Basketball team withdraws from NCAA Final Four

By JOHN SENFT

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The men's basketball team announced late Thursday night it will withdraw from the NCAA Final Four tournament this weekend because of prior academic commitments.

Head Coach Mike Krzyzewski said he had hoped senior starter Billy King would have finished a term paper he has due Monday before the team left Durham on Thursday afternoon. King worked furiously on the paper during the flight to Missouri, but still could not finish the assignment. That forced the decision late Thursday to withdraw from the tournament and return to Durham.

The decision was not met with the disappointment some might have expected from King's teammates, however.

"We got this far. How come we have to go and play another two games, anyway?" said junior point guard Quin Snyder. "I'm tired of hiking up my shorts everytime we take the floor."

Other players sounded equally indifferent. "We kinda want to just chill out in the C.I. looking for chicks before we head over to SPE's for a few rounds of beer bong," said Danny Ferry. "The babes are really hot for us tall boys, you know."

The team's decision comes on the heels of Duke's win over top-ranked Temple in the Eastern regional finals last weekend. Following the victory, administrators had to coerce apathetic students into celebrating on the quad.

"They kept mumbling about pledge formals and MCAT reviews," grumbled Bill "don't call me Phil" Griffith, University vice-president for affairs. "I stood in front of House D yelling, 'Look everybody, a bench! Let's burn the bench!' but nobody seemed interested."

President Keith Grodie echoed Griffith's sentiments. "It was anything but delightful," Grodie fumed. "I was out there on the quad with my 12-pack of Goebel's, wearing my best maroon madras tie, and nobody wanted to party."

University students' apathetic reputation has received national attention this week. Last Tuesday The New York Times reported that campus was "blah blah blah" after the Blue Devils' dramatic victory. "How is that going to look to the rest of the country?" sobbed Grodie.

With Duke dropping out, Kansas will receive a bye into the national championship game Monday night. That prospect pleased the Jayhawks' All-America forward Fanny Padding. "I'm positively exuberant," Padding articulated. "The ensuing contest will present us with a unique opportunity to exhibit our athletic prowess while accentuating our University's academic integrity."

The Blue Devils' reserve center George Burgeon was not as pleased. "Duh, I think it sucks," he elaborated in great detail.

Campaign reaches $200 million

By LA TRAVIATA

The Capital Campaign met their $200 million goal a year ahead of schedule, Campaign director Joel Mazola announced yesterday.

Mazola returned from his hideout in the New York theater district Thursday and actually spoke to the press.

Members of the Campaign's staff remained puzzled at the overnight $92 million increase in Campaign coffers. "I just don't know how it happened," mused Campaign employee James Moon, a tall man wit, frizzy red hair. "Don't look at me, I was hanging out on the third floor of the Flowers Building," he claimed.

"This much sure wasn't in the pipeline," said public relations expert Robert Wrong. "But, why question such trivial inconsistencies?" he queried.

The Campaign will leak confidential letters to a local newspaper later in the month explaining how Campaign officials had always planned to end the effort a year early, according to an undergraduate working at the Campaign who asked to remain anonymous. "Sorry, I need the recommendation," she testified.

Surprisingly, the Campaign reached the goal without the controversial Dense Deane gift. "All I have to say is 'Go to hell, Dense, go to hell,'" Wrong chanted.

From his car phone, Dense refused to comment on the sudden increase in Campaign contributions. "I only extended negotiations for all these years because Joel takes me to dinner when he's in town."

But Dense maintained he would still like to contribute to the endowment "if they name the college after me and give me total academic control. You don't

Millions stolen from area bank

From exciting staff rumors

Durham investigators say they have a suspect in the mysterious robbery Wednesday of the CCB bank downtown. A total of $92 million was stolen from the bank in a 1 p.m. holdup.

According to police reports, a tall man with frizzy red hair entered the building appearing nervous and insecure. He proceeded to threaten a teller with a very expensive bottle of wine and said, "Give me all your money or my parents will take your car away and disown you. And don't forget to vote Republican." Not wanting to hitch to work for the rest of his life, the teller

SAE frat booted off campus

By SNOB A. PEAL

University administrators announced their decision Thursday night to revoke the charter of the Self Appointed Elitist (SAE) fraternity, effectively kicking the brotherhood off campus. SAE officers say they don't care, as they plan to purchase the Erwin Square apartment building on Ninth Street with the money left over from buying their Porsches and BMWs.

"We're going to turn the place into a den of iniquity," condescended fraternity president Dave Luckless, reached at kegs illegally held in a brother's room Thursday night. "Who wants to live on campus anyway? And this location — AEPi can have it. The air conditioning and the sod outside is great, but I always get the feeling Brodie's watching us through binoculars from the Allen building."

The fraternity was placed on social probation a few weeks ago, and then was brought up on charges again for hazing pledges. "They were really cruel," bubbled pledge Andy Toasted, who rat-finked on his prospective brothers. "I had to wear a pledge pin that kept getting caught in my chest hair. I call that torture."

The decision to boot the SAEs was made by the Resentful Jealous Brats (RJB), a panel specially designed to make greek students' lives hell on earth. RJB members deny that the punishment is excessive. "Hazing is

Cabinet indicted: All of President Reagan's cabinet officers were indicted Thursday on 56 counts of conspiring to defraud the U.S. government. Special Prosecutor Lawrence Walsh, in explaining the charges, said his investigation determined Reagan's entire cabinet had purposefully avoided doing anything productive for the nation for the past seven years, and instead had used their salaries and department funds to advance their own political motives.

Gore attacks Jackson: In the most scathing attack yet on Democratic presidential hopeful Jesse Jackson, rival Albert Gore said "I think Jesse is wrong on some issues." Jackson called the sharply worded statement "a brutal, spiteful, personal attack on my character."

Noriega holding out: Panamanian strongman Manuel Noriega said he will not leave his country until he receives a better offer than those made already. Thus far, France has offered the drug smuggler political asylum — the so-called "Baby Doc plan." The U.S. then upped the ante by offering Noriega criminal immunity if he accepts the French bid. But Noriega said yesterday he would rather take the "Marcos plan." Under that set-up, the U.S. would sell Noriega an estate on the Hawaiian island of his choice, accepting money the murderer has made through illicit activities, then provide full Secret Service protection and diplomatic immunity.

Special funerals planned: Protestants and Catholics in Ireland agreed Thursday to schedule combined funerals. Although details must still be worked out, the current plan is to have several members from each faction arrive at the graveyard at the same time, whereupon they will shoot each other.

U.S. sends 23,000 troops to Martinique

By JOEL BRICKEY
N.Y. Times News Service

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Reagan ordered 23,000 battle-ready soldiers to the tiny island nation of Martinique Thursday following the reported sighting of a communist there.

The president of French-owned Martinique, Bouche Parte, said a man with a red lapel pin was spotted in a bustling marketplace around noon. Pentagon officials who requested anonymity said the White House immediately advised Parte that the sighting was clear evidence of a massive communist insurgency.

Based on that interpretation, Parte asked for "some assistance" to counter the possible assault. The White House interpreted that request as a call for an all-out military invasion to secure the country, the Pentagon officials said.

The U.S. force will include 15,000 Marines, 6,000 Army foot soldiers, and a Navy aircraft carrier task force. The force will be accompanied by a full complement of amphibious assault vehicles, tanks, fighter jets and bombers.

The troops will engage in "battle effectiveness readiness support and modification stipulation recognition exercises," said Marlin Fitzwater, Reagan's chief liar.

"These men will not be in danger. They will not be near any battle areas nor engage in fighting under any circumstances. They're just there to show what we can do," Fitzwater said.

At his ranch in California where he is celebrating National Soup Month, President Reagan said, "He has been my friend for 20 years and I don't intend to let him down now," thinking reporters were asking him about Attorney General Edwin Meese.

Staff foils Reagan's itchy trigger finger

By IMA RIGHTER
N.Y. Chimes Smear Service

OUR NATION'S CAPITAL — President Reagan attempted to begin a global thermo-nuclear war yesterday as he pressed his personal "nuke button" in the White House. No bombing resulted, though, because the President's staff had had the button disconnected three days after Reagan took office in 1981.

"We were afraid he would be quick to the trigger with this bomb thing," said Chief of Staff Howard Half-baked. "He's big on staff taking initiative, so we just saved the world a lot of trouble by disconnecting it."

The "nuke button," while not actually triggering any atomic devices, was still wired to notify military personnel when pressed. "We were afraid this might happen, especially with Gorbachev's new popularity," said

General Omar Sharif of the U.S. Army. "He's got that movie star ego, and when he feels upstaged he gets upset. We wanted to know when he was getting antsy."

Donald "No I'm Not Related" Regan, who served as Reagan's chief of staff for three years, said "We all knew the button was disconnected. We made a lot of jokes to the President, like 'well, if Garbage makes you so mad, why don't you just go nuke Moscow, sir?' Then 'we'd laugh and he'd be confused. It was pretty funny, really."

This further evidence of the remoteness of Reagan's leadership will be brought into use in the trials of the Iran-Contra arms scandal. But, according to Hawaiian Senator Daniel I-know-more-than-you-do, "these people won't be prosecuted for taking independent action in this situation. We probably should as a matter of principle, but, Jesus, they just saved us one hell of a mess."

In a special meeting of the ASDU legislature Wednesday, President Dan Dorkie delivered a eulogy for the late Dave Vyle.

