Three Duke Students Receive Fulbrights

Fulbright Winners Plan To Pursue Courses Of Advanced Study At German Universities

Three Duke students received Fulbright Scholarships for foreign study during the academic year 1955-56; one graduate student, Miss Barbara Brandon, and two graduating seniors, Miss Mary Flounroy Dunn, and Scott W. Chilton.

All three will pursue their advanced studies at German universities. Miss Brandon, a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of History, will work on the Hanoverian papers at Georg-August University at Göttingen. Miss Dunn, a major in the German Department, will continue her studies of German literature and language at Philips University, Marburg, while Chilton will study organic chemistry at Eberhard Karls University, Tuebingen.

Miss Brandon holds her A.B. degree with high honors from Wellesley College and her M.A. from the University of North Carolina. At Duke, she is a student of Professor William B. Hamilton.

Miss Dunn is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. She is president of Delta Phi Alpha, national honorary German society, vice-president of the Latin honorary and a member of the Spanish society. She has been active with the Duke Players, was a photographer for the yearbook, and edited the WSGA handbook last year.

Chilton, also a Phi Beta Kappa student, is a member of a number of scientific honorary groups. He is one of the few undergraduates to receive associate memberships in Sigma Xi, national science society.

Duke Captures Forensic Crown

Five Colleges Argue In Annual Tourney

For the second year in a row the Duke debating team placed first in the Atlantic Coast Conference, winning three of a possible four divisions at the final debate sessions held at Chapel Hill last Friday and Saturday mornings.

Competing against UNC, Wake Forest, Virginia and the University of South Carolina, Duke's eight-man squad captured first place for affirmative in the Varsity Division, made up of the most experienced teams, and both affirmative and negative firsts in the Second Division, comprised of the less experienced men.

Debating for Duke in the Varsity affirmative were Tom Gillcrest and Jim Harbison; in the Second Division affirmative, Norval Fortson and Keith Davis; Second Division negative, Harry Havens and Carl Stewart. Bruce O'Dea and Jim Warren spoke in the Varsity negative.

The topic this year was the controversial "Resolved: That The United States Should Extend Diplomatic Recognition to the Communist Government of China." The University of North Carolina tied with Duke for two first positions.

This is the second year of the Atlantic Coast Conference debating organization, Duke having made a clean sweep so far by winning two out of two. The same schools participate in this ACC field as do in athletics.

Next year the final sessions will be held at the University of South Carolina.

Alsbaugh And Jarvis Win Display Contest

Alsbaugh took first place honors in the Joe College East Campus display contest, their winning theme being "Dreamer's Holiday."

The display consisted of a large songsheet with the words to "Dreamer's Holiday" and cardboard statues illustrating the words. The chairman of the display committee was Judy Alexander, who praised the fine drawing on the songsheet which was done by Gibby Green.

The second and third place winners in the contest were Jarvis and the Town Girls.

Sigma Chi And Phi Delt Win Float Contest

Winning the first two places in the Joe College Parade were Sigma Chi (top) for most beautiful, with a giant pin celebrating their 100th anniversary, and Phi Delta Theta for most original with their swimming pool float.

The runners-up in the two divisions were Delta Tau Delta and Beta Theta Pi.

After two full days of work, the floats paraded from Sears to East Campus in a procession which included safaris, water skiers, Joe College on Mars, old time cars, the NROTC band, beautiful girls, and many other interesting sights. It took approximately twenty minutes for the fast moving parade to pass.

Judging the floats were Carl Sapp, president of the Chamber of Commerce, Mayor E. J. Evans, and Frances Jarman of WDNC. Presentations were made at the informal dance on Friday night.

Fisher Sets Y-Man Interviews This Week

Edgar Fisher, recently appointed chairman of the YMCA's Orientation Week Committee, announced today that he will hold interviews Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of this week for the 35 Y-Men for next fall's orientation program.

