First lottery since 1942 held in D.C.; lower third 'almost certain to be free'

By David E. Rosenbaum

(C) 1969 N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON—The future of young men across the country was decided last night as, one by one, the dates of their birth were drawn in the first draft lottery in a generation.

The first date drawn was Sept. 14. Among the other dates picked early in the drawing, which began shortly after 8 p.m., were April 24 and Dec. 30.

The lottery affects every man in the country between the ages of 19 and 26 who has not served in the military. Each of these men will be given a number, with those whose birthday was drawn first assigned no. 1 and so on through the 366 dates.

Beginning in January, potential draftees will be called in the order in which their birthdays were drawn last night. Thus, each draft board will select all men with no. 1, except those with deferments or exemptions, before any man with no. 2 if taken.

Men in next year's draft pool whose assigned numbers are not reached by the end of the year will be free from draft liability entirely unless there is a national emergency.

Government officials say that men whose birthdays were among the last third drawn—roughly those with numbers from the mid-200's through 366—can be almost certain to be free from the draft. Those with birthdays drawn among the first third will almost surely be drafted.

For those in the middle group, there will be a year of uncertainty, with the higher a man's number, the less chance of his being taken.

Pentagon officials estimate that 850,000 men will be in next year's draft pool. These are men who have not fulfilled their military obligation and who do not have deferments or exemptions.

Of these, it is expected that about 290,000 will enlist voluntarily, leaving 560,000 to take their chances with the draft. Draft calls in 1970 are expected to total about 250,000 or 45 per cent.

The lottery does not affect deferments or exemptions. A man who now has a deferment may

Union discusses goals

By Michael Patrick
Union Reporter

The University Union Executive and Programming Councils attempted at their meeting last week to find a compromise between a proposed orientation toward community and the continuation of the programming functions of the Union.

The result of the meeting was inconclusive with several members expressing their frustration that nothing had been accomplished. A vote taken on the two principles found five members favoring each proposal; and eight wishing some compromise.

The community proposal, submitted by Jeff Van Pelt, would give the students voice in the selection of the president of the Union Board. It would replace the present autonomous nature of the ten committees and their chairmen with determination of programs by the students involved in the committees. Ultimately, according to Van Pelt, the proposal could result in the removal of the Union from the University structure, if the student body so wished.

Two other proposals were submitted that would retain the present committee structures, yet add a separate structure concerned with community. This approach drew support from a plurality of the members.

The desire for community involvement in the Union was the primary force causing the restructuring of the old Student Union. The Union Board was expanded to a University-wide scope in order to realize this end. That the envisioned community involvement has not occurred is widely felt by members of the councils.

In other business, the Chairman Rich Reisman informed the councils that the Union has decided to use the College Entertainment Association (CEA) for obtaining major attractions.

Duke tenants get action; Huestis to give guarantees

By Douglas Hastings

In the most conclusive meeting to date between Durham residents who rent their homes from Duke and the University administration, agreement was reached last Friday to begin immediately to make some repairs which the residents have long felt are "sorely needed."

At the same time, most of the residents' more long-range requests, some of which entail alteration of Duke's expansion policies, were rejected.

The meeting held at a community member's home, was between Charles B. Huestis, Duke's vice-president for business and finance and L.W. Smith, director of housing and members of the Erwin Council of ACT (an organization of poor whites in Durham).

It was agreed that Huestis would put in writing three statements of assurance for the residents:

- 1) A guarantee of six months' prior notice for all evictions.

- 2) A guarantee of six months' prior notice for all raises in rent.

- 3) A guarantee that no Duke tenant would ever be evicted for complaining or asking for repairs.

Huestis said that the first and third of these were already part of Duke's policy, but that he would "certainly" put them on paper.

Agreement reached

Agreement was also reached on making long-necessary repairs on the tenant's homes and on attacking the dust problem caused by the four unpaved streets in the area. Huestis agreed to begin discussing immediately plans for making the necessary repairs, especially painting, in the "shortest time possible."

