Renovation Goes On As Offices Are Added In Activities Building

Union Expands Area Of Dining Facilities

By BOB YOUNG
CHRONICLE Staff Reporter

Mass renovation continues on West Campus this week as work on the Union and Old Administration Building gets into full swing. A complete rearrangement of the basement of the Union, the construction of a new student Union within the walls of the old building and several rooms in the new open courtyard of the Union are among the many changes being made.

Bill Griffith, newly appointed Student Activity Director, reported: "It is our hope that the new Union will be the living room of the campus. All activities, both cultural and recreational, will revolve around the student center."

A new Pub Row is nearing completion on the third floor of the Old Administration Building. Nine office-workrooms and three darkrooms, all freshly painted, tiled and equipped with fluorescent lights will house the Peer, Playbill, Archive, Chronicle and Chanticleer. Occupancy is expected sometime after spring vacation.

Student Activities will occupy the second floor of the building. Offices for MSGA, the Student Union Board and the YMCA, conference and meeting rooms, a 200-seat assembly room and general offices and workrooms are included in the tentative plans. Griffith stated that the general offices will be made available to various campus organizations upon request and will contain filing cabinets and typewriters for their use.

The first floor, which is still in the early stages of construction, will house a lounge and information desk, music-listening rooms and card rooms.

When the student publication offices move from their present location, Pub Row will be converted into an addition for the Dining Halls storage room. Theodore Minah, Dining Halls director, stated that this additional space will greatly relieve the storage congestion in his department.

A private dining hall will be located on the main floor of the Union in what is now the courtyard. Seating 100 persons, it may be divided into two smaller rooms by means of a modern folding door. An entrance to the new dining hall will be located on each side of the fireplace in the Union lobby.

Dublin Players Will Appear on March 16

Appearing under the auspices of Student Forum, the Dublin Players, a group drawn from the Abbey and Gate Theaters, will present "Shadow and Substance," in Page Auditorium Tuesday, March 16.

Tickets at $1, $1.50 and $2 are available at the Page box office between 2 and 5 p.m., March 10-12, 15-16. East Campus student may exchange Student Forum cards for any price ticket at the box office. All seats are reserved.

Here Tomorrow . . .

COMEDY COUPLE—Hailed as America's No. 1 comedy team are Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healy who will appear with the bands of Ray Anthony and Guy Lombardo at the special Chesterfield Concert for Duke students tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 in the Indoor Stadium. The couple have attained new fame and popularity in recent years as television stars. This program is the only one in which Lombardo and Anthony will appear. Tickets, which are free of charge with a student athletic book, can be obtained at the Indoor Stadium ticket office until 3:30.

Seats Available

Comedians Hayes, Healy Join Lombardo, Anthony

Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healy hailed as "America's foremost Mr. and Mrs. comedy team," will appear at the special Chesterfield Concert for Duke students featuring Ray Anthony, Guy Lombardo and their orchestras on Wednesday, March 10.

The appearance of Hayes and Miss Healey, backed by Anthony and his band, will climax the concert, which will begin at 3:30 p.m., in the Duke Indoor Stadium. This is the only event in which Anthony and Lombardo will appear that Duke students may attend.

Hayes and Miss Healy have been a leading professional entertaining team since 1940. Having in recent years attained new fame and popularity on television, they are currently starring on their own CBS radio show on Saturday afternoons.

Hayes began his career at the age of nine in his mother's vaudeville act and soon became an established comedy star.

A native of New Orleans, Miss Healy first began singing with a church choir and later procured a job in a night club. In 1938 she went to Hollywood, where she has made several movies.

During the war, Hayes starred in 620 shows for service men in the South Pacific, while his wife appeared in leading roles in several Broadway plays. They resumed their night club act in 1946 and the same year were booked at New York's Copacabana where they were an immediate success. They then made the first of a series of cross-country personal tours.

Tickets for the concert will be on sale beginning Monday at 2 p.m. and ending Wednesday at 3:30 p.m., in the ticket office of the Indoor Stadium. Although the tickets will be free of charge, student athletic books will be required in order to obtain them. There will be one ticket allowed per person.

Jascha Heifetz Plays For All-Star Concert In March 19 Program

Returning to the Duke stage after an absence of 11 years, world-famous violinist Jascha Heifetz will star in the only extra performance of the University's current All-Star Series on Friday, March 19 at 8:15 p.m. in Page Auditorium.

For Heifetz, who is generally recognized as the world's greatest violinist and one of the greatest contemporary masters in the music world, this is his third appearance in the Duke Concert Series. Tickets are available for this off-the-series performance in the office of J. Foster Barnes.