The chairman urges that all interested persons sign up for an interview on the Y Bulletin Board located in the Union at the foot of the staircase leading to the Oak Room. Applicants should report to the YMCA office on the first floor of Flowers Building at the scheduled hour. All interviews will be held between the hours of 2 and 5:30 p.m.

Any student who is a YMCA member and has maintained an overall C average may apply. Any applicant not appointed as a Y-Man will be considered without further interview for the Freshman Advisory Council.

Y-Men will return approximately a week early for the fall semester and serve in numerous ways to aid the dean's staff and the Bureau of Testing and Guidance in acquainting the class of 1959 with Duke life. Y-Men automatically become members of the FAC at the end of the orientation period.

Interviewing the applicants with Fisher will be Wade Penny, Junior Cabinet chairman for the committee; Lev Clark, chairman of the Y's membership committee; and the president of next year's Freshman Advisory Council to be appointed today.

Five Year Plan Offers Liberal Arts Emphasis

The College of Engineering has established a new program to combine liberal arts and engineering studies, President Hollis Edens announced last week.

The new program will be on a five year basis, with students attending a liberal arts college for three years and then the College of Engineering for two years. At the end of the five year period, the liberal arts college will award a Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science degree, and Duke will award a Bachelor of Science degree in engineering.

According to Dean Walter J. Seeley of the College of Engineering, the program has been planned especially for students who desire more liberal arts background than can be obtained during the four-year engineering course.

The new program will particularly benefit students who want to attend a liberal arts college which offers courses in the humanities and social sciences.

After a student has completed three years at a liberal arts school, he will enter the university as a junior. Only students recommended by the faculties of the liberal arts colleges will be admitted, however.

The Duke College of Engineering plans to cooperate with selected liberal arts colleges throughout the United States in the "three-two program," which will get under way this fall.

Cordle Wins Grant For Year's Studies In Swiss University

Dr. Thomas H. Cordle, assistant professor of Romance Languages, received a fellowship award from the Ford Foundation for a year's study in Switzerland.

The award will enable Dr. Cordle to pursue study of modern philosophy at the University of Basel under the foundation's Advancement of Education Fund.

Cordle, who is a specialist in contemporary French literature, particularly Gide and Proust, will study the influence and connection between German philosophy and French writers.

Dr. and Mrs. Cordle will leave the United States early next September, returning the following September.

Born in Atlanta, Georgia, Dr. Cordle obtained his A.B. degree from the University of Virginia and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Yale, where he was an assistant in instruction before coming to Duke in 1950.

Liberal Engineering

We welcome the recent announcement from President A. Hollis Edens that the College of Engineering will participate next fall in a program combining liberal arts and engineering studies. After three years of study at a liberal arts school, a limited number of outstanding students will be eligible to transfer to the College of Engineering for two years. Thus after five years in the program, participants will receive from the liberal arts college a Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science degree and Duke will award a Bachelor of Science degree in engineering.

Dean Walter J. Seeley of the College of Engineering expressed his belief that the program will be a "significant contribution to the education of engineers in a society faced with increasingly complex technological and humanistic problems." Bringing liberally educated young men into the ranks of science, industry and business is an evident trend of the past few years. There seems to be an awareness among educators and employers today that specialization in a technical area of knowledge is simply not enough.

The regular engineering program here unfortunately limits students to the choice of one elective during four years. We lament the plight of those who must face such a rigid and intensified program. The so-called "three-two program," in which Duke will cooperate with selected liberal arts colleges throughout the United States, seems to be a step in the right direction. We hope that the number of outstanding students who will be eligible to participate in the program will not, in years to come, be limited.

Radio Tone

Recently we collected unofficial WDBS record tabulations which seem indicative of student taste prevalent on campus. A spokesman for the "tower of power" told us approximately 2100 popular discs are on file at the station, as opposed to 920 classical recordings and some 450 jazz numbers. These figures add up to 60% popular, 24% classical, and 12% jazz.