He also promised to check into possibilities for tarring and graveling the unpaved streets, saying he

New registration system proposed

By Jude Cassidy

In an attempt to "offer a better way of structuring the student's schedule and hopefully offering a better system of pre-registration and registration," Dr. Clark R. Cahow, University registrar, has introduced a new procedure for pre-registration.

According to Cahow, the new procedure is attempting to do three things: "first, to discover student demand for courses; second, to provide a basis for assisting the departments and the dean of the faculty in planning; and third, to assist the departments in structuring a schedule that will satisfy the greatest possible number of student requests."

The registrar's office mailed yesterday a tentative list of courses to be offered for the 1970-71 school year, along with a letter of explanation concerning the new pre-registration system. Students are being asked to plan their tentative course schedules for '70-71, before the times of the classes are determined.

According to Cahow, the course lists submitted by many students during pre-registration do not reflect their true wishes, since there are often class conflicts and the student has been forced to drop one of the two subjects which he originally wanted.

Under the new system, "A tally of student demand will be presented to the departments to be used as a basis for schedule planning. Before the 1970-71 schedule is structured, we will provide information to each department that will assist the

Devils nip VPI, 66-63

By Bob Heller

GREENSBORO, N.C.—In a not-so-very-well-played yet nevertheless exciting basketball game, Duke defeated Virginia Tech 66-63 in a double overtime season opener last night. Center Randy Denton topped all scorers with 27 points.

On the strength of three lay ups and two free throws by Denton, it looked as though the Devils would blow VPI right off the court. After accumulating a quick 10-2 lead, the Devils lost their touch, allowing the Gobblers to close the gap. For the next ten minutes Duke played the visitors on even terms.

Then, with 4:22 to go in the half, the last of eight straight Devil points gave Coach Bucky Waters' team a 34-21 advantage, the biggest Duke bulge of the game. VPI popped in the last six points of the half, though, enabling them to close the gap to 38-31 at the intermission.

Second half action was even slower than that of the first half. Virginia Tech slowly chipped away at the Devil lead until 14:36 remained in regulation time. At that time Loyd (sic) King sank a 23 nip-and-tuck until the Gobblers took a one point lead at the 12:02 mark. They held the upper hand until Denton shook lose for two straight lay-ups, giving the Devils a 57-55 advantage with 5:51 to go.

After Ron Wagner tied the game at 59 with a jumper, Denton again hit for a drive in, and with 36 seconds remaining, the big center, had a chance to put the game away, but he missed on a bonus situation. With 24 seconds showing on the clock Charles Lipscomb hit an 18-footer to tie the game at 61, where the score remained for the duration of regulation time.

The first overtime period saw a minimum of action. Duke controlled the tip, but lost the ball after just 70 seconds. Both teams had chances to win the game, though neither team committed a foul. Thus, the score remained knotted at 61.

With DeVenzio, Katherman, Saunders, Denton and John Posen on the floor, the Devils again controlled the tip to begin the second overtime period. Here are the highlights of the decisive period:

Duke controlled the ball for three minutes, at which time Wagner of Tech fouled Katherman. He hit on the first of the bonus shots but missed the second. The Devils lost the ball out of bounds with 1:55 remaining in the second overtime.

VPI had the ball for less than 50 seconds, as Wagner missed a ten footer with 1:06 to go. The ball sailed out of bounds, and Duke took over.

Again playing very deliberately, the Devils held the ball until 37 seconds remained at which time DeVenzio missed a shot. However, on what proved to be the winning basket, an alert Denton tipped the ball in.

With Duke up by three, Saunders fouled Wagner in the act of shooting with 27 seconds to go. He canned both free-throws.

With just six seconds remaining, Duke got the break of the game. After DeVenzio missed a free throw, there was a scramble for the ball, with Duke being awarded the ball out of bounds. Katherman was fouled with two seconds left, sank both charity tosses, and that was that. Final score: 66-63.

It was hardly the kind of game expected from the 4600 fans in the Greensboro Coliseum. Play was rather sluggish, and it was obvious that Duke's lofty national ratings are not indicative of the team's calibre.

O'Connor, Shaw lead frosh to 106-78 win

By Bob Heller

GREENSBORO, N.C.—The 1969-1970 version of the Duke University freshman basketball team successfully opened its season last night with a resounding 106-78 victory over Virginia Tech. Leading the way for the Blue Devil frosh were center Alan Shaw, with 29 points and Richie O'Connor with 26.

