Economics Professor

Accountants Choose Black To Head 1958-59 Association

By LORNA BLANE

Professor Martin L. Black, Jr., instructor of accounting in the economics department, has been elected president of the American Accounting Association for 1958-59.

Black, who served as vice-president of the Association in 1954, will preside over this year's conference at Boulder, Colorado.

A University graduate in 1926, Black returned to take up his professorship after doing graduate work at Northwestern University. He has been an accounting professor for the past thirty years.

Black also serves as president of the North Carolina Association of Certified Public Accountants and as editor of the Co-operative Accountant Magazine. In his capacity as president of the N. C. Association of CPAs, Black yesterday announced the appointment of Robert L. Dickens, associate professor of accounting, as chairman of the Committee on Accounting for Non-Profit Organizations.

Black also appointed Stephen C. Harvard, assistant controller of the University, to the same committee, and named John H. Shields, associate professor of accounting, to the Committee on Education.

100 Freshmen Frighten Away Carload Of Female 'Visitors'

By SCOTT STEVENS

Assistant Managing Editor
A group of unidentified girls in an old Ford caused a near riot late last night behind the freshman dormitories as more than 100 freshmen poured out of their houses in answer to the female shouts.

"Those girls sure were scared," related one freshman after the crowd had stopped the car in which the girls were riding.

The incident began, according to one Kilgo resident, when the girls stopped behind the freshman houses and started "whistling and hollering at us boys in our rooms."

"We all started yelling back—a whole bunch of us," reported the big freshman.

After the girls had driven back and forth several times, a crowd of freshmen gathered behind House M—"there must have been a hundred of them, up in the trees, I guess"—and stopped the girls' car on their next trip past the quadrangle.

"They [freshmen] came running out from everywhere, and started rocking the car," said the big freshman. "Boy, those girls were scared!"

After the crowd of freshmen had made way and allowed the carload of girls to drive off, one jubilant man yelled "I bet they won't try that again!"

Two U. S. Agencies Appoint Dr. Braibanti To Governmental Consultation Positions

Dr. Ralph Braibanti, associate professor of political science, has been appointed to two governmental consultation positions. The International Cooperation Administration named Braibanti senior public service consultant on matters relating to Pakistan.

The Pakistani government requested Braibanti's appointment as consultant on civil service. He has conducted several extensive studies on that subject in Pakistan.

Dr. Braibanti spent two months in Pakistan last winter in connection with his work and made a second trip to India, Pakistan and Southeast Asia for the same purpose this summer.

Braibanti was also re-appointed lecturer and consultant on Far East Affairs for the fourth consecutive year by the Army War College in Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Free Football Movies

Movies of the Duke-South Carolina game will be shown at 7 p.m. tomorrow night, in the auditorium of the Chemistry building.

Free movies of each out of town football game will be shown on the following Tuesday nights, with a representative from the athletic department giving play by play descriptions, said Terry Schultz of the Student Union Recreation Committee.

NATURALLY

And the Rain Came

The semester is finally underway officially as that perennial Duke-goer, rain, baptized the 1958-59 academic year with 1.10 inches of drizzle yesterday.

The rain—as much as part of the week end picture as a cabin party, it seems—dripped intermittently from 3:42 a.m. to 4:25 p.m.

A total of 4.49 inches of sog- giness is expected during September with a comparatively dry October scheduled for 2.82.

If the past is prologue, it'll come as .705 inch per October week end.

Cleland Conducts Rededication Rite

Dean James T. Cleland will conduct a rededication service tomorrow evening in the Women's College Chapel to recognize the presentation of a new altar table to the sanctuary's furnishings.

Mrs. Lenox Baker has presented the table as a memorial to her mother, Mrs. Robert L. Flowers, wife of a former president of the university.

Additional changes within the chapel, sponsored by the Full Membership Group, will be recognized at this time. Improvements include recovered kneelers, red carpeting within the altar rail, and a new rear altar for crosses and candles.

