fraternities, Pi Kappa Phi and Tau Epsilon Phi.

FOR YEARS each fraternity had a faculty adviser, who usually has been a brother and has advised primarily on the financial and other aspects of the fraternity's operation. Of the six fraternities who requested a Faculty Fellow, only two were assigned because of a lack of funds.

The other area of change in the Faculty Fellows system, according to Assistant Dean of the Sociology Department, is that the fellows will help more for academic counseling, a return to the original concept.

The fellow is given an expense account with which to entertain his group. The sum is suggested, not specified, and "some" of the fellows go under, some go over," according to Dean Price.

DR. GEORGE MADDOX of the Sociology department, like others of the Fellows assigned to freshman houses, was in the West union and Director of Dining Halls Ted Minah began making plans for his evening cuisine center.

He welcomes Back Students ANNAMARIA'S Pizza House featuring pizzas, spaghetti and meatballs, submarine

On 11:00 a.m. to midnight, Monday through Thursday

FREE DELIVERY ON 3 OR MORE PIZZAS PHONE 688-6445

ANNAMARIA'S Pizza House
featuring pizzas, spaghetti and meatballs, submarine

On 11:00 a.m. to midnight, Monday through Thursday

FREE DELIVERY ON 3 OR MORE PIZZAS
PHONE 688-6445

ANNAMARIA'S
NORTHGATE
The Flim Flam Man
George C. Scott

RIALTO
Chafed Elbows
Scorpia Rising from the Underground

James Gairney
Eva Marie Saint

STUDENTS
THAT'S IT—THE IVY ROOM—

The Best Place to Meet, Eat and Relax
Serving complete meals continuously all day. We are known for the best fried chicken, roast beef and apple pie in town. And we serve from, or have carry-out items catered from our

DELICATESSEN

Roast Beef	German Ham Slices	Chopped Liver
Breasted Pastries	Rare Roast Beef	Spiced Beef
Roast Turkey	Chicken in the Soup	German Cervelat
Roast Pork	Roast Ham	Hot and Cold Sandwiches
Imported Cheese	Baked Ham	Pastry Salad

Also, Unpublished, French Bread and War Buns
After 10:00, ask the order for your "Hot Ball Buns"

Private Rooms Available for Breakfasts, Brunches, Lunches,
Dinners or Sandwich Parties.
Come See What We Have.

The Gourmet Center Operating Continuously

Ivy Room Restaurant
COSMOPOLITAN ROOM
AND DELICATESSEN

1004 W. Main Street Phone 688-8041 and 682-9771
Open 7 Days 8:30 A.M. 'til 11:00 P.M.

Keep Your Parents Posted

Send them a gift
Subscription to:

The Duke Chronicle

Only $7.00 For The Year
Please Mail This Coupon Today Or Bring To 388 Flowers For Gift Subscription

Duke Chronicle
Box 4636, Duke Station
Durham, N. C. 27708

Gentlemen: Enclosed is $7.00 for my subscription.

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____