The game started out slowly, with Tech notching the first points of the game. With just one and one half minutes gone in the game, though, O'Connor gave the Blue and White the lead for good with a twisting jumper, making the score just 6-4.

The Devils pulled away from Tech, but quite slowly to begin with. Duke did not really take a commanding lead until 4:46 remained in the half, when eight straight Duke points gave the host team a 43-25 advantage.

Duke's biggest lead of the half was fashioned with three minutes remaining, on a Jeff Dawson 20-foot jump shot. The Devil's half-time advantage read 52-32.

Despite a fantastic rash of fouls late in the period—Gary Melchionni had four and, Shaw, Dawson and Jim Fitzsimmons had three apiece—the yearlings still played some fine basketball, especially for a season opener. O'Connor led the squad with 17 tallies while Shaw threw in 13. Only a very hot hand and free-throws kept the Gobblers close to the Duke frosh.

It was Duke that carried the hot hand after the intermission, though, as the Devils scored 33 points in the first 10 minutes of the second half to help themselves to a 37 point advantage on several different occasions. Shaw was especially tough in the opening minutes of the period.

Most of Coach Jack Schalow's squad of 16 saw action during the game. Due to the number of fouls called on the starting five, several top substitutes played extensively. Most impressive were Fred Williams, a 6-3 forward and Steve Warner, a backcourt man. Williams, despite his height disadvantage, managed to snare ten rebounds in the time he played. Warfield shot 4 for 9 from the floor.

To go along with Shaw and O'Connor, Melchionni accounted for 16 points and Dawson added 14. Fitzsimmons, who fouled out with 18:22 to play, finished with

An amazing new ingredient now comes in this familiar package.

It's called a longer-lasting engine.
Longer lasting than what?
Longer lasting than our old engine, which in case you didn't know, was one of the toughest engines around.

The new version is more powerful. (Top speed: 81 mph vs. 78 mph.)

It has better acceleration.

And most important, it weighs the same as the older version. So it doesn't have to work as hard to get you where you're going.

But that's where the generation gap ends:

The new engine will still give you a good 26 miles to a gallon of gas.

It still takes pints of oil instead of quarts.

It still abstains from antifreeze. (Because it's still air-cooled.)

And it's still conveniently located in the rear for better traction in mud and snow.

Yes, all the things that made our old package a hit last year are back again this year.

Including our old package.

State has size and talent

Editor's note: This is the fourth in a series of eight preview articles on ACC basketball teams.

By Roy Towlen

Assistant Sports Editor

Norm Sloan's fourth season as head basketball coach at North Carolina State may well be his best yet. The team boasts more talent, speed, and depth than any of his previous teams.

The basic ingredient which Sloan lacks is experience. He plans on moving All-ACC center Vann Williford to a forward position, where his speed and deft shooting touch can be better utilized. Williford averaged 21.6 points and 10 rebounds per game last year.

Taking Williford's place in the middle of things will be Paul Coder, a 6-9, 233 pound sophomore who averaged 24.1 with last year's frosh. Coder should provide Sloan with sorely needed rebounding strength.

The other forward position could fall to one of three men. Rick Anheuser, a co-captain this campaign along with Williford, started last year and averaged nine points per game, while Dan Wells, who like Anheuser is 6-6, was one of last year's top reserves. Renaldo Lovisa, a 6-8 sophomore, also has a slim chance of starting some games in the forefront.

The Wolfpack has a reasonable amount of depth at the guard positions. Juniors Jim Risinger and Al Heartley both started a number of games last year, but neither averaged over five points a game.

Joe Dunning, a junior guard who was used sparingly last year, has been impressive in pre-season drills, and may well see a great deal of action this year.

But the key to the backcourt's success, and probably the success of the team as a whole, is 6-5 sophomore Ed Leftwich, a highly talented but somewhat erratic New Jersey who has the potential of becoming another ACC super star.

Leftwich has the great outside shot, along with size and quickness, which every coach looks for in a guard. If he can gain consistency, the Wolfpack might provide some surprises for the ACC race.