All students of the University community are invited to the ceremony at 5:15 p.m. tomorrow in the chapel located in East Duke Building.

Tau Epsilon Phi Retains Top Scholastic Average

Delta Sigma Phi Follows Close Second; Four Fraternities on Social Probation

By ED GREENBLATT
Chronicle News Editor

Tau Epsilon Phi for the second time in a row topped all other fraternities in scholastic averages and was again followed by Delta Sigma Phi.

The TEP's led with a 2.51363 average and the Delta Sig's had a 2.50405.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon earned the lowest fraternity scholastic average with a 1.90180 and has been last for the past three semesters.

For failure to make the all-men's average for the required number of semesters, Kappa Alpha, Kappa Sigma, Pi Kappa Alpha, and Sigma Alpha Epsilon will be on social probation this semester.

Theta Chi received a warning and must now earn the all-men's average this semester or be placed on social probation next semester.

A total of 2222 men earned a 2.26391 average for the all-men's average last spring. The all-fraternity average comprising 1146 men was 2.31704, and the non-fraternity men's average for the spring semester was 2.20584.

Seven fraternities rose in their scholastic standing among the other fraternities, Phi Kappa Psi and Sigma Phi Epsilon made the greatest improvement with both raising their standing by five places.

The standing of seven fraternities fell down. Alpha Tau Omega and Sigma Nu took the greatest loss dropping five places each.

Only the last place fraternity, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, was below the non-fraternity average of 2.20584. The SAEs were also the only group to compile an average of less than 2.0.

Figures for the fraternity averages were compiled by Dean Cox's office. Cox also released the table shown below.

FRATERNITY AVERAGES FOR LAST DECADE

The figures below are scholastic averages of the 19 West Campus fraternities for the ten-year-period prior to 1957-58. The numbers represent the percentage amount that each fraternity has been above or below (—) the all-men's average for the University. Two fraternities were below the all-men's average for the last decade. The numbers were above the all-men's average, a fact which Dean Robert Cox partially attributes to special emphasis on scholarship by fraternity leaders.

Women To Receive Fellowships, Honors In First Assembly

The first regular Woman's College assembly of the fall semester, the Scholastic Honor's Assembly, will be held tonight at 7 p.m. in the Woman's College Auditorium.

At that time the class scholarships and class honors will be presented. The two women with the highest average in each class will be given gold D's, and new members of Ivy will be tapped.

The sorority with the highest scholastic average will be given the Sorority Cup, and the Ivy Cup will be awarded to the dorm with the highest average.

During the program the holders of the Woman's College scholarships will be recognized.

Playboys And Gym-Rats

Page one's charts concerning the scholastic averages of the University's 19 fraternities point out several factors, both good and bad, which should be considered by the students, faculty, and Administration.

On the affirmative side, the figures destroy the notion that all fraternities here are a hindrance to scholastic attainment. Fortunately just the opposite is the case. Nearly every year more than two-thirds of the fraternities have earned quality point averages surpassing that of the all-men's mark. That means that the members of most fraternities are doing better academically than the "average" Duke man. This is a situation for which fraternities can only be given praise.

However, all is not so bright. First, there is always that possibility that the members of these scholastically superior fraternities could have done even better if it had not been for their Greek affiliation. Many studies have given weight to this argument, but to share this belief fully would be folly. Many fraternities do establish scholastic goals and do sufficiently attain them.

The second and most serious problem is the group of five or six fraternities which do consistently fall below the all-men's average. An occasional slip by a fraternity could be more easily excused, but the repeated failure to be even average indicates a warped sense of values on the part of these groups.

These five or six frats have made two mistakes. They haven't established the proper academic goals, and they haven't used the proper methods of reaching the meager goals which they have set. They have been more content to be just playboys and gym-rats.