Vyle, the 1987-88 chair of the Stupid Undergraduate Club Killers (SUCK), exploded in the Pits after ingesting a huge meal followed by a wafer-thin mint.

"Dave was a great friend," Dorkie said as he wiped a tear from his eye. "And he sure knew his way around a bylaw."

Privileged procure prime parking permits

By ROLAND ROYCE

Campus planner Dick Dover presented a proposal for preferred undergraduate and valet parking services at an emergency session of the Bored Trustees Thursday. The plan addresses complaints by potential donors children unable to find suitable parking places for their BMWs and Saabs.

Anne Yaldonor, a 1956 Women's College graduate and mother of an entering freshman, addressed the group via satellite from her chalet in Bern, Switzerland. "What's my daughter gonna think if she has to park her 750 'il in something called 'Guam'?" Yaldonor said. "I want my little girl treated with the respect I deserve."

Under the plan, all parking areas adjacent to the Bryan Center and on Chapel Drive will be rezoned 24K. Gold-plated magnetic strips, electronically corresponding to the owner's American Express Gold Card number, will replace parking decals. "We didn't want to mar those expensive paint jobs with tacky adhesives," said parking director Enzo Ferrari.

Vehicles displaying the gold strips may be parked in any campus zone, in addition to their exclusive areas. If convenient parking is not readily available, owners have the option of leaving their car in front the Chapel, next to the Bryan Center or at the East Campus bus stop, to be parked by a free valet service.

Rezoning will not effect East or North Campuses, according to Ferrari. "These areas simply do not house our targeted customers," he said.

The 24K Gold Zone service will be available to selected undergraduates by invitation only. Students entering the University via the president's list and those whose parents' annual income exceeds $2.5 million minimum will automatically qualify for the program. These requirements may be waived if the future alumnus is heir to a large fortune.

Administrators are enthusiastic about the proposal. "Not only will we end the problem of offending potential donors by forcing their children to waste valuable tanning time finding a safe spot for their Porsches," said Alumni Director Lame Funderduck, "but the University's poor will be aided also by the creation of additional work-study positions."

Approximately 100 work-study students will be hired as valets. When not bodily reserving spaces, valets' duties will consist of circling in front of the Chapel until a space opens up. "Once the car is parked, the valet will be responsible for waxing and buffing it," said Beth Lipton, a traffic office official.

The valets will also be required to trip each vehicle's theft alarm periodically. According to Lipton, the alarms will "annoy passers-by and let everyone in a two-mile

Organ coming on West by Fall 1989

By PHIL LUSS

As a result of a joint effort by the Duke Chapel, the physical plant and the department of anatomy, President Keith Brodie signed an order for a new million-dollar organ to be erected on the lawn in front of the chapel. The structure, which is scheduled to be completed in 1989, will tower 150 feet above West Campus, making it the largest organ of its kind on the East coast.

In an effort to integrate the structure into the campus' Gothic architectural scheme, an expert team of ATOs have been contracted to head the construction effort. The ATOs have become famous for their achievement in the snow sculpture world with their stunning reproductions of the average ATO standard-issue equipment. "Everything we do is proportionally

Aynrand to direct DUMBies

By HIPPO CRATES

Recently appointed chancellor William Aynrand was officially re-named director of the Duke University Marching Band (DUMB) Thursday in what was officially termed a "promotion."

President Happenin' Keith "the Homeboy" Grodie announced the major personnel switch at a news conference with Aynrand present, but insisted the move was not a demotion for Aynrand, who was recently approved as chancellor after serving as Deputy of the Medical Center for 243 years.

Insiders familiar with the situation have hinted that the move was a direct result of a mammoth power struggle for control of the University between the gigantic Medical Center and the Allen Building.

Grodie congratulated Aynrand on his new job, saying the former Deputy would "boost an already prestigious position to new heights of power and glory."

Aynrand exhibited a taut grin on his wrinkled face when asked to comment on his new position, followed by a prepared answer.

"I like my good friend and confidante Keith Grodie. I know that he knows without a doubt what is best for me," Aynrand wheezed through gritted teeth. He referred all other questions to his official minion, "Downtown" Freddie Brown.

Brown later released comments from

Swiss getaway weekends key to Contra-Capital Campaign scam

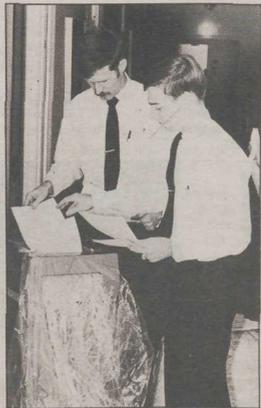

By GHOR BANIFAR

The ever-widening web of corruption surrounding the Iran-Contra scandal extended its tentacles to Durham Thursday when Special Prosecutor Lawrence Walsh revealed that Capital Campaign funds have been diverted to provide assistance for the Contra rebels.

Campaign director Jol Fleshguy declined to comment directly on the allegation, but pledged to cooperate fully with the investigation. "Nobody likes to tell stories as much as I do," Fleshguy told reporters during his daily meeting with the press. "I'm prepared to tell the good, the bad and the ugly." He said these are the essential elements of every fairy tale.

Walsh said investigators initially became suspicious after Swissair airline records revealed frequent visits by Fleshguy to Switzerland. The trail eventually led to the University when bank officials notified Walsh that the Campaign had actually reached its $200 million goal last spring, but account balances had subsequently dropped significantly prior to another of Fleshguy's jaunts to Geneva.

Federal officials conducted an early morning raid Thursday on the Campaign's headquarters in Old Chemistry building in an effort to seize any records pertaining to the possible embezzlement of contributions. But the mission was foiled when the officials discovered that the offices had been completely stripped of all documents,

Pardue really sports feathers

By FOGHORN LEGHORN

In an announcement that rocked the administration, director of University relations Lenny Pardue confirmed that his identity was really that of Frank Perdue, the poultry magnate and owner of Perdue Farms.

Pardue, or rather now Perdue, made his startling revelation after allegedly being confronted by DOOFUS head cook Barry Scarface about suspicions Scarface had about Perdue's, make that Pardue's, real identity.

Scarface said his suspicions originated from constant nagging by Pærdue that DOOFUS offer more chicken entries.

"He had been bugging me for almost three months to get more chicken on the menus," Scarface said. "He was real happy when we introduced those new improved chicken lips at the Rat. But then he found out they were from Holly Farms, and beat on the pasta machine with a iron pipe before we could calm him down."

"Lenny, or is it Frank, was almost as much of a pain in the ass as those bloody milkshake workers at Licks," Scerbo said

Trustees call a parking meter home to investigate crowding

By MEIMUS STAKE

Public Indecency officers evicted three trustees from a parking meter yesterday in the Bryan Center parking lot immediately following their discovery by an unwitting Chomicle reporter.

"What the hell was I supposed to do?" said Trinity sophomore Lay Mexkuse, while awaiting interrogation in the Public Indecency dungeon on Crampus Drive. "I parked daddy's bimmer in the handicapped spot, and was just about to skip off without putting anything in the meter, when I noticed an officer hanging out by the circle. So I dropped a nickel in, turned the handle, and they just sort of tumbled out."

Mexkuse was unable to avoid turning in the squatters. "I think I woke them up or something, but they were standing around looking sort of dazed, and one was asking for some Toadie or Loadie, or maybe it was Gloatie guy when the officer swaggered over. I just asked him if he knew about these dudes." The officer immediately arrested Mexkuse and had him bound in leg irons and a 'Dumbass is God' t-shirt. The three trustees were immediately apologized to and escorted to a nearby mailbox for the remainder of their campus stay.

The trustees, three of a grope of six looking into student complaints of oversized rooms and excessive parking space, had spent the last three months in the parking meter. Though they were pleased to be housed on West campus, they were less than thrilled with the living conditions.

"I can see why the students are pissed about this 'expanded double' business," said Pay Demoff, CEO of Isaac Ite Pharmaceuticals. "I've done my share of time in crowded apartments, but this thing just did an overnight express number on the proverbial cake. It wasn't too bad with just the two of us, but having to make room for the third really put a cramp in our social style. The guy wanted to put in a waterbed, and there just wasn't room."

The three apparently made use of Bryan Center facilities as needed. "Yeah, we had keys, so we could get in any time. We'd have some ice cream from Slurps, read other people's mail, then hang out in the ASDU offices and xerox body parts."

When their investigation began, they had expected to spend only a few nights in the meter, but as time wore on, it became almost a second home. "Nobody bothered us, really. Even the Public Indecency guys were reasonable about it. As long as we phoned in a few illegally parked cars every week, they didn't bother us a bit. I did get tired of putting a quarter in the slot every time I came home, though."

Public Indecency babblerperson Luber Lips declined to comment on the lack of earlier action. "Let's just say that they made the Bryan Center lot shift a profitable one. Where do you let a 500-pound cat in need of a trip to DUPAC sleep? Anywhere he wants."

radius know just how gosh-awful expensive the car is."

A pay scale for the valets has yet to be established. "I would think they should be honored for the opportunity to take a spin in a high performance vehicle," Ferrari said haughtily.

Apparently, an overwhelming number of students applying for valet positions has left the traffic office in a bind.