Sloan believes that he has more versatility with his team this year. "We are going to make our offense more simplified using more give and go, one-on-one situations and post splits."

"This will be a hustling team, one that has the ability to take advantage of its aggressiveness. I think we will be in the thick of the ACC race, along with five other teams. It should prove to be an exciting season."

Indeed it should. Sloan finally has some men who can rebound, something he has lacked in the past. But too much rests with talented though untried sophomores. PREDICTED ACC FINISH: FIFTH

In SEC basketball

Kentucky again has 'horses'

Editor's note: This is the fourth in a series of articles previewing basketball in other conferences.

By Bob Heller

Sports Editor

A serious automobile accident notwithstanding, Coach Adolph Rupp's Kentucky basketball team should once again have the "horses" to run away with the Southeastern Conference cage title. Senior guard Mike Casey's left leg was broken in several spots in that July tragedy, but that will not be enough to end King Rupp's reign in the league.

The Wildcats' loss of only one senior, guard Phil Argento, means that Kentucky opponents will be seeing the same familiar faces, most notably those of Dan Issel and Mike Pratt. A very likely replacement at one of the guard spots is a 6-3 sophomore, Kent Hollenbeck, who averaged 20 points per game with last year's frosh.

The losses of the two experienced guards will undoubtedly hurt the cause, but probably not enough to deny Kentucky of the number one spot in the conference and national ratings.

Last year's third place finisher in the NIT, Tennessee, poses a threat to the Wildcats as do Vanderbilt and Auburn. Coach Ray Mear's Vols, who finished 21-7 last season, has three starters back in Bobby Croft, who made the all-NIT team, Don Johnson and Jimmy England, all of whom averaged in double figures last year. Replacing guards Bill Hann and Bill Justus does pose a problem, though.

Vanderbilt will somehow have to make up for the loss of three-time all-SEC guard Tom Hagan, who threw in over 23 points per game last year. All conference cornerman

Thorpe Weber does return, though, and Coach Roy Skinner is quite high on sophomore Chris Schweer, whose style has been compared to that of Weber. The Commodores are best set at the pivot spot, with veteran Perry Wallace and 7-2 soph Steve Turner camped there.

Some outstanding gunners could make Auburn the surprise team in the conference this year. Despite a slight height disadvantage, the Tigers should be tough this season with the SEC's soph of the year, Johnny Mengelt returning. He finished with a 19.4 average last season, including a 42 point performance against Kentucky.

Also back are Center Billy Alexander and guard Carl Shettler, who averaged 26 points per game between them last year. The key to the team, though, could be a fine sophomore, Henry Harris.

From a 13-12 season, Coach Ken Rosemond has all five of Georgia's starters returning this year. Heading the corps of returnees is 6-11 Bob Lienhard, who averaged 24 points per game last year. Other starters are guards Jerry Epling (18 ppg), Larry Taylor (12 ppg), and Barry Cohen, who was ineligible most of last year. Frosh standout Dick Toth, who averaged close to 20 last year, should also help the Bulldogs.

The biggest drop this year should come from Florida. A power in recent years, the Gators lost all-American Neal Walk, and what a loss he is. Starters Boyd Welsh and Micke Leatherwood are also missing from last year's 18-9 team. The entire team will most likely have to be built around all-SEC Andy Owens, who averaged 16 points per game last year.

Everyone knows about Pistol Pete Maravich and daddy Press. LSU will again have one of the truly outstanding individuals and one of the truly lousy teams. They should be good enough, though, to out-place Mississippi State, Mississippi and Alabama. It's a bad year for the True Grits.

Here's how they'll finish in the SEC this year:

1. Kentucky
2. Tennessee
3. Vanderbilt
4. Auburn
5. Georgia
6. Florida
7. LSU
8. Alabama
9. Mississippi State
10. Mississippi

just four. O'Connor was top assist man, with five, and Shaw led both teams in rebounds, with 17.

For the season opener, the frosh played quite well. The sharp passing and rebounding (Duke held a 76-56 bulge on the boards) was dulled only by the 32 fouls assessed against the Devils. Next up for the frosh is Leas-McCrae junior college this Saturday at 6:00.