Beginning his violin lessons at the age of three, Heifetz made his debut in Russia when seven, and at 16 made his first appearance in America at Carnegie Hall in 1917.

Lenten Vesper Sermon

Speaking at the second Lenten Vesper Service, the Reverend Joseph O'Brien, Episcopal chaplain, will address an interdenominational meeting in the University Chapel, this Thursday at 7 p.m. "The Church: The Nature of the Society."

The East Campus Chapel Choir will present special music at this service.

Bill Huntley and Kathy Dykes Capture Highest 'Y' Positions

Caviness, Leinback Win YMCA Races

Casting 407 ballots, YMCA members yesterday elected Bill Huntley president of the organization for 1954-55. Voters in the annual election also named Verne Caviness, Phil Leinback and Bob Holmes as vice-president, secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Huntley is vice-president of the junior class and Westminster Fellowship and outgoing vice-president of the 'Y.' Banks Godfrey, his opponent in the election, is serving as MSGA chaplain and was on the steering committee of Religious Emphasis Week. Immediately following his victory, Huntley declared: "The key-note of the YMCA will, I hope, be center-around the word 'efficiency'." With a few minor exceptions, I feel that the overall program is set up in such a way, within its scope, to do the most good for the greatest amount of students without infringing upon the programs of other organizations.

"The Religious Activities Committee will be expanded to include a means for providing for those who live outside the freshman quadrangle."

For those incoming freshmen of particularly great interest, either a Freshman Cabinet or at least a Freshman Steering Committee will be created. The greatest move will be toward the perfection of already existing committees.

Incumbent members are Rev. Roland Rainwater, director of student religious activities, and Bill Griffith, student activities director.

Tomorrow at 6 p.m. in the Union Ballroom, Huntley and the others elected will assume the 'Y' leadership. A chairman of the Board of Directors will be elected from the eight new members.

Ken Orr, retiring president, and Huntley will address the 100 persons expected to attend.

WAA and Pub Board Offices Also Filled

Last night's East Campus voting resulted in Kathy Dykes being elected president of the YWCA and Marilyn Dent, president of WAA.

In the same elections, Jackie Barger, Virginia Crandall, Judy Davis and Connie Mueller won the four East Campus positions on Publications Board.

Other member of the YWCA cabinet are Jody Newland, vice-president; Barbara Smith, secretary; Selger Herr, treasurer.

ADDITIONAL POSTS

Filling additional WAA posts are Elaine Eyster, vice-president; Pat Drechsel, recording secretary; Shirley Lindquist, corresponding secretary. The treasurer will be announced at a later date.

Miss Dykes proposes to try to eliminate the lack of articulation between the student body and the YWCA cabinet. She recommends that the Campus and Public Affairs Committee of the YWCA work closely with Student Forum and WSGA to bring national and international issues to campus.

RIISING JUNIOR

The new YWCA president is a rising junior. She was treasurer of WSGA this past year, and has been a fellowship leader on the YWCA cabinet for three years. She has also served on the WAA Board and is a member of the Glee Club.

Jackie Barger has served on the copy staff of the Chanticleer as copy editor of the yearbook. This past year she was on the circulation staff of the Duke Peer and co-edited the yearbook and secretary of Publications Board.

Virginia Crandall was photography director of the Chanticleer last year and is now associate editor.

DAVIS QUALIFICATIONS

Judy Davis has had two years in the advertising department of the Pittsburgh Press, served on the copy staff of the Chanticleer her first year, was caption editor last year and is now associate editor. She is on the circulation staff of the Duke Peer and on Publications Board.

Connie Mueller was on the freshman handbook staff, Panhellenic handbook editor, spent two years on the Chanticleer staff and is now assistant editor of the Duke Peer.

1954 Blood Drive Will Open Here March 22; Over 400 Students Promise Contributions

Beginning a three-day drive on March 22, the blood bank will be here under the sponsorship of the Marine Society, the Navy and Air Force ROTC.

Last year's record-breaking drive amounted to 1008 pints of blood and this year "400 to 500 students have already pledged," announced Hunter Hadley, president of the Marine Semper Fidelis Club.

Hadley announced that the group (independent, fraternity or freshman house) which gives the greatest percentage of blood will receive a trophy. Gifts will be credited to ROTC students.

The society intends to give half of the blood to hospitals for Korean veterans and half to the gamma globulin research center.

"Releases can be brought in the days of the drive if not previously mailed," said Chuck Garhardt, a member of the society.

Broderick Displays Oils In East Campus Library

There will be an exhibition of oil paintings by Robert Broderick in the gallery of the Woman's College Library from now until March 23.