According to the weekly program schedule, jazz blares over the speakers for a grand total of two hours, popular renditions fill the air waves for 47 hours, and the traditionally termed classical music is allotted 15 hours. In all fairness to WDBS, however, it must be remembered that several shows play mixed recordings, thus making an accurate tabulation nearly impossible.

After considering this data one may well question whether or not WDBS may be taking the easy way out. Nearly every red-blooded blue devil feels qualified to be a disc jockey for Tin Pan Alley. Not so with jazz or classical music. But we are confident, nevertheless, that competent student announcers could be found for such programs. Better still, one may question the students as to the type music they have demanded from their necessarily responsive campus radio station.

Preview of Coming Attraction

Chanticleer to Evoke Grins

By AL HEIL

Come the middle of the month of May, exhausted eyes turn toward the task of cramming for "final" finals, but always the issuance of the Chanticleer brings pleased grins on faces all over campus. Perhaps the sparkling black, white and brown bound edition of the 1955 Chanticleer will evoke the fondest grins on record.

From the inside front cover, a cinematic view of a room on East and its bridge-playing occupants leaps at the reader, while the corresponding rear inside cover displays a bull session in one of West's dens. Here are slices of our home away from home, and between the covers is much more of the same. Photographer Leonard Kamsler has peered into every nook and cranny of Duke life, from the throaty "oompahs" of a home game to the quietness of the Chem lab at dusk.

Editor Pete Landau explains that posed group photographs characteristic of most annuals have broken up in this Chanticleer with views like the one of a cafeteria book rack filled with military headgear, these breaks from the rows of faces fulfill the purpose of any yearbook, for they recall the little things of a college career which fill the minds of many graduates. However, the quarter page shots of the honorary keys and Duke letter appear in unnecessary robbery of space from the lively copy.

In order "to give a picture of the University as a panorama, rather than a series of individual phases," the copy layout continues smoothly from page to page, divided only by topical headings, a departure from the past practice of treating separate activities on separate pages. Another welcomed innovation is the addition of the East Campus house councils to the section on organizations. Add another blue ribbon for the re-

Gay Words

Presenting a New Dorm Marathon

By GAY WEEKS

He was tall . . . He was dark . . . The muscles in his wide shoulders rippled. He pushed the broom down the hall as I started my morning trek adorned only in a slip to brush my teeth. He kept his eyes always on the point where the broom evaded the cigarette butts on the floor, his cap shading his eyes.

"Mawnin, Miss Weeks," he said.

"Morning, Dave."

Dave knows every pair of feet on the hall. Someday someone's going to get her toe cut off in a lawnmower, and Dave will be forced to look her in the eye for recognition.

Perhaps you stalwart, palpitating things on West envy the janitors on East and their eyes in the tops of their caps. Perhaps you contemplate applying burnt cork, a Southern accent and Light 'n' Bright to your eyeballs and sneaking in an end door some morning. Well, let me suggest a simpler, more exciting method of invading dorms, designed to fit perfectly with the unlimited cut system next year. This invasion tactic was used at Harvard with tremendous success and satisfaction recently.

Two inebriated Harvard lads placed a large wager on who could stay undetected in a girls' dorm the longer and with quite a bit of co-operation from a bevy of misguided Radcliff females, the race was on. They stayed over a month in their respective lairs, eating Ry-Crisp and dust and whatever the girls could scrounge up, and growing pale from hiding in closets and under beds. They would probably still be there if one of the marathon-ing males had not been drafted.

I can see this now as an annual affair surpassing even Joe College in potential. Think of the enthusiasm that would arise if the Jarvis Giant and the Southgate Strongman were neck and neck at fifty days apiece in their respective dorms and undetected by the authorities. Of course it would probably warp the poor contestants' minds completely and they would have to learn how to play bridge as a defensive measure, but the glory it would bring the fraternity would outweigh having the best Homecoming display. Think of the position of authority the champion would command! In time it might even replace football!

some section, which treats everything new this school year from MSGA's "Help keep our campus green" signs to the advent of fraternity night-shirt favors. Scanners will delight at the cleverly-written picture captions.