The Duke Chronicle

The Student Press of Duke University

Founded in 1905

Today is Tuesday, December 2, 1969.

Thirteen years ago today a former student activist returned from his self-imposed exile, vowing boldly to overthrow the existing government. Aboard the pleasure yacht named "Granma" which brought them, the self-proclaimed revolutionary brought his little brother, an Argentine doctor and 79 friends. Only a dozen of the romantics survived the first day, but three years later they ruled Cuba.

Noting once again how from little acorns mighty oak trees grow—if the ground is ready—this is the Duke Chronicle, where we always keep one hand on the plow and the other on the typewriter. Volume 65, Number 51 published at Duke in Durham, North Carolina. News of sproutings: Ext. 2663. Fertilizers: Ext. 6588.

The Lottery

If you are a male between the ages of 19 and 26, of sound body and mind, and a resident of the United States, you probably woke up this morning with a different outlook on life than the one you had when you woke up yesterday.

Just after 8:00 last night, the fickle finger of fate and the United States government (personified in an innocent-looking teeny-bopper member of the President's Youth Advisory Committee) reached down into a bowl of marbles and changed the direction of a lot of people's lives.

It was all deceptively simple. Just a short, almost pleasant ceremony, some smiles and handshakes, a bit of nervous self-consciousness, and suddenly it was all over. It didn't seem evil at all. In fact, if you were looking for one word to describe the whole ceremony, sterile would have probably done as well as any.

They tell us the new system is fairer than the old one, and, to a certain extent, this is true. They also claim that the new system is more civilized; because it doesn't keep a person in doubt of his military status for more than a year. This claim too has some validity.

But watching the proceedings last night, we couldn't help but be reminded of Shirley Jackson's short story, "The Lottery," in which the citizens of an especially perverted New England town got together once a year to draw lots to determine which resident would have the honor of being stoned to death by the rest of the townspeople.

Because for all of its improvements, what last night's first installment of the new selective subservience system really did was decide which of this country's young people will have the honor of dying for nothing. It determined who will have the honor of killing Vietnamese rebels and innocent civilians as well as in a hopeless effort to impose an "American" settlement on an internal civil war. It determined which individuals will either have to sell their souls by participating in a war they don't believe in or face the stiff consequences of draft evasion or refusal.

For those whose birthday came up early last night, the lottery had a chilling ring of finality about it, like a heavy iron door slamming shut on some now unreachable opportunities. For these men have no escape from the clutches of the amoral and often mindless military machine but the overly-stringent conscientious objector qualifications, flight to Canada or Sweden, or jail.

For these men the horrors of war are not to be entered into lightly. Killing another human being is the ultimate sin, and laying down your life for a cause is the ultimate sacrifice. And if you're not even sure that the people you are supposed to shoot at are your "enemy," the whole situation becomes a horrible nightmare.

In the final analysis, it comes down to a decision of the individual conscience. The government has made its decision, now each individual has to decide whether or not he will allow himself to be bound by that decision. At least the lottery allows time to get a passport or the necessary plane or bus tickets.

Aside from those whose luck ran out last night, the young men on this campus and around the country are now divided into two other groups—the borderline cases who will spend their year of eligibility with one eye on the monthly draft calls and the other on the fighting levels, and those whose birthdays came up near the end of the drawing who in all probability will not have to face the draft at all. To the borderline group we can only extend our sympathy and hope for the best. And for those who are "free," we hope that they will never forget how they felt at 8:00 last night.

Don't scab, brother

By Mark Pinsky

"After God had finished the rattlesnake, the toad and the vampire, he had some awful substance left with which he made a SCAB. A SCAB is a two-legged animal with a corkscrew soul, a water-logged brain and a combination backbone made of jelly and glue. Where others have hearts, he carries a tumor of rotten principles. A strikebreaker is a traitor to his God, his country, his family and his class!"

Jack London, 1904

Eternal verities aside, students and faculty should begin thinking about what they are going to do when the strike comes to Duke.