The leaders of these groups can do something to correct this situation and to regain respect for their groups. A study room system can be instigated for all brothers needing help. The pledge trainer, as has been done, can check regularly with the professors of every pledge to see what help is needed and can be given. Social restrictions can be placed upon brothers who are behind in their grades. Many things can be done to raise the scholastic averages of the groups to the proper level, but unless something is done, they don't even deserve to be called "fraternities."

New Thoughts For A New Year

By CARLYLE WINDLEY

Hundreds of new freshmen, new friends, new flicks; new clothes, professors, classes, dates and pin-ups. Yes, it's going to be a good year. It's going to be a good year because as of last Thursday many of the students here at Duke really started to put into effect some new ideas.

These ideas are the results of many hot, little brains hard at work during the past summer when occasionally students thought of the gripes and complaints that were voiced during the past school year. Some of the students realized that to complain implies suggesting a change as gripes are useless unless a better plan or solution to a problem is offered.

Now when I say change, I do not mean that someone has thought of how to eliminate tuition or classes on Saturday (for some things are bigger than all of us). Instead, I mean simple, effective ideas which every student can accomplish without necessitating the changing of Spring Vacation to a month's duration and still end school in June.

For instance, let's consider the social life of the Freshmen (males in particular)—which every upperclassman acknowledges leaves much to be desired.

1. There are cabarets held in the Union ballroom after every home football game. They are stag or drag affairs and if well attended usually are a pretty good "party."

2. Off the side of the Alumni Lounge is a lovely dining room replete with mahogany furniture and oriental rugs called the Old Trinity Room. There is enough seating space to allow an entire dormitory floor and their dates to have quite a "soiree." To use this room, freshmen men need only send someone to see Mr. Minah, the director of the University dining halls, or Mr. Bill Jones, his right hand man. Either of these gentlemen will help to plan an excellent dinner at a very reasonable cost. To really make it a formal affair there could be candle-light, tux and cocktail dresses, and dinner music furnished through the courtesy of someone kind enough to bring over a phonograph.

Student-Faculty Relations

Now, a brief suggestion as to the improvement of student-faculty relations. Here again is a good opportunity to employ the silver spoon-table cloth approach.

For example, if several students discover that they hold a mutual amount of admiration for a particular professor and would like to get to know him better, they could collectively ask the professor and his wife to have dinner with them and their dates. This way they would not only get to know the professor as a more social sort of person but the cost of their guests' dinner would be quite nominal when divided among the hosts.

While the above ideas are not earthshaking in profundity, they are new ideas in that they are seldom employed by students of this university. Furthermore, in all probability they are ideas that will reap pretty satisfying results; and, they are ideas that will help to make college a little more enjoyable, a bit more enriching and in the end a better year for many of the students here at Duke University.

'The Matchmaker'

By GARY TABOR

Farce and slapstick are commodities which could be compared to frankfurts and hamburgers. And there are good frankfurts and hamburgers. When entering a restaurant you expect to be served fine cuts of pork or beef and you are surprised to find frankfurts and hamburgers set before you, you will naturally be disappointed, and possibly even disgusted enough to leave the restaurant, not appreciating the quality of the meat because of the disappointment. But, on the other hand, if you go into a restaurant expecting to be confronted with frankfurts and hamburgers, you will leave the restaurant able to comment objectively on the quality of the meats. The Matchmaker, the commodity which is offered for your consumption at the Criterion through Wednesday of this week, is most definitely farce and slapstick. And The Matchmaker is good farce and slapstick.

In this Don Hartman production and adaptation of the Thornton Wilder stage success of 1956, Director Joseph Anthony has had the good fortune of using Shirley Booth in the role which Ruth Gordon created in the Broadway production, that of Mrs. Dolly Levi, the conniving yet charming polymath whose main mission in her post-mid-aged existence is to inveigle a Horace Vandergelder, the richest merchant in Yonkers around 1884, into marriage. Now marriage to pre-elderly Horace is a "bribe to make a house cleaner believe she is a housekeeper," and this sacred project is reserved, so he imagines, for a much younger and more nubile maiden. Of course, Mrs. Molly Levi, like most women, is finally successful in smearing the Jack Bennyish Vandergelder, but not before she has led him and the accompanying troupe through a mad escapade in the big city of New York.