Art work separating the principle headings was styled in modern impressionistic strokes, remarkable blends of the same brown, black and white found on the cover.

In addition to the brief opening resume, four main areas of student life appear in the 400-page publication: activities, sports, social, and people.

LOVE IN REVERSE

They were at the campus swimming pool. She was standing on the diving board—lithe, young, vibrant. He came swimming over. "Hey," he called, climbing up on the board, "was it you who made that dive a minute ago?"

She nodded—lithe, young, vibrant.

"Whew!" he whistled. "That was some dive! A back jackknife two and a half twist full gainer swan. Where did you learn to dive like that?"

"I fell off the board," she explained.

"Oh," he said. He looked at her—lithe, young, vibrant. "Let's go steady," he said.

"If you only knew," he said later, as he applied artificial respiration.

"What's there to know?" he said. "I'm a typical American college man—young, healthy, and broke."

"That's good enough for me," she said, "for I am not interested in money. I am a girl of simple tastes—lithe, young, vibrant."

"Dad!" he whispered.

"Crazy!" she breathed.

Their lips met. Their arms twined. They fell off the board.

"If you only knew," he said later, as he applied artificial respiration, "how long I have been looking for a lithe, young, vibrant girl of simple tastes, for though my heart is large and full of love, my purse is lean and meagre. My cruel father sends me an allowance barely large enough to support life. So I have been looking high and low for a girl of simple tastes."

"Search no more," she said. "My tastes are simple; my wants are few. Just take me riding in a long, sleek, new yellow convertible, and I'll be yours."

"Goodbye," he said and ran away as fast as his chubby little legs could carry him, for he knew this girl was not for the likes of him. He had neither convertible nor hardtop, nor the money to buy one, nor the means to get the money, short of picking up his stinky father by the ankles and shaking him till his wallet fell out. No, there was nothing for it except to forget this girl.

But lying on his pallet at the dormitory, he could not get her out of his place and finally he knew that whatever the expense, he had to have her—lithe, young, vibrant.

So he sold a few things—his textbooks, his overcoat, his hi-Y pin, his roommate's trunk—and soon he had accumulated a goodly sum. He went to a place that sold automobiles. "How much does it cost," he said, "to buy a yellow convertible automobile?"

The man told him. He collapsed in a gibbering heap.

After a while he stirred and shambled home. But on the way he passed a place with a big sign that said: RENT A CAR—DRIVE YOURSELF. Hope came into his eyes. He went inside. "How much does it cost," he said, "to rent a yellow convertible automobile?"

"Ten dollars a day, plus seven cents a mile," said the man.

"Done and done," said our hero, and soon he drove away in a long, sleek, new, yellow convertible.

"Oh, goody!" said the lithe, young, vibrant girl when she saw the car. "This suits my simple tastes to a T. Come, let us speed over rolling highways and through bosky dells."

And away they went. They drove north, they drove south, they drove fast, they drove slow, they drove east, they drove west, they drove and drove and drove and, finally, tired but happy, they parked high on a windswept hill.

"Philip Morris!" he said.

"Yum, yum!" she said.

They lit up. She smuggled against him. "You know," he said, "you are like a Philip Morris—mild and fresh and relaxing."

"But there is a big difference between me and Philip Morris," she said. "They're available in king-size and regular, and I am only available in regular."

They laughed. They kissed. He screamed.

"What is it, dear man?" cried she, alarmed.

"The speedometer," he said. "I just noticed. We put on 200 miles tonight, and this car costs seven cents a mile, and I have only $14 left."

"But that's exactly enough," she said.