Whether or not to scab—to take the place of striking workers on the job—is the first and most important question they have to answer. An insight into this question can be gained by looking back at the last strike on the campus during the Vigil, in the spring of 1968, to see who scabbed and why.

Aside from those students who were so destitute that they were willing to take the job of the strikers, three types of community members volunteered to scab without pay. They included:

—the reactionary professor and administrators who had incomes of between $15,000 and $30,000 and jobs which left them with enough energy to do hours of additional manual labor;

—the students for whose families a Duke education and annual flights to Bermuda and the Bahamas present no undue financial strain;

—the athletes who receive from DUAA and the University the equivalent of $3,000—$4,000 in goods and services—annually.

Why did all these people scab?

A number of reasons come to mind:

—because all the activist, liberal and radical students appeared to be supporting the strike;

—because they think Mr. Minah (director of the struck dining halls) is a fine person;

—because of some vague, mystical feeling toward the "institution" of the University; and —because they oppose, philosophically, the concept of trade unionism and/or union corruption.

All of these may have been valid considerations for those concerned.

Nonetheless, anyone who scabs during a Duke strike is consciously and intentionally taking money out of the pockets of working people—most of whom take home less than $4,000 a year on which they have to support families. Think about that before you think about scabbing.

Self-criticism

This is not to say that supporting the strike is the only and sufficient way to aid the working people of Duke. It isn't. The other ways are less glamorous and show little regard for ideology. For instance, there is no reason for a twenty-year-old student to address a fifty-year-old maid or janitor by their first name—not even if you put "comrade" before it. Nor is there any reason why you can't tell your maid that you can clean your own room once in a while. Or any excuse for grinding cigarette butts into the floor of a University meeting room—no matter how revolutionary the meeting. Somebody is going to have to clean that mess up.

And the sooner the students can take care of their mess, literally as well as figuratively, the sooner they'll be in a position to help the workers when they get ready to take care of theirs.

Letters to the editor

Nude ads

Editor, The Chronicle:

For months now you have been running ads for a men's clothing store which prominently feature nude or semi-nude women. As a woman I am disgraced and disgusted by this ad and by the Chronicle's continued willingness to print it on a regular basis. I resent and reject the implication that woman is a sexual object to be used as a commodity and as an advertising gimmick. For over a hundred years, women have been struggling for human freedom and dignity—for recognition of their existence as people in our own right. We will not define our existence as people in our own right. We will not define our existence purely in terms of our relationship with men, nor will we submit to being defined by them as purely sexual objects to be used to attract attention, sell products, and/or stimulate and satisfy the male ego. This is oppressive to both men and women.

Ads such as those run regularly by Milton's Clothing Cupboard can only serve to reinforce these oppressive sex-role definitions. Women must rebel, as Marlene

Dixon has said, "not only against passivity and dependency in their relationships but also against the notion that they must function as sexual objects, being defined in purely sexual rather than human terms, and being forced to package and sell themselves as commodities on the sex market."

As a woman, then, I call upon the Chronicle to refuse to run ads for Milton's Clothing Cupboard unless and until that store agrees to stop using women as advertising gimmicks. I ask also that women and men who share in my rejection of this ad and its implications indicate their own reasons to the editor of this paper and help to stop this oppression in advertising.

Open meetings

Editor, The Chronicle:

Let me comment on your editorial, "A Step Forward," on Nov. 19, approving the action of the Undergraduate Faculty Council in opening its meetings to observers. The experience of the Academic Council since opening its meetings last February has indeed given no particular cause for regret, but that is rather incidental to my urging a similar move for the UFC. Further, in moving for open meetings of the UFC, I was acting only as an individual member of that body and not in any way in behalf of the Academic Council. Basically, I just believe that the UFC should try open meetings.

At the same time, consistent with preference for openness and community feeling, I wouldn't advocate a general policy of doing all business in public. We all should be open to change and instruction by experience in this matter, and I would hope that few would make either absolute privacy or its absolute absence a matter of principle. Both open and closed bodies have a place in the conduct of our community business.

My present thought is that large bodies, particularly those with rather immediate legislative responsibilities, might well try conducting business in the open. Smaller groups or perhaps those having more a recommendatory role may well produce better results by working in privacy. That view has been reached after experience working in both kinds of groups toward the same community ends.