"These damn little urchins are multiplying faster than an pre-med figuring out his GPA," Ferrari complained. "President Keith] Grodie keeps saying how he wants to increase the number of work-study peasants, but I just don't think he realizes the huge responsibility he is placing on us, the bourgeoisie, to care for the poor."

while making himself a milkshake at Licks. At a press conference that was only attended by a reporter from the Duke Dialogue, Pardue revealed the reasoning behind his disguise. In order to enable Perdue Farms to better compete with rival Holy Farms, Lenny/ Frank said he needed a job down South.

"I looked for the longest time trying to find a decent job where I would get some respect," the two-faced former public relations director slobbered. "Posing as Keith's [Grodie, University master] press secretary was a breeze. I just got this hairpiece, grew a beard and bought some glasses. It's not like I have to do anything for this job, you know."

But the schizophrenic chicken farmer/public relations censor refused to resign his position.

"Hey, like, think about it. The way I see it is that this University is gonna get some real good publicity out of this affair," Pardue reasoned. "Besides, Keith likes chicken in a big way." Grodie would not commit himself to firing his press assistant, waffling as usual on the issue.

"Well, he's got a point," Grodie marveled, in awe of Pardue's amazing intellect. "He's telling the truth; I do just love fried chicken. And plus he goes with me to all those lunches with the Chomicle gang and helps me out of a jam after I reveal highly classified material."

accurate," said team leader Jack Iche. "This is a 150-foot statue, which is about 900 times actual ATO size."

Funding for the structure was provided wholly by the alumni association of the Delta Delta Delta sorority, which has been pushing for the statue for many years. "It's about time Brodie did something," exclaimed Lucy Joosey, president of the association. "We've been after him to get it up for years."

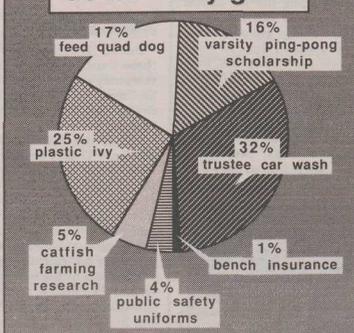

The project will include a pair of internal elevators going up to the top of the organ, where an observation deck will allow visitors to view the surrounding area. Housing representative Troy Jann said both elevators will operate at different times, but they will be unable to run simultaneously. "Some things are just logistically impossible," Jann said.

Jann added that a plastic tarp will be used to cover the organ at night and during inclement weather. The tarp will measure 6,000 square feet and will be stored in a large foil packet in the basement of the Divinity school.

"You never know what can happen when you expose an organ to the elements," Jann said. "But, as I always say, better safe than sorry."

Grodie said the organ would be the first on the campus of a major university. "I'm just delighted that Duke has taken the leadership role in this effort," Brodie said. "They might have the same idea at Princeton, but we'll get it up faster."

Crotch takes N.J. on the road

By HAPLESS HALFWIT

TRENTON, N.J. — Jersey governor Ed Crotch announced in a news conference Wednesday a "back to basics" plan in which he will relocate to Durm and rekindle the failed campaign to recall Durm Mayor Wide Gulley.

Although he declined to confirm allegations that he intends to usurp mayoral authority in Durm, he was overheard repeatedly muttering "I'll show them who's in charge. Those country bumpkins are no match for my city sharpened wits."

"I'm sick and tired of being called the mayor of NewYak when in fact all I do every day is run the Garbage state," Crotch wheezed. "We're all moving to Durm. It's a hopping town and I love the East-West Expressway."

Crotch advocated change, calling it "the only way to protect the American dream," and describing Gulley, now in his second term, as an autocrat. "Power corrupts; absolute power, absolutely," he exclaimed righteously. "It is undemocratic to allow Gulley to fulfill an entire term without a challenge of his authority."

Crotch criticized the city dweller mentality that revolves around trash and traf-fic-jams. "What we're really fighting for is a dishwasher in every house. Also a dog to play with and a woman to cook, to really round out the American dream."

All the hoopla started after an underground resistance movement led by Tommy Caine of mutiny fame — the whatever we want it to be," snapped Jay Grunt, RJB chair and president of the K-mArt fraternity. "We are totally impartial, despite the fact I got galled by SAEs. I wanted to be a KA all the time, though. Really, I did."

Modifications to the Erwin Square complex will be necessary to accommodate the Elitists, who bought their present section from the University years ago. Changes will include a private airstrip for members' jets and a hair salon to keep those coifs looking perfect. With the help of a substantial bribe, the present Erwin occupants are being evicted so the fraternity can take up residence for the fall semester. "If the University can kick out tenants, why can't we?" one brother reasoned.

"We wanted to move into University Tower, you know, the green thing on the way to Chapel Hill that Tommy Stone's daddy built?" Luckless said. "We felt it really symbolized what the fraternity is all about. But people could hurt themselves in those elevators after a night of partying. Seventeen stories down an elevator shaft could ruin what plastic surgery and braces took years to accomplish. So we chose the Square instead."

Although the social schedule is tentative, the fraternity plans to have kegs every night and bands every weekend.

The Keep Kappas Glamorous (KKG) sorority plans to establish direct limousine service between Canterbury dorm and the Square to keep social relations. "They used to be right next door," lamented one crestfallen groupie. "But Erwin Square is soooo cool. How much more exclusive can you get?"

federal officials refused to explain how the files were uncovered.

Witch led investigators to the second floor of Allen building where a group of Marine Option Navy ROTC midshipmen were found busily shredding Campaign records while Fleshguy supervised, sipping a glass of '88 Wild Irish Rose. Fleshguy explained that he recruited the future Marines because of the Corps' reputation for excellence in destroying evidence.

Former ASSDU President Janis Revolting, an employee of the Campaign, is also under investigation. "I'm just a data enterer," Janis said in a nasal monotone. "But Jol tells me I'm so much more than that to him."

H. University H. President Keith Grodie defended Fleshguy, claiming that the University has had no connection with the Contras and that it is merely a coincidence that both Contra-leader Adolph Bolero and President Reagan have visited campus recently. "I'm not going to stand for these blatantly false accusations," Grodie lied. "I'm not a pot[te]d plant," he said from his greenhouse office.

Gang of Four terrorizes campus

By GEORGE THE MILKMAN

A student was attacked by a gang of four Thursday night on the Bryan Center walkway. And while Duke Public Safety officers scoured the area for clues, another more terrifying figure joined the effort to find the culprits.

"They're not getting away with this. The ASDU bylaws clearly say that any group that uses University facilities for its activities must be chartered," excreted Manure Pyle, ASDU extraordinaire.

Pyle said he will urge a movement at See MARAUDING on page 15

$92 million stolen from Durham CCB

compiled. The suspect was seen fleeing the scene in a dark, late model Mustang convertible.

Police have contacted Capital Campaign officials to discuss the amazing coincidence of the $92 million theft and yesterday's announcement of the $92 million contribution to the University. Although they blessed the press with comments about the gift, Campaign workers would not say one word about the robbery. "Business as usual," sneered publicity strong man Robert Wrong. "You won't get any more info out of us for another five years."

But Joel Mazola, Campaign director, reportedly contacted his travel agent yesterday, demanding "get me out of the country on a fast boat to South America. First class, of course."

Lack of cooperation notwithstanding, police have questioned Capital Campaign flunky James Moon about the incident, as he matches the suspect description exactly. Moon still insists he was at The Chomicle offices all Wednesday afternoon. "Honest, I like hanging out there with all my friends."

"That's a lie," countered Ace Adams, Chomicle guru who sees the comings and goings of the entire office. "Moon didn't even stick his little toe over the threshold. No one but me is in the office in the afternoon anyway. The staffers are way too busy cutting class, sleeping or making up stories."

Campaign reaches $200 million goal

think that's too much to ask, do you?"

University president Keith Grodie suggested that Dense form his own school as "this one just doesn't care anymore."

Grodie and Mazola appeared at a press conference later in the day to announce that part of the Campaign funds would go toward a defense fund for young alumni. "We may need to take up a collection for that one," Mazola said. "It's running a little low."

At the conclusion of the conference Grodie said he was pleased to have completed the Campaign. "Joel, you're fired," he exclaimed with glee. "I never want to watch you pour a cup of tea again."

"PROVE IT!"

That was always the response to grade school friends who said or claimed unbelievable things. Remember? You might still be asking for proof on bigger topics—like how to deal with grief over a friend's death, or where to find a more permanent source of happiness and fulfillment. Even how to be healed of a sickness. And asking for proof—for a solution—is a reasonable request.

A magazine called the Christian Science Sentinel has articles and testimonies of healing that explain how an intelligent understanding of God solves problems and permanently heals sickness. "Prove it," you say? The proof is there, page after page.

No holes in our logic

Bruegger's bagels are the best. That's our edit topic for today. We were going to break tradition and write an insightful, thought-provoking editorial about an interesting topic that might fundamentally affect the University, but we reconsidered. We're the people who get together every Sunday to throw food at each other and ask everybody if they got any the night before. In two hours we manage to spew out five ideas for the week's staff editorials, which we print in this special type so more people will read it.

During our last 1 p.m. editorial board meeting after we had finished tossing around dumb ideas that totally lacked fact and pertinence, the idea came to us. Just as Laura Trivial reached for her Chomicle-record sixth bagel of the meeting, everybody commented at once on how good they tasted.

Anyway, we all decided that Bruegger's does bagels right. It was the first time the board had ever agreed on something for which they had some sort of evidence.

We wanted desperately to vacate our stuffy little edit lounge, but we had to make it look like there had been some debate before the vote. Peter Amen, our moral-majority photog editor, tried to slip in some yucky conservative viewpoint, but he was immediately pegged in the head by an onion bagel.