"Yes," he said, "but we still have to drive home, and that will put a lot more miles on the car. Where will I get the money to pay for that?"

"Gee, I don't know," she said.

"He neither," he said glumly. He started the motor and backed out of the parking place.

"Hey, look!" said the girl. "The speedometer doesn't move when you're backing up."

He looked. It was true. Mileage only registered when the car was moving forward—not in reverse. "Eureka!" he said. "That's it!"

"Do you mean—" she said.

"Exactly!" said he. "I will drive home in reverse. Then no more miles will register and I'll have enough money to pay for the car."

"I think that's a George idea!" she cried, and she was right. Because today our hero is in the county jail where food, clothes, and lodging are provided free of charge, and his allowance is piling up fast. By the time his sentence is ended, he should have enough to take his girl out riding again.

BUCK SHOTS

By BUCK TALMAN

Despite the festivities which accompanied Joe College it was a heavy weekend for the Duke athletes as action was seen in all of the spring sports and even recollections of the past football season were again brought to mind.

The track team, as a whole, was idle; but Duke was nevertheless well represented as the versatile Joel Shankle again emerged with two victories in the 16th edition of the Penn Relays.

Shankle, undoubtedly the greatest athlete ever to enter this University, was dubbed the "one man track gang" as he swept the 120 yard hurdles in record time and jumped 23 feet 10 inches to out-leap all other competition in the broad jump.

Last year Shankle made University athletic history as he became the first Duke performer ever to capture two firsts in the annual event. As was this year, he took the broad jump and the 120 yard hurdles.

TIME SETS NEW RECORD

Shankle's 14.1 seconds in the hurdles is a new record for both the relays and the University. It was three tenths of a second better than last years time, and two tenths of a second better than the then existing record of 14.3.

Shankle has been a sensation ever since he came to Duke four years ago. In every meet he has managed to take at least one first place and these past two years he has not once failed to place among the top three in every single event entered.

Coach Bob Chambers brought out the fact last year that even though Shankle is great, he is unable to operate at top level performance due to the fact that he has been relied upon to carry most of the burden. This year however new talent has appeared on the track relieving Shankle of some of his duties, and as a result, both have met with outstanding results.

Considering the incomparable performance that Joel has turned in these fast four years, it is a sure bet that he will be called to represent the United States in the 1956 Olympics.

BARGER MOST VALUABLE PLAYER

Football memories were again revived Saturday as the Center Theater's "most valuable player" award was presented to last year's captain and field general, Jerry Barger.

Barger was chosen by a secret ballot cast by his teammates and his name now goes down in history along with such all-time greats as Eric Tipton, Fred Crawford, George McAfee, and Ace Parker.

Fatzinger Paces Win Over State

Righthander Harley Fatzinger spaced four singles here Saturday afternoon to hurl the Duke Blue Devils to a 4-3 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over North Carolina State.

Fatzinger, a sophomore, chalked up his fourth straight win of the season against no defeats in knocking the Wolfpack out of first place in the loop standing.

The Blue Devils won the game in the third when they picked up three runs off three hits, and ushered starter Tommy Hargrove to an early shower.

Duke picked up an insurance run in the fifth when Cockrell opened with a double, advanced to third on Brewer's ground out, and was plated by George Atkinson's single to left.

State managed to push one across in the seventh on a walk by Frazelle, an error by Atkinson, and a single by Joe Baringer.

The victory was the fourth loop win for the Devils against five defeats.

The University of Miami's fabulous tennis team continued its dominance over opposing teams here Saturday as they overpowered the powerful Duke team 6-3.

Miami has not lost a contest since 1952, and it was only the second loss of the year for the Blue Devils. The other defeat came at the hands of the University of North Carolina who were also beaten by the Hurricanes over the weekend.

Buzzy Hettleman and Dave Schimmel copped the singles victories, while Hettleman and Bobby Greene took one doubles match for Duke.