York House activities

By Mike Besancon

A Contemporary Art Survey Course with University credit taught by W.K. Stars of the Art Department is part of York House's aim of filling out the education of its 88 members in areas of not only academics, but intramural athletics and social life as well.

Following a precedent set in 1966 when York moved from House H to its new dorm location, a one-half credit course is set up each semester. About 30 house members are enrolled in the present course.

Colloquiums are an important part of the house academics and social activities. Approximately every three weeks York invites one or two professors or administrators for coffee, donuts, and discussion. Most recently invited was the Duke Basketball Coach, Bucky Waters.

In addition, York welcomes "house visitors" such as Joseph Heller, author of Catch-22, who visited about two years ago.

In an effort to promote understanding and open communication between students and faculty, York has instituted their "prof drinks." A favorite professor is invited to an informal meeting where students may get to know a professor better through general discussion.

York, a non-selective house by a 71-12 vote, is presently working out details involved in utilizing the greater resources available from their federation with Lancaster, Mirecourt, Tabard, and Gilbert-Adams. Projected functions for house members include a student-faculty cocktail party, scheduled for December 5, and the house Christmas party with the Dust, a week later. The federation also sponsors intramural sports activities for all its members.

CCB's Sam Douglas and Tom Brantley have $150,000 to loan right here on campus. How much do you need?

So you need $300? Or maybe $3,000 for a new car.

Whatever the amount, get the loan you need without leaving campus.

Just stop by the CCB office in the Men's Union Building. (It's easy to find, we're the only bank on campus!) And tell Sam Douglas or Tom Brantley how much you need.

They have $150,000 right here on campus, so why waste a trip downtown?

chairman in structuring his particular schedule as free of interdepartmental conflict as possible," explained Cahow.

Another advantage of the new procedure is that students will be told the size limit of each course. This will allow the student to see how good his chances are of getting into a specific class. If he realizes that his chances are poor, he may choose to originally select another course, rather than being rejected and having to choose another course later.

Cahow stressed the fact that it is to the student's advantage to submit a tentative course schedule, for it may improve his chances that the courses will be scheduled in such a way that he may take all the courses he desires. This new procedure has been approved by an ASU committee and by all the department chairmen and the directors of undergraduate study of each department.

He said the 1970-71 course requests should be submitted to 103 Allen not later than Tuesday, Dec. 9.

-Duke tenants-

would report back on this in the near future.

Huestis said he could not grant a number of the requests. These mostly involved the future usage of the Erwin area by the University. Huestis said he could not guarantee alternate dwellings for residents evicted by Duke. He also said that the University could not fix up and open for rent the presently boarded-up houses in the Erwin Area.

He said further that he could not bring all the houses totally up to the standards of the Durham Housing Code without raising the rent. Lastly, Huestis asserted that it is not feasible for Duke to replace the fifty houses it has demolished in the neighborhood.

ACT Erwin Council

The ACT people were representatives of the ACT Erwin Council, a group of Duke tenants who live in the area of land bounded by Campus Drive, the Duke Gardens, Erwin Road, and Erwin Field. Also attending were two members of the ACT general staff, Dick Landerman and Ninian Beall.

The Erwin Council has been working recently to bring their grievances directly to their landlord. They had already met twice, prior to the twenty-eighth, with G. C. Hendricksen, vice-president and treasurer of Duke, who is in charge of buying and selling land for the University.

Unsatisfied by these meetings, the Erwin residents endeavored to set up a session with Huestis, who oversees Duke's real estate dealings. Other requests included telling the tenants "exactly when" their houses are to be demolished, finding a "comparable" dwelling for tenants who are evicted, recognition of the "right of each tenant to withhold rent" if repairs aren't made, painting of all houses, agreement not to raise "any tenant's rent as long as he or she occupies the house," offer to sell the homes to the tenants "at the same price Duke paid for them," and "build replacements for the 50 houses Duke has demolished" in the area around Duke.

Faces difficulties

In answer to these requests, Huestis generally indicated that the University would face many difficulties in guaranteeing such actions.