Finally, Kath Celibate, our editor-elect, raised her hand, stared dramatically at the ravaged cereal box that lay at her feet, paused to brush Cheerio crumbs from her jumper, started to say something meaningful, then belched.

That was our signal to vote, and vote we did. The proposal passed by a 6-2 tally, just like always, because none of us know how to count.

If you want insight, debate and an intelligent volley of point and counterpoint, read the Dumb Boring Herald. If you want bagels, though, go to Bruegger's.

Furthermore, we want you to know that neither of us have ever had sex.

LITTER POLICY

The Chomicle urges all its readers to send their letters elsewhere.

But if you must send them to us, letters to the editor should be delivered in person to The Chomicle office, two stories above Dean Sue's den of inquisition. You are not allowed to use the stairs.

Letters must be typed and double-spaced, and on premium bond paper. Letters cost $1.50 for the first 30 words, and 10 cents for each additional word. Headlines are $3.00 extra.

They must be signed and dated and must include the author's class or department, parents' salaries, phone number, local address, eyecolor and shoeseize.

The Chomicle will publish all letters from the editor's father.

The Chomicle reserves the right to edit for meaning and to make the authors look silly if the letter is boring. The editors have no discretion.

The Chomicle does not guarantee to publish the original text or anything vaguely resembling letters the editorial staff disagrees with.

Keep America beautiful, don't write letters that we will just trash, anyway.

Off the record

Do you only sell dead chickens?

Kappa Sig pledge, on the phone with Pete Rinaldi's

Blah, blah, academic dishonesty, blah, blah, Pink Floyd

'Twas brillig, and the slithy toves did gyre and gimble in the wabe. I just lit a cigarette and stared, thinking about how sick and twisted the University is.

God, I love the phrase "sick and twisted." I try to use it in every column — along with a quote from The Who or Floyd, so people see I'm not just erudite, I'm hip as well — but my editor thinks it's stupid and we fight about it every week. He's sick and twisted too.

Anyway, where was I? Oh yeah, I was showing off my expert knowledge of Lewis Carroll's poem "Jabberwocky." This is indeed a complex work, understood only by me and most children between the ages of 8-12, forced to read it by fascist schoolteachers.

And that is why I chose to pervert this poem in my column. (Actually, it's because I don't have much of a writing style, so I have to copy other people's, but you've probably guessed that by now.) Fascism has slowly seeped its way into the American educational system like an itchy, slimy frog jumping into the fish pond in the Gardens.

Where's the point? Tony Rambelonski

Did that last sentence gross you out? Did it make sense? Great minds like mine are constantly pondering those very questions. Some like to do it in bed, more active ones prefer to do it in the library, but I do it on the library steps. While smoking a pipe and staring down the tip of my nose at people who dare to kick hacksacks around in the sun. Would-be fascists.

That reminds me of a quote by R.E.M.:
*If your world is a monster that mumble, mumble you whole,
Mumble, mumble, hmmpf, groan, now
La, la, la, la, la bamba.*
Ah, Michael Stipe is a true philosopher for the modern age. Just like me.
Usually I have at least 15 inches of space to tell society what is wrong with it, but today the editor won't give me as much — he's too simple-minded to understand the importance of my weekly message. This means I have to get to my point more quickly. I am so inconvenienced by this fascist newspaper.

Here's my point. (Take notes, because I'm only going to say it once.) There are lots of sick and twisted things about the University. But the most evil, repulsive, vile, odious, foul, corrupt, wicked and depraved — isn't that an amazing bit of writing? Can you tell I used a thesaurus? — thing at Duke is the girl I took to the G-A semi-formal in my freshman year because she went home with another guy.

And so, as I light another cigarette and curse loudly because I put the wrong end to my mouth, this is a public call-to-arms of all student activists: Stop wasting your time taking back the night and boycotting grapes; join me as I lead the revolution while sitting on my ass in front of the library.

The only good man is a dead man; nyah nyah, nyah, nyaah

College is the greatest place in the world. I mean, I love it. And, of course, what would college be without fraternities. Those lovely little organizations of boys who "just wanna have fun." Smoking, drinking, picking up girls, doing drugs, climbing campus buildings, raping dates, abusing pledges, maybe killing them in the process... Gee, fraternities sure are swell.

Am I being too harsh? I hope so, because I hate fraternities with every bit of estrogen in my body.

What is a fraternity anyway? It's just a bunch of dumb guys who wear the same dumb Greek letters on their shirts, have dumb meetings every week and live together in the same dumb house. They're really dumb.

Barefoot & pregnant Liz Organ

Bitch, bitch, bitch, bitch,
bitch, bitch, bitch, bitch,
bitch.

Here's an example of how dumb fraternities are: I was walking down the quad to my weekly Womens' Studies dorm meeting yesterday to present the group with my ideas for a dorm t-shirt. All of a sudden, a fraternity guy walks out from behind a corner with a baseball bat in his hand. Immediately perceiving this as a threat from the patriarchal establishment, I kicked him in a part of his body that I do not have, and I'm not envious in the least.

He fell on the ground, screaming hostile obscenities at me. So I kicked him again. Harder. He rolled over and made some typical male chauvinistic remark like, "Shit, a guy can't even play baseball on this campus anymore."

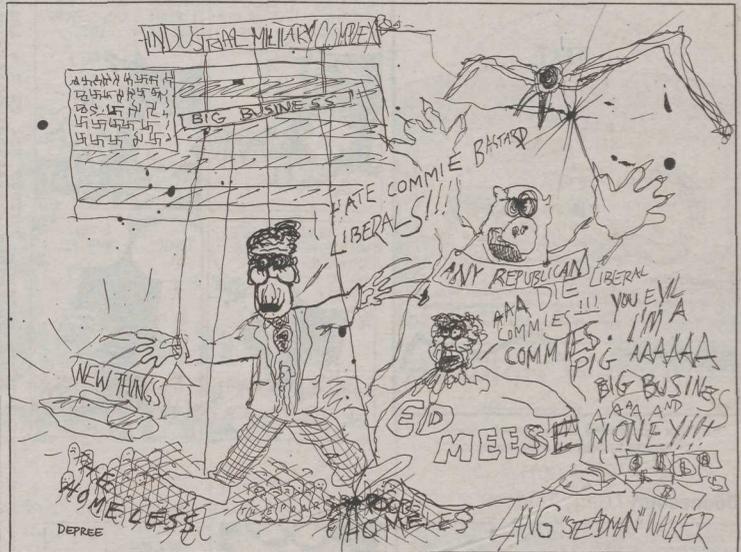

This was the last straw. As he lay there, whimpering beside his wooden phallic symbol, I shrieked in the obnoxious, grating voice that I usually save for the office: "Oh yeah, well, women have never been allowed to play baseball in the male-dominated major leagues! Think about that the next time you grip your bat!"

I walked away from that immobile musclehead, still fuming. I knew the only way to calm down was to say the Womens' Studies motto over and over in my head: "Men are yucky, men are yucky..." I began to feel better. And empowered. (That's feminist slang for a surge of adrenaline, but don't tell anyone, because it sounds like something guys do. Yucky.)

You may have noticed by now that I pulled this column out of my ass at the last minute. Well, at least you can't say I'm inconsistent: I do that every week.

However, unlike my other columns, this one has a point. Or have you guessed. Well, maybe I'll just be subtle and let you figure it out.

I HATE MEN!!!!
Liz Organ was never too good at being subtle.

Dude! here's how to read the edit page

Owwwww. My head hurts. Why do I write my columns at the end of the week? Hold on, let me get some aspirin... actually, better make that Motrin with a Smirnoff chaser — this motherf**king hangover is killing me.
You know, it's not easy being the most popular columnist on campus, especially when you belong to a sleazy fraternity. But then again, just look at the competition. The Chomicle's columnists are like a bowl of healthy cereal: A collection of fruits, nuts and flakes.

Lots of neat categories and jokes.

So, here for your entertainment and mental atrophy is the official "Ted Swollen's Guide to the Edit Page." Like my guides to everything else, this is supposed to be funny, was easy to write, required minimal research on my part, and uses sweeping generalizations and sexual innuendos to get cheap laughs. I really should be "Monday, Monday."

Steve Buckle-up-for-safety: I see Steve in church all the time, but I still think he should lighten up. So far, he's criticized drinking, drugs, sex and graffiti — What does the poor boy do on the weekends? I think he follows me around, takes notes on what I do, and then goes back to his room and condemns it in his Monday column.

I guess his next piece will be about habitrails.
BAD: Wrong initials. Should be TA. I really wanted to be "Monday, Monday."

Shawn Garrulous: When you write letters to com-

The moron's laughter Ted Swollen

plain about Shawn's columns, make sure the operative pronoun is "she" instead of "he," or else she'll get angry and kick your teeth in. This is because she has a confused sexual identity. What kind of woman writes columns on basketball? Next thing you know she'll copy me and start ragging on sororities.

Shearon Harris: The columnist, not the nuclear reactor. Her problem is that she can't control her bias. For example, when she wrote about the Phi Kap scandal, she completely ignored what was happening to the Phi Delt. I never would have made such a mistake.

Liz Organ: The third of Ed's Edit Page Angels. Feminist. Anti-fraternity. Rarely drinks. Wakes up in the morning. We have nothing in common.