Broderick's works have been shown in galleries from a 11 states including the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and the Metropolitan Museum in New York.

The New Building

The workmen have done their job, the dedication speech has been made, the first hole in the oriental rug on the second floor has begun to appear, and now, at last, the CHRONICLE will have its say about the Administration Building.

First of all, it was a good idea well completed. Deans and officials of the University were badly cramped in their former surroundings, so much that several had to share storage space for papers and files. Now everyone has adequate office space. The interior of the old administration building was not that of a school that is striving for top standing. Now, when you stroll through corridors gleaming new and halls tastefully colored, you know that you are walking through the center of a top organization. Things, contrary to popular philosophy, are often what they seem.

Second, the Administration Building is not all that its name implies. Offices of the history and English departments will be located on the second and third floors. This too is a needed reform, as any of us who have tramped from the bottom of Gray to the Library tower to interview our various professors well know.

Students are not neglected in the plans. Modern classrooms occupy much of the space on the back of the second and third floors. They are equipped with the latest conveniences in lighting, seating and heating although the old inconveniences of recitation and examinations are expected to be retained.

We are pleased that we can add our voice to those who have said that the Administration Building is the link that was needed in the architectural plan of the campus and also a connective organ for administration, faculty and students.

Spring Blooms

The warm zephyrs of spring bring not only open top cars, peasant blouses and inexplicable actions on the part of students; they also hail the tidal wave of student elections that annually engulf the campus. For the past few weeks and for weeks to come the pages of this newspaper and every bulletin board on campus will be blaring forth with announcements about elections for this organization or that.

Thus, while spring may make our minds wander to such things as romance and the beauties of nature, it is also a time when students should pause and devote some thoughts to the ballots they will be casting in the next two months.

A lot of people want jobs on this campus. At least they give every appearance of wanting them in the spring. But summer often has a strange effect on new campus "leaders" and they return in September somewhat bored with their newly acquired titles. It is an old story, but it remains true. Many people want the honor, but few are willing to shoulder the responsibility.

In the next few weeks it would be wise for the campus to check the records of prospective candidates. Past records often reveal whether a prospective leader really has the desire to handle a position nine months or is merely a spring bloom who will fade and wither with the first hints of autumn.

Cosmopolitan Outlook

Dr. Edens Encourages Visitors; Door 'Always Open' to Students

By FRANK GREEN

Senior Staff Reporter

Far from being inaccessible, Dr. Hollis Edens likes to talk with his students. As he himself puts it, the door of his office is "always open" to students.

What is more to the point is that in nine cases out of ten, waiting isn't necessary. Unless he is out of town, you can walk right in to see the president. (However, last year, Dr. Edens estimates, University business carried him thirty thousand miles or more around the country.)

For ninety per cent of the time, Dr. Edens enjoys his job, a job which demands directing Duke affairs as well as representing the University and serving as a useful citizen in the educational world. But for ten per cent of the time, running a university can become "an awful chore," the president admits.

HONORS PROGRAM

We asked Dr. Edens what he thought of establishing a program of independent, supervised study at Duke, an honors program. He wrinkled his eyebrows pensively for a moment, then said that he favored any program that developed intellectual initiative, but felt an honors program was more applicable to smaller schools than to a large university.

However, he feels that the student intellectual level here is sufficiently mature for such a program, and he would not stand in its way. He wonders, however, if there is sufficient interest at present. "If Duke's students want an honors program, I want them to come and tell me," he said.

ACADEMIC CAREER

Dr. Edens began his academic career as a teacher of government in the public high school of Crossville, Tenn. He soon became its principal. Later, he served as president of the Junior College of Emory University and as associate professor of political science and dean at Emory.

Following a period during which he was Vice Chancellor for the University System of Georgia, Dr. Edens was made Associate Director of the General Education Board of the Rockefeller Foundation. He holds degrees from Emory, Harvard, Davidson and Wake Forest.

INTERVIEWER LEARNS

As he gave us this information during our interview to learn more about the president, Dr. Edens leaned far back in his leather swivel chair. As he reflected, his speech was "precise and reminiscent of his scholar's origins."

He talked with as much authority about Harvard and Swarthmore as he did about Emory and Davidson. His background is Southern but his outlook is cosmopolitan.

The Fan's Fare

By CHARLES WRAY

After a season's absence from the champions' circle, North Carolina State returned to the cherished spot by trouncing each of their Big Four rivals in annexing the first Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

Whether or not the Pack is the conference's best team is still a matter of controversy, but one thing is certain—State is the most improved quint in the eight-team league.

State had the hardest possible road to the championship, and they came through with flying colors. Any team which can beat three teams as strong as the other Big Four teams on successive nights deserves the conference crown and the right to represent the ACC in the NCAA tournament.