Huestis said he did not know when demolitions of houses would take place; he estimated that there would be no new Duke construction for about one year and that some property may not be utilized for five or more years.

Because there is a housing shortage, Huestis claimed that it would be impossible to find replacement housing for those whom Duke must evict.

Huestis maintained that he did not realize that repairs had not been made promptly when requested. He agreed to help find ways in which they could be accomplished more rapidly.

Rent increase

In response to the request to make all units in the area inhabitable to alleviate the shortage, Huestis said that this would require a rent increase. "The rental program," he said, "is designed as a break-even program. We can't do more than that." House painting, however, is scheduled to begin immediately.

Asked what Duke would do if one of the houses it owns is found by the Durham Housing Inspector to be violating the housing code, Huestis said necessary repairs would be made. In addition, tenant rent would be raised.

Selling back the houses and building new ones are not possible according to Huestis, because of financial limitations.

retain it. But the number he was assigned in last night's lottery will stick with him. When his deferment lapses, even if it is several years from now, the number he got in the drawing will determine his place in the draft selection order.

Men whose birthdays were drawn last night were born between Jan. 1, 1944, and Dec. 31, 1950. Future lotteries—there will be one each fall—will determine the order of selection only for men who are 19 years old that year.

The drawing last night was held in the auditorium of the Selective Service System's headquarters here.

The first capsule was picked from a glass bowl by Rep. Alexander Pirnie of Utica, N.Y., the ranking Republican on the House Armed Services Subcommittee on the draft. Subsequent capsules were picked by members of the Selective Service System's Youth Advisory Committees.

These committees, made up of men and women of draft age, were established by local draft boards this year at the urging of President Nixon.

A piece of gummed paper was removed from each capsule and the date written on the paper was read aloud by one of several Army officers. Then the date was stuck to a blue board next to a series of numbers running from 1 to 366.

After the drawing of the dates, the letters of the alphabet were picked to determine the order of selection within a given birthday.

Last night's lottery was the first since 1942. The lottery was cancelled during World War II, when it became necessary to induct all qualified men. Since 1948, men have been drafted in order of age, the oldest first, up to the age of 26.

The most complicated part of the new lottery system concerns men with deferments. For example, men who drew the number 150 last night and who have deferments next year will not be taken, even if the number 150 is reached in the pecking order.

But if they lose their deferments before they are 26 years old, they will immediately enter the draft pool with the number 150. Thus, even though their birthday has a different number in another year's lottery, their number will remain the same.

CHRIST CLIMBED DOWN

by Lawrence Ferlinghetti

Christ climbed down
from His bare Tree
this year
and ran away to where there were no rootless Christmas trees hung with candycanes and breakable stars

Christ climbed down
from His bare Tree
this year
and ran away to where there were no gilded Christmas trees and no tinsel Christmas trees and no tinfoil Christmas trees and no pink plastic Christmas trees and no gold Christmas trees and no black Christmas trees and no powderblue Christmas trees hung with electric candles and encircled by tin electric trains and clever cornball relatives

Christ climbed down
from His bare Tree
this year
and ran away to where no intrepid Bible salesmen covered the territory in two-tone cadillacs and where no Sears Roebuck creches complete with plastic babe in manager arrived by parcel post the babe by special delivery and where no televised Wise Men praised the Lord Calvert Whiskey

Christ climbed down
from His bare Tree
this year
and ran away to where no fat handshaking stranger in a red flannel suit went around passing himself off as some sort of North Pole saint crossing the desert to Bethlehem Pennsylvania
in a Volkswagon sled drawn by rollocking Adirondack reindeer with German names and bearing sacks of Humble Gifts from Saks Fifth Avenue for everybody's imagined Christ child

Christ climbed down
from His bare Tree
this year
and ran away to where no Bing Crosby carollers groaned of a tight Christmas and where no Radio City angels iceskated wingless
thru a winter wonderland into a jinglebell heaven daily at 8:30
with Midnight Mass matinees

Christ climbed down
from His bare Tree
this year
and softly stole away into some anonymous Mary's womb again where in the darkest night of everybody's anonymous soul
He awaits again
an unimaginable and impossibly
Immaculate Reconception
the very craziest