Spuds McKenzie: Anti-feminist. Pro-fraternity. Rarely sober. Never seen the light of day. I like this guy.

Stone Wall: Don't read it — you'll get brain cancer.
Robertson Babbie: Uses too many big words.
Tony Rambelonski: See Stone Wall.

Jeff Rhinestone: Gee, I don't know what to say about Jeff: He's such a nice boy. I think he gets his material from Alan Alda and Richard Simmons. When that boy finally releases all his sexual frustration, windows are going to shatter. Fortunately for the windows, there's no threat lurking in the near future.

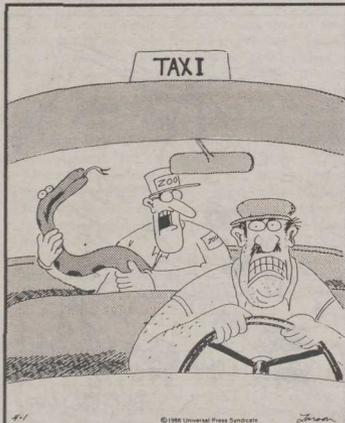

I think I've made my point. Now I'm going back to sleep. See you in a few weeks. Maybe.

Aynrand to direct DUMBies

■ BACKSTABBING from page 4

Aynrand through Medical Center propaganda minister May Killer. "I am overjoyed to be named director of DUMB. I love music and I love sports. I also love Iron Dukes. And of course, I love Keith, especially that cool plaid shirt splashed with 19 different colors that he wears."

Grodie repeatedly denied rumors of a rift between himself and the new band director.

"Uh, I know rumor has it that, uh, Billy and I have, uh, disagreements from time to time about, uh, minor matters, but really, the, uh, absurd notion that this is a, uh, demotion is just simply, uh, preposterous," Grodie asserted with a slight thrust of his hand for emphasis.

But other sources contradicted Grodie's assertions, noting many conflicts between the two "power brokers" throughout their respective careers.

"Those two have been at each other's throats ever since Grodie came to the gargantuan Med Center to play psychiatrist," explained Joel Cholesterol, director of the Lets-Make-Wine-Together Campaign. "Once I found Billy putting sugar in the gas tank of Keith's yellow Mercedes. But the next day Keith supposedly circulated photos of Billy hanging out at the Hide-away with a hot little freshman," Cholesterol squealed, rubbing his gout-ridden hands in glee. "Those two just add so much spice to my life!"

Vyle explodes, ASDU mourns

"Dave had a lot of guts," said Heeve Long, extramarital affairs committee chair. "It's such a shame he couldn't keep them all in the same zip code."

A motion was made to embalm the body, which had been sitting in the corner of the ASDU office all week due to bureaucratic complications. Later it was decided that Vyle would be buried in his file cabinet, which had contained his failed bylaws, resolutions and amendments, nullified student club constitutions, and an autographed copy of Robert's Rules of Order.

IN OTHER BUSINESS: The meeting was disrupted when 40 women representing the Coalition for a Male-Free Campus tried to lynch Isuzu, who paused from massaging Bambi Brainless, a junior at Durham High School, to bang his gavel.

"Ooh, Jose, you're so big and I just love it when you're so forceful," Brainless giggled.

The comments touched off several rounds of debate, after which the legislature decided Isuzu was neither big nor forceful, and voluntarily surrendered him to the Coalition.

In an attempt to scare off the onslaught of angry women, Isuzu dropped his pants, whereupon members of the Coalition castrated him and left the room.

Hicks want SSC in other guy's backyard

By RUTHIE WESTHEIMER

BUSHY FORK — Local residents expressed outrage over the proposed supercondom (SSC) at a public hearing Thursday night.

"Ah don't think this thing'll be proper to be round my chilluns," pontificated Jim-Bob Brown, a resident of the Better Dead than Red subdivision in Rougehell.

The SSC will be a $4.4 billion ring-shaped facility, 53 miles in diameter, which will allow scientists to study the sexual behavior of lower life forms.

North Carolina is one of seven sexually repressed states currently being considered as sites for the SSC.

"We've got more rednecks here in North Carolina than any other state could possibly dream of," blabbered Al Awshucks, a therapist for sexually deprived academicians on Science Drive, and chair of the Governor's technical advisory panel for the SSC. "If the government wants to study the sexual behaviour of lower-life forms, North Carolina citizens should give them more subjects than they ever dreamed of."

But local rednecks refused to listen to the voice of reason and raised silly irrelevant arguments against the SSC.

"The SSC is Satan incarnate," screamed Fundamentally Oral Jordan, dictator of the Hitler Youth Baptist Church in Rougehell. "I believe in the separation of church and intelligence, but this time intelligence has crossed over into my domain." If the SSC comes to North Carolina, the state will have to purchase approximately five square feet of land currently belonging to the Hitler Youth Church in Rougehell.

"North Carolina needs to have the SSC erected in our state," lied Tsar MacCornball, the governor's sexual advisor, a very impotent man. "The SSC will bring thousands of new sexual diseases to the state, bringing new research jobs to the only competent institution in this state, Catawba Valley Technical College."

Gang of Four hits campus in attack

■ MARAUDING from page 8

Monday's ASDU meeting to ban the gang from ever again using University facilities. "That'll show them," Pyle sniffed as he waddled away.

Meanwhile, Public Safety officers could offer no description of the suspects. A spokesperson did say, however, that the department will step up its efforts of rounding up black students with no good cause.

"We have no reason at all to believe that any black student was involved in the attack," breathed Robert Captain, Dean of Public Safety.

Crotch makes plans to dethrone Gulley

mighty omnipotent overseer of the New Jersey Toinpikie, which snakes through the governor's mansion, that ribbon of concrete potency representative of American society — attempted to annex all of the roads in the Garbage State.

"I really like the words really and randomness," Caine digressed, repeatedly chanting, "roving randomness readies reserves."

"I'm not gonna let Crotch take my highways apart," Caine roared. "That's just anarchy. All the states funds come from those lovely little lanes of human hope. The elimination of the heavenly highways would destroy the postal system because there wouldn't be any more exits."

Contradicting his back to basics theme, Crotch complained that Durm was underdeveloped. "Yeah, and Durm really needs a subway system and an automat, where you pump in some cash and it pumps back some product."

Gullie responded by drawing in his thick Arkansas brogue, "Those rich kids, always getting into a tingling, titillating tizzy over nothing which a good slap on the ass couldn't cure. I've never been to an automat and I'm still here."

I NOW CAN FACE THE SHOCKING FACT THAT I NEED SOME PROFESSIONAL HELP.

Yogi Berra to replace Krzyzewski as Blue Devil coach

By JAY HAWKS

In the aftermath of Dook's withdrawal from the 1988 NCAA's, Coach Mike Krzyzewski will quit and he will be replaced by Yogi "Buckwheat" Berra, according to an exclusive scoop obtained by the Polish Interplanetary News Service (PINS).

Krzyzewski will become the head coach of Poland's Women's Olympic basketball team and Berra will sign a multi-month contract as the new boss of the Dook drib-blers.

The startling, sudden switch, which has erupted repercussions from Chapel Hill to Indiana to the Kremlin, came after super secret negotiations involving Krzyzewski, Berra, Duke poobahs, Polish Communists and the United Nations.

Dook president H. Keith H. Bodybuilder and Director of Athletics Tom Margarine have made two trips to the Falkland Islands, traveling by nuclear submarine, in the last month to meet au naturel with Berra, currently the czar of Little League Baseball in the Falklands, according to PINS.

Krzyzewski, after pointing out that he's making a gut-wrenching personal sacrifice by cashing in his DUES meal card, said he will return to the ancestral homeland with his family in an effort to high-five world bliss by teaching woman-to-woman defense. Krzyzewski will also take a million Duke "Triple Crown" T-shirts with him to thwart a massive propaganda attack launched by Polish enemies who claim the Tar Holes are really the No. 1 hoops team.

"I love Dook," said Krzyzewski, as he sobbed into a hanky provided by his close pal Lou Bello, the world-famous former ACC referee and whistle blower. "But Poland, and probably the world, needs me to help prevent brainwashing by those dastardly Tar Holes.

"Plus, have you ever seen those POLISH WOMEN? What AMAZONS they are! I've already scouted the Polish roster and they've built, er, they have a woman with faster hands than Billy King, a woman who can outjump Robert Bricey, and two who are taller than Danny Ferry. But, to be honest, there's only one Polish woman in the whole country more beautiful than Quin Snyder.

"I think within a year, the Polish gals can beat the L.A. Lakers."

When PINS contacted Coach Dean Smith at his office in Chapel Hill, the long-time smoketack of the Tar Holes, who lost three times to Dook this past season, said: "I'm so happy Krzyzewski is getting out of town, but Yogi is one shrewd dude. You're never quite sure what he says is what he means. He's a master of malaprops. I'm scared of going one-on-one against Yogi in a press conference.

"Tell Mike I'm available any time, night or day, to help him pack, and I'll be delighted to drive him to the airport. Hell, I'll even buy his plane ticket to Poland. I've

Baseball wins; losing streak is over

By BOB BROWBEATER

The Duke baseball team won a miraculous 5-4 game over North Carolina with the services of 1987 graduate Kent Hetrick on the mound. Kevin Burrin hit a ninth-inning homer to win it after the Blue Devils had fallen behind 4-0 in the first inning.

The win comes a day after the Tar Heels pounded Duke 21-9 and ends a twelve game losing streak. The addition of Hetrick was the key as he went the distance and struck out 17 batters.