By this time the tournament is history, but there are some interesting topics of conversation emerging from the three-day event.

First, who deserves "Coach of the Year" in the ACC?

It is a time-proven custom that the recipient of the honor coach takes his team into the finals, so it seems likely the recipient will be either State's Everett Case or Murray Gresson of Wake Forest.

Case and Gresson have both done outstanding jobs this year, there's no denying the fact; however, Harold Bradley or Frank McGuire seem equally deserving of the award. Bradley coached the Blue Devils into first place during the regular season, and McGuire did a tremendous job over at the Hill considering the material that was available to him.

Second, who deserved all-tournament recognition and the most outstanding player award?

It is hard to see Dickie Hemric as the tournament's most outstanding player over State's Ronnie Shavlik. Granted, Hemric is the better player of the two, but based on tournament performance alone it would be hard to beat the 6-8 State sophomore.

The all-tournament team should certainly have Shavlik, Hemric, and State's Thompson, but the remaining two spots could go to a number of performers. Virginia's Buzz Wilkinson will probably get one of the remaining spots along with Gene Shue, Maryland's All-American forward; but there will be many an argument if UNC's Skippy Winstead, Joe Smith of South Carolina, and Bernie Janicki are left off the mythical five.

Third, the possibility of making the team finishing on top during the regular season the loop champion. Many feel this would be the ideal set-up since by next season each member of the conference will be required to meet every other member in a home-and-home series.

The opposition to the proposal points out that the conference's operations are financed by the tournament, and that declaring the regular season, first-place finisher, the champion would reduce the spectator appeal of the tournament.

State Defeats Each Other Big Four Quint To Capture First Annual ACC Tournament

N. C. State's Wolfpack sharpened their teeth during the past week, caught fire, and dragged themselves from their fourth place position in the conference standings to the first annual ACC Crown. After shading Carolina 51-52, they beat Duke 79-75 and edged Wake Forest 82-80.

In the opening round the Devils defeated Buzz Wilkinson, and his Virginia Cavaliers 96-68. Coach Bradley kept the score down by inserting the substitutes, who played most of the second half.

Friday night was a different story. Keyed to the hilt for the last ditch battle, the State players never let up. The game had been tied 13 times up until three minutes were gone in the fourth quarter. Then it happened. The score was tied at 61-61, and three quick State field goals put the game out of reach for the Blue Devils.

The whole story Friday was the Devils' inability to grab off the rebounds, as they outscored State from the floor, and hit for a better average from the foul line.

the case of the six-cent patsy

Once there was a Senior who was up against the grim prospect of Graduating. With Social Security 42 years away, he recognized the need of who played most of the second half.

So he burrowed manfully through Classified Sections, under "Help Wanted", in search of the Right Niche. Spotted it, too. A honey. The right field, a Substantial Salary, fine location, pensions and benefits Up To Here. The ad asked for Brief Histories from applicants.

He wrote immediately. Not cockily but convincingly. A masterpiece that took four nights and filled several pages with Deathless Prose. It left no doubt that here was The Man for the Job. He slapped on a 6-cent stamp, dropped it into the box, and sat back waiting for The Call.

F.S.—he didn't get the job. His epistol wound up 354th in the pile, and they never got down that far. Hired one of the first eight, as a matter of fact—all of whom had had Enough Perspicacity to flash the data by telegram and land On Top of the Heap.

Before you start jockeying for a job, be sure to latch onto your free copy of the Telegrammar, Western Union's ingenious pocket-size guide to telegraph use. (Just write Room 1727, Western Union, 60 Hudson St., New York City.) And remember, whatever the Project, you're smart to use Telegrams to Get the Jump on the Competition. ## Students To Launch Men's Scholarships With Chest Funds

Initiating its first annual Campus Chest Scholarship Fund, the West Campus Chest will offer this spring a scholarship, available to students entering any of the three upper classes in the male colleges of the University.

Valued at $350, the grant will be presented on the basis of need and scholarship of the candidates.

Applications, which may be obtained from the Campus Chest Scholarship Headquarters in 217 Administration, must be submitted by March 24, to the Headquarters or mailed to the Campus Chest Scholarship Committee, Box 5247, Duke Station.

Further procedure requires that applicants give a recommendation form and stamped envelope addressed to the above station to two professors of their choice, who will mail their recommendations directly to the Committee.

On the basis of applications, scholastic records, recommendations and interviews, a student committee will select ten candidates for further consideration.

Those on the scholarship reviewing board are: Dr. H. T. Parker, advisor; Reynolds Price, Donald Beatty and Dave Schimmel.