"Well, he's a great player, a real talented kid," Duke Coach Steve Traylor said. "His performance inspired the rest of the team out there today. It's one of the finest things I've ever seen."

Hetrick used his last day in Durham before returning to professional baseball to help his former teammates discover what it is like to win again. Last summer, Hetrick was on the Salt Lake City Trappers minor league team that won a record 27 straight games.

"When I was on the Trappers we thought we'd win every game," Hetrick said. "But here, I saw the guys were a little down — they didn't seem to think they could ever win again. I just went out there and tried to convince them they could win a game."

If the Blue Devils were excited by Hetrick's presence, it didn't show in the first inning. It appeared early that the Tar Heels might repeat the drubbing they gave the Blue Devils Wednesday.

Hetrick struck out the first batter but five consecutive errors by the Blue Devils, including two on one play, allowed North Carolina to score four unearned runs. Duke got out of the inning on a routine double play that had the coaching staff on its feet celebrating.

"We were so pumped up, we forgot to catch the ball," explained shortstop Doug Eastman, who had one of the errors but made a spectacular diving grab to start the double play.

In the bottom half of the first, John Furch hit a two-run homer after leadoff hitter Rick Torgalski got on the bases with a single. A North Carolina error allowed David Hawkins to reach base but the Blue Devils could not get him home.

Hetrick controlled the Tar Heels by striking out seven batters in the next three innings. No Carolina players reached base again until the fifth. Hetrick gave Darin Campbell a free ride on four straight balls but another double play cleared the bases and Hetrick got a strikeout to end the inning.

The Blue Devils were still down, 4-2, in the sixth but David Norman hit a solo homer to close the margin to one. Meanwhile, Hetrick struck out five consecutive batters to breeze through the sixth and seventh innings.

In the bottom of the seventh, Rich Bevilina and Eastman hit consecutive singles to put runners on first and third. Furch connected for a ground-rule double and the score was tied at four.

It remained tied until the ninth. After Hetrick struck out the side to the delight of a frenzied crowd, the scene was set for Burrin. Despite going hitless in his first four at bats, Traylor struck with him.

"After Kent struck out those last three guys, I couldn't hold the tears back," Traylor said. "Then I wasn't paying attention and [Burrin] got up there and he took the first pitch before I could get a pinch hitter out there to bat for him."

The count went to 0-2 before Burrin bothered to lift the bat off his shoulder. The fans were looking for help in the on-deck circle but on the next pitch Burrin hit a towering, tape-measure homer 442 feet over left-center field. The standing-room-only crowd ran onto the field and started a bonfire.

"I was so psyched after Kent struck out the side," an ecstatic Burrin said about his first homer of the year. "I just swung as hard as I could and somehow I hit it." "We never thought Kevin would ever nail one like that," Traylor admitted. "But I've always thought he was a great player, a real talented kid."

Burrin got the game winner but Furch was the main offensive weapon as he knocked in Duke's first four runs. Furch leads the Blue Devils in most offensive categories this year.

"John's pulled through for us all year," Traylor said. "He's a great player, a real talented kid. If everyone else was hitting like he is, we'd be in more of these ball games."

"But this one was won by Kent," Traylor added. "Those Tar Heels don't know what hit them today. We really pulled one on them — they think that was Chris Smith was out there."

Hetrick wore Smith's uniform and the 30,496 fans were confused initially by the switch. After Hetrick tipped his hat [and identity] to the crowd in the 3rd inning, the Blue Devil students were aware of what was going on.

According to University of North Carolina officials, Tar Heel coach Mike Roberts can't read or write. Roberts can recognize numbers and follows the game and players that way.

"None of those guys on that team can read," Traylor laughed. "That's why I don't mind telling people we used Kent — they'll never find out. The dumbest one is that relief pitcher they have — Jackson, but he's a real talented player nonetheless."

Ryan Jackson, a 6-7 giant, hails from South Carolina and has created an uproar at Carolina home games. Apparently when he pitches, he makes a lot of noise while reading the signs from the catcher. North Carolina University officials were forced to hire a professional hog-caller from Iowa to get the Tar Heel fans off the field and back in the stands.

The Duke fans rushed onto the field at Jack Coombs Field and celebrated after the Blue Devils won their first game of the month of March.

"Hopefully we can use this win to start a winning streak through the month of April," Traylor said as he threw old bats into the bonfire at home plate.

Soccer signs Andre and Hulk Hogan while Tom Limestone marries Vanna

Tom Limestone will stop chasing soccer balls and settle down with Vanna White.

By PATSY JACK

Duke soccer coach John Rambo made two startling announcements at a Thursday press conference hosted by the Hideaway Bar.

1) One of Duke's 1987 co-captains, Tom Limestone, plans to marry Vanna White.

2) The Blue Devils have signed two of the most popular men in professional wrestling, Hulk Hogan and Andre the Giant, to soccer scholarships.

Rambo, who will be the best man for the future nuptials, said Vanna "really spun his wheel" describing the swift, torrid romance between the Duke soccer star and the Hollywood glamour girl.

"Tommy just looks so c-u-t-e and d-r-e-a-m-y in his soccer briefs," cooed Vanna. "To tell you the truth, I really had a crush on Billy Queen of the Duke basketball team, but Tommy won my heart when he took me to his dad's p-a-l-a-c-e in the sky. There's a better view from the Limestone p-e-n-t-h-o-u-s-e than from the Duke Church."

Limestone said he and his bride will split their time between L.A. and their new luxury skybox condo at the Duke Soccer Stadium. When their first child arrives, Limestone said he will stay home to wash diapers so Vanna can keep feeding the fantasies of countless lust-filled American men.

After dozens of reporters, including Robin Leach, dashed to the phones following his first announcement, Rambo then introduced life-size photos of Hulk Hogan and Andre the Giant to the assembled media, which included Gore Vidal.

"We need tough dudes who can body slam our opponents," grunted Rambo. "Soccer's ain't no sport for wimps. Aint' nobody from Clemson or Carolina gonna mess with us again, or I'll have Hulk or Andre ram their heads into the goalpost. If Andre played in the goal, ain't nobody gonna get near it even if they could see where it was behind him."

The 495-pound Andre the Giant, in a phone interview, asked only one question: "How's the chow at Duke? I'm coming and I could eat a dozen quad dogs."

Indiana Coach Bobby Knight, one of Krzyzewski's most precious friends, told PINS: "a #%-#(-#). I can't believe this #*(%#9&. I'm going to blast that #(*%&%% impotent United Nations. We can't afford to lose an American hero like Krzyzewski. We need him as a future United States Olympic coach. I'm going to call Mike's Mom in Chicago and she'll ask the Pope to stop all this nonsense."

"And besides, everybody knows Yogi only plays zone."

A spokesperson for the United Nations said Krzyzewski will also arrange basketball games between Poland, NATO and the Harlem Globetrotters.

A high-ranking Russian leader, reached at the Kremlin, told PINS he had only one comment: "I hope now I can visit the Cameron Zoo and sit with my friends from BOG."

Berra, who has never coached a basketball team before, has gained his fame and fortune as a baseball Hall of Famer. Berra said he plans to appoint Billy Martin as his primary assistant coach.

Asked by PINS if he was worried about his lack of basketball experience, Berra said: "I love Dook. A lot of people from Joisy go to Dook. Hey, I've got a better vertical jump than Mike. I can outjump him off the bench when Dook stomps the Tar Hoies."

"Plus I've got two secret weapons. I'm the only guy in the world with a bigger nose than Dean Smith, and I can burp louder than he can."

H. Keith H. Bodybuilder said Berra, who earned two graduate degrees from Chapel Hill Junior High, will also teach a graduate seminar in tobacco chewing and how to properly use a fungo bat.

"I'm going to get Yogi to teach me how to throw a screwball and how to flip baseball cards," said Bodybuilder. "I can't wait to take Billy Martin to the Hideaway Bar. Billy will also work part-time for DUFS as a marshmallow salesman."

We're proud of the Duke Blue Devils!
Congratulations for a Super Season

Dude sings Wall St. blues

TIE-DYE AND BLOW

Dude

Wench Beta Records

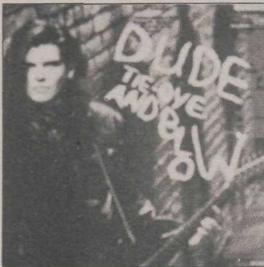

by Pretend Chous

Social significance is such a rarity in albums recently. Really, one can only turn to the Jacksons (Michael and Lolita, or whatever her name is) and possibly the soundtrack to the hit films of John Hughes, or is that Holmes?

But there's a new voice in American music, and it's quite possible that Dude's debut record on Wench Beta (pronounced bay-TAH) records will prove the most significant and insightful band in Duke's musical heritage.

Dude draws its gritty, acerbic material from a white, upper-middle class background in Athens, New Jersey. The first released single, "Daddy was a Quiche and Mommy was his Little Sister," draws on the depth of relationships in that tiny Jersey town, now facing almost 50 percent unemployment in the wake of the collapse of the Wall Street indulgence market.

"My daddy bought a bimber with the gilded parachute/and whether I'll get it is a point that's fairly moot/cause Mommy says the S.E.C./wants to trade her and me/for some of Daddy's inside informa/shun."

Such extraordinary depth pervades the entire work. Dude was established when its members met at a bid night their freshman year and discovered that they shared the lust for musical mediocrity that has pursued them like a ravening dog. The core of the band is the mindless, repetitive guitar work from Mitch Viner, who boasts of knowing fewer chords than R.E.M.'s Peter Buck.

Dude's members share the lust for musical mediocrity

But the spectacularly predictable keyboard played by Al should not go unheralded. (Al explains that he lost his last name in a bizarre T-shirt printing accident.) Al's ability to divine Viner's true intent on the songs is both clairvoyant and reassuring to the listener: on "Green Grass and High Fives Forever," Al backs up Viner's insistent, childish strums with the theme from Green Acres.

In fact, Al backs up most of the songs on the album with the theme from Green Acres. Only on "You Better Shop Around [at Bloomie's]" does he change this dire litany, and play the theme to Batman.

Finally, Dude has a drum machine, which they hope to get working in the next few months, hopefully in time for their frat party tour. The album stands tough without it, with Al standing in as a sort of human beat box on tunes requiring some sort of formalized rhythm.

The finest songs on the album deal with the sense of isolation and loss that the New Jersey youngsters feel, as well as their dislocation and discommodation as they find themselves graduating without the slot at the investment bank of their choice.

For instance, "Grab Your Ankles. This is a Hostile Takeover" is a touching and gentle statement of faith in the capitalist system. Despite the tragedy of Black Monday, there is always a silver lining — in this song, it is the promise of buying up helpless corporations with ready cash reserves:

"Honey chile/you make me wild/thinking 'bout those assets piled up/to the ceiling/with buzzards wheeling/all around your stockholders.

Dude has made its first, tentative mark in the sensitive psyche of serious Duke students with its album of peans to hometown Jersey. Expect more noisome lyrics in the future, with even more powerful lyrics as Viner and Al explore the world of paid commerce.

"We're Dude, we're Dude/and we're naturally rude,/we'll love you 'til we die/at least 'til the kegs run dry/or until you can't get your Visa renewed. [R&R]

'The Fox and the Hound' a Disney cinemasterpiece

THE FOX AND THE HOUND
d. by three different guys
Starring a bunch of cartoon animals
(oh goody) ★★★★★
Buena Vista Studios (like they ever do anything but cartoons)
South Square 4, Willowdale 8 (no, this movie isn't on all 12 screens)

by Andrew I. M. Witty

That deity of cinematic technique and master of fine-tuned, subtle wit, Walt Disney, keeps the bon temps roulant with his latest gem to subjugate the great silver screen, "The Fox and the Hound."

The Disney studios have fashioned a masterpiece both so poignantly penetrating and sardonically droll, imbued with such piquant perceptions of fox/hound relations, that this reviewer was unsure whether to rejoice or ululate and frequently found himself doing both.

From the opening moments when the camera sweeps the broad environs of a sylvan panorama in a fantastically gratuitous shot so reminiscent of Stanley Kubrick's "Barry Lyndon" that it could hardly be coincidental to the tender closing whose curious camera angles brought to mind the opening shots of Orson Welles's "Citizen Kane," "The Fox and the Hound" is a nonstop joyride through the mystical fields of childhood, puberty, comprehending the adult world, apprehending amorous relations, suffering the tormenting anguish of heartbreak, and exploring the intricate, intimate relations between a woman and her fox, a man and his hound, and a fox and a hound.

Rarely has this fascinating and provocative subject been explored so sensitively and in such detail. Disney's masterful handling of the characters makes one wonder if his whole career had only been preparation for this moment. From the first insouciant flip of the tail of Tod the fox to the last heart-rending bay of Copper the hound, the viewer is held entranced, lost so completely in these actors finely-honed portrayals that had "Fire!" been called in the crowded theatre, nary a one would have left his seat.

"Veni, vidi, vici." is the theme for the winsome stars of this fabulously fun Aesop's Fable—cum—sorority mixer. Copper's succinct yet decisive opening line, "Hi, my name is Copper and I'm a hound dog. A-whooooo!", sets the tone for the intimate confidences that Tod will later apprise Copper; "You'll always be my best friend," to which the audience in toto can only nod, mesmerized, in tacit accord.

Upon the brutal slaying of the infant Tod's mother by a pack of foxhounds baying with the sweet bloodlust of the kill, the diminutive fox is left solitary and vulnerable to the vacillations of a dangerous world. He is discovered by Big Mama, who contrives to have Tod cared for by the Widow Tweed who lives nearby. The actor portraying Big Mama was last seen as Owl in "Winnie the Pooh" and manages to brilliantly transcend minor hindrances of gender and age to turn in a stellar performance here as a black owl with an accent last heard on Mammy in "Gone with the Wind."

Dinky and Boomer are Big Mama's bird friends who aid her in seeking care for Tod. The plot digressions to focus on their lively pursuit of the guileful tobacco worm, Squeaks, are no less delightful for their frequency.

The Widow Tweed is a fascinating portrait of a sick and twisted woman who will pick up any old stray animal in her domain, raise it to maturite and allow it to live in her house. One is overawed at the subtle psychological message that Disney sends over a full-grown woman who caresses a fox in her lap while referring to it as "such a little toddler."

Her neighbor, Amos Slade, is a crusted old man who hunts for a living. Copper is first introduced as a puppy, the raw material which Slade will corrupt into a lean, mean, fighting machine of a seasoned foxhound.

Tod and Copper mature to discover that their childhood friendship may not outlast the constraints of their adult worlds and duties, much to the dismay of all concerned, except Slade, who is far more interested in garnering yet another fox-skin to bolster the abhorrent compendium in his shed.

Their wrenching conflict and timely propitiation left hardly a dry eye in the theatre. "The Fox and the Hound" is filled to capacity with a veritable plethora of empyrean imagery and intensity of sentiment that erects it as a paradigm of cinematic culmination that subsequent directors can merely endeavor to achieve.

Biblical proportions: HardeHar reporter chats with God

by John Arenidull

God hovered in a comfortable aura atop Rome's Sistine Chapel, where he agreed to a leisurely interview with a HardeHar reporter. His Holiness, for the fourth time, had transformed himself into the likeness of actor George Burns, so as to be able to communicate with the reporter. God wore a dark suit, silk tie, and glasses. He puffed thoughtfully on a Cuban cigar.

The Almighty looked awfully relaxed, thank you, for a spirit who had been through so much. He even smiled a lot at the reporter, indicating a strong rapport developing between the two.

God's career began 20 billion years ago with the creation of the universe, entitled "The Big Bang," which garnered Him popular acclaim and the nickname "All-Being-Master of Time, Space, and Dimension." Soon after came the creation of galaxies, stars and planets reaching across infinite space. A snap of God's fingers brought life to many of these planets, including our Earth, although so far humans have found no evidence of alien life forms.

The life that He brought to Earth has taken a myriad of plant and animal forms, from the lowly fern to the intelligent HardeHar reporter. An interesting twist came when God brought forth gigantic dinosaurs about 200,000,000 years ago. After ruling the Earth for 100,000,000 years, He forced them to bow out in a temperature drop SETA members and other experts call crucial.

God created a species of comparable dominance only 100,000 years ago with the creation of Neanderthal mulattos Adam and Eve, nicknamed homo sapiens.

Apparently, the Almighty was looking for a creature that recognized His authority and creative power. Man has tried to satisfy this desire by representing God in a number of fanciful ways, from the Greek Gods to groups like Jews for Jesus.

In this interview, God will discuss the cosmos, life beyond Earth, religious thought on this planet, politics, sports, movies, and his opinion of this reporter.

HardeHar: There are so many questions I want to ask you: First of all, what was it like around here before the Big Bang?

God: Good question, John. Life before the Big Bang? BORING! Boring as all Hell, even though Hell wasn't there yet either.

HardeHar: But wasn't it nice and quiet, good for thought?

God: Thought about what? The only thing in the universe was a bunch of hydrogen spread out all over. Imagine a dark movie theatre with a broken projector, or this week's activities for the UNC basketball team. Nothing but blackness and inaction. I needed some excitement, so I compressed all those hydrogen atoms, and KABOOM! It was pretty remarkable. Gave me lots to do.

HardeHar: How many planets have life on them?

God: 14,342, not including Earth.

HardeHar: How many of those have life forms superior in intelligence to humankind?

God: None. You guys are pretty special. But give me a few million more years. Upper Phenelax, in the Zenegori solar system, has a promising creature with six legs and four eyes. They call themselves  $\frac{1}{2} \text{ of } \text{the } \text{Gods} \text{ of } \text{the } \text{Universe}$ . In their own language, of course. The only thing holding them back is a rather small brain size; also a tremendous difficulty reading. A bit more evolution and they may take you on.

I compressed all those hydrogen atoms, and KABOOM!

— God on the Big Bang

HardeHar: I see. Why has belief in God manifested itself in so many different ways on our planet?

God: At first, I thought it would be neat to have diverse opinions exist about Me. Biggest mistake I made on Earth. Because of his contrasting religious beliefs, man is the only creature to kill of millions of his own species in an argument about Me. Oops! Conformity would have been much simpler, and less messy.

HardeHar: Then why didn't you change things, make one religion for everybody?

God: You see, I'm real good at getting things started, but once the ball begins rolling, it's impossible to stop. That's why it took 100,000,000 years to get rid of the dinosaurs. At first, I thought a burly set of animals would make for nice leadership, but, as it turned out, size was the wrong criterion. These things were so stupid they thought with their tails. Also, Dinosaurs certainly paid no respect to Me! But once they were here, they were impossible to get rid of. Took a seven degree temperature drop to freeze the cold-blooded simpletons into submission. I still catch flak for that one from my buddy, Gabriel, and SETA. By the way, I think I missed one. Don't you have a dinosaur on your staff, Tyrannosaurus R.?

HardeHar: No, he's just a human cartoonist whose parents have odd taste in names. By the way, who is Gabriel?

God: Gabriel? You know! The Angel? Plays a trumpet? Hey, haven't you even taken a religion class?

HardeHar: Well, no.

God: Then why were you assigned to the interview? I'm sure there's a better-qualified...

HardeHar: Moving on, what do you think of the chances of the Rev. Jesse Jackson in winning the American presidency? Did you tell him to run?

God: Jesse and I did converse, but I was only joking when I told him he should run for president. I don't think he has a chance, but I'll be rooting for him. I used my influence to its fullest in Michigan. Last week every preacher in the state gave a sermon supporting Jackson. It was the least I could do to show my support. We got Dukakis worried. I miss the days when church and state were one. I had more influence over world leaders then. There is never a boring day in a totalitarian, religious dictatorship.

HardeHar: What got into you when you created the duck-billed platypus?

God: It was a lab screw-up. I was getting cocky, and was really pressed for time because it was 4:45 on the fifth day of creation, and I always get off at 5:00. I tried to work on a beaver and a duck at the same time. I snafzed, and the rest is history.

Oily Bohunks & Fred to jam all night long

THE OILY BOHUNKS AND FRED
Featuring Fred and Jean-Claude
Muhammed
appearing at various locations

by Shearon Harris
(the band reviewer, not the nuclear reactor)

This weekend, all Duke students not watching basketball will have the unique opportunity to see one of the better bands to come to this area in a long time. The Oily Bohunks and Fred (TOBAF), who used to be called The Oily Bohunks before Fred joined, are a one-of-a-kind band. They play nothing but Grateful Dead covers, Duran Duran remixes and their own brand of slowed down David Lee Roth B-sides, in addition to a small number of original songs.

Formed twelve years ago, the band has been on an extended tour of the Southeast promoting their three-year-old album "Wombats Dancing To The Beat Of A Harmonica," a compilation of all their love ballads, including the recent Indonesian hit "You Knows I Needs To Be With You Tonight" Cause The Fridge Is On The Blink And All My Beer Is Warm.

Gotta be with you, Baby!
Don't wanna go to Hell!
Down in Hell it's crazy!
Cause all they serve is warm Goebel!
So Even though you're outta sight
Out there at your daddy's farm!
You knows I needs to be with you tonight (in background: cause my fridge is on the blink)
And all my beer is Waaaarrmmmmmm!!!
Yeah, I need a tall, cold, round one baby!

The band accredits most of their recent success to the addition of Fred. "We used to be a group without focus," says lead singer Jean-Claude Muhammed. "As well as without a drummer. One night, I walked into this bar and there's this guy just playing his drums with no other instruments. I knew right away that we were made for each other. I mean he was doing OK and all, but how long can you just hit the drums before people start to get bored?"

Fred Brice, whose real name is Frederick Brice but says he likes his name to be "a four letter word, F-R-E-D," sees the collaboration differently. "They needed a drummer. I'm a drummer. They needed drums. I got drums. They needed me desperately. I was desperate. You know, I was down' all right on my own, but my creative juices demanded to be let to flow.

SPECIAL TO HARDEHAR

The Oily Bohunks and Fred had plastic surgery to gain star appeal. (from l.) Fred is Jesse Jackson, Pete is Patrick Duffy, Stew is Mario Cuomo and Rich is Paul Simon.

or something like that."

Fred decided to accept J-C's offer and joined the group in the winter of 1985. At the time, TOBAF was made up of three lead guitarists, Stew Steward, Rich Richardson and Pete Peters, who also performed the backup singing chores, and J-C Muhammed, the lead singer and a master of the harpsicord. With the addition of Fred on drums, band members claim they are now no more than two or three instruments from ruling the pop charts.

The success of "Knows Needs Tonight Fridge Blink Beer" has surprised TOBAF, but no one's complaining. "Now we get recognition as musicians," claims Richardson. "Before this album started to hit in East Asia, we tried everything to get some recognition."

Perhaps the craziest of TOBAF's stunts is the one they are currently in court over. "When Fred joined the group, he was hungry for success real fast," claimed Peters. "Anyway, he thought it would be real cool if we all got plastic surgery to look like famous people. Now we've got Stew as Mario Cuomo, I'm Patrick Duffy, Fred plays Jesse Jackson, Rich is Paul Simon, and J-C looks a hell of a lot like Cher up there on stage. It sure grabs the audience's attention, and sometimes gets donations."

Muhammed added, "Unfortunately, the real Cher wadn't did pleased 'bout us using her face.

so I gotta wear a bag on my head until the lawyers straighten this out. It was great for a while though, cause people would come up to us on the streets asking for our autographs. You should see the looks on their faces when they read our names."

The band will be in the Triangle area only tonight so be sure to catch them. They'll be playing Thin Man's Squeeze at 7:30. In and around the Street at 8:15, the Kroger on Hillsboro from 8:20 - 10:30. Von Canon around midnight and conclude their stay with a late night concert at the Dean Dome from 5:45 in the morning till sunrise. Band members privately say they plan to make a surprise appearance at the Findaway if they can fit it into their schedule for the evening.

Notes: While in the triangle area tonight, The Oily Bohunks And Fred will be taking auditions for a keyboardist, bass guitarist, rhythm guitarist and manager. "We welcome any and all people to apply," claims Muhammed. "But, we'd be real happy if your name was short. We'd rather be something like The Oily Bohunks And Fred And Bill than The Oily Bohunks And Fred And Theodore." The band also requests that no swearing or gross behavior go on at their concerts because their mothers will be in the audience. [R&R]

HardeHar: Is there anything in creation you regret making?

God: Well, I'm not too thrilled about this year's field of presidential candidates, but, as a general rule, other than cockroaches and Jimmy Swaggart, I think I did a good job.

HardeHar: How do you feel about the recent downfall of TV evangelists?

God: I'm not judgemental, I leave that to the guys at The Gate. But, if I were... Burn, Baby, Burn!

HardeHar: Are you really everywhere?

God: No. Only Elvis is everywhere. Bruce Springsteen is most places. The Monkees used to be everywhere, but mankind cancelled their show. Davey Jones is still my favorite singer though. "Hey, hey, we're the Monkees. People say we monkey around..."

HardeHar: Uh... now that we've covered music, what are some of your favorite movies?

God: Forget movies, I like TV. It's free. Sally Field is cute as a button in "The Flying Nun." Also, "Leave It To Beaver" reminds me of 4:45 on the fifth day. What I really like, though, are game shows. I kick but on "Jeopardy," and I never spin a "Bankrupt" on "Wheel of Fortune."

HardeHar: How can we learn the meaning of life?

God: To fully realize the meaning of life, you have to go around the Traffic Circle backwards at about 65 mph, then hit that first speed bump on Towerview just right. You'll learn the meaning of life real fast then.

HardeHar: How long will man survive before he blows himself to bits?

God: I give you two weeks. No, maybe it's three. Never can tell for sure with these things.

HardeHar: Who's going to win the Final Four?

God: I laid 250 big ones on the Blue Devils. But even I have difficulty forecasting the future. I was sure that the Indians were going to win the A.L. East last year, and look what happened to them. I don't know what I was thinking, though, betting on a Cleveland team.

HardeHar: God, I've interviewed Kevin Costner, Elizabeth Dole, Mike Wallace, Ted Koppel, an MTV Veejay, and now you. Who do you suggest I interview next?

God: There is only one choice, John. For the reading pleasure of the Duke community, you should interview yourself. [R&R]

FROM THE CUCKOO'S CAGE

By Mikey LaMark

PAPA SMURF IN JEOPARDY ON 'NIGHTLINE'

The Man in the Moon looked down on the world and decided it was time to have his say. He had been feeling pretty jilted for the last few decades. He picked up his phone and called Ted Koppel's Nightline. "There is something going on up here," he said.

Ted was on the air at the time, and so the Man in the Moon was put on hold.

While listening to the musak on the telephone, he realized that what he had to say was not so important.

Meanwhile down on earth, Papa Smurf responded to Koppel's probing question.

"We are not just a religion, but a race," he said. The Man in the Moon smiled, because he knew the birth of all religions. Four days later a nuclear missile destroyed the smurf kingdom. And the Man in the Moon became a religious figure again.

ALL QUIET ON THE COOKIE MONSTER'S FRONT

The cookie monster, although under age at the time, enlisted in the United States army. He wanted to be a marine. Surprisingly enough, he managed to control his appetite and passed all tests with flying colors and became an officer one day. Having the luxuries of an officer he went back to his bad habits—eating over twenty pounds of chocolate chip and pecan cookies every day. Soon enough war broke out and lieutenant Cookie Monster (Cookie to his friends) was in charge of a battalion at the front line. Rations were low, and rumors of the monster's habits started spreading among the men. Then the inevitable occurred: mutiny.

Cookies went flying everywhere. As he lay on his death bed, his last wish was to taste just one more cookie. And he did, and died. His body was shipped back to the States in a giant David's cookie coffin and was paraded down Sesame Street to the wails of little children.