Van Gelder is played admirably by Paul Ford, who reminded me many times of the famous Mr. Magoo, and most of the time I find Mr. Magoo quite amusing. Shirley MacLaine is adequate in the role of Irene Molloy, the young milliner who is the original object of Vandergelder's marriage intentions, but is lured away by a once most promising actor named Tony Perkins, who plays the part of Vandergelder's chief clerk, Cornelius Hatcher. Mr. Perkins' career, since his most auspicious beginning in the film Fear Strikes Out, has remained quite static. With The Matchmaker, his career might be considered degenerate. At times in his comic role, he is completely ineffective (of all the monologues, his is the least effective) as the young man who has played hookie from work and sought real adventure in the big city.

Shirley Booth is almost exquisite, however, and a delight to see in action. She deserves close scrutiny, for if you look away for a second you will miss a glance or twitch of the nose which make her such a bubbling, coarsening success.

Technically speaking, film adaptations of Broadway plays leave a lot to be desired. The stage gimmick of having the actors speak directly to the audience is most difficult to accept in films, and it was in this one many times, including the final scene. The photography was mediocre, and sometimes downright poor, especially the close-ups during the monologues. John Hayes' screenplay of the Wilder play certainly did not harm the original, and some of the apophorisms of Mrs. Levi and Vandergelder were priceless.

The Matchmaker is good farce and slapstick, as good as our motion picture industry is producing these years. Before closing this review, I think we should have a moral, and what better moral could we find than these words of Abraham Lincoln: "Well, for those who like that sort of thing I should think that is just about the sort of thing they would like." Go out and see The Matchmaker, especially if you like frankforts and hamburgers.

Players Hold Tryouts For First Production

Tryouts for the Duke Players first production of the 1958-59 season, My Three Angels, will get under way in Page Auditorium at 7 p.m. tonight and will continue from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. tomorrow.

My Three Angels is scheduled to open in October.

President Gary Tunnmore has announced that the season will continue with the presentation of The Lady's Not For Burning in December, and will be capped off by the production of Hedda Gabler, set to go on stage in March.

Season tickets to all presentations may be secured by sending a check to Box 6936, College Station. The cost is $2.50 per season ticket. These tickets will also be sold at the box office at the opening of My Three Angels.

ASME To Hear Missile Head

Sheldon P. Smith, NIKE manufacturer, will speak to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the College of Engineering.

Smith is brought here under the auspices of the University branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, which holds its first meeting of the current year on Tuesday. Smith is the general manager of the Charlotte Division of Douglas Aircraft Company, at which Division NIKE's are manufactured. Of especial interest to missile enthusiasts is his topic, general and varied aspects of guided missiles.

All engineers, as well as anyone interested in missiles, are invited and urged to attend this initial meeting.

USC Holds Big Blue From Scoreboard

Offense Good For First Half; 'Failed To Cash In' --- Murray

By ART SANTO DOMINGO

As coach Bill Murray put it, "We just failed to cash in on our opportunities."

That statement pretty well sums up the opening game loss to South Carolina at Columbia. The Gamecocks scored early in the first period, made the two point conversion, and held off the Blue Devils the rest of the way to come off with an 8-0 victory. They were a very happy bunch when it was all over.

Duke took the yardage gained honors over the struggling Birds. On offense the Devils performed well enough except when they got close to the opposing end zone. But during the second half they did almost nothing. The duo of Wray Carlton and George Dutrow, somewhat potent in the first two periods cooled off.

The Blue Devils' best chance came early in the second quarter when they moved to the Gamecock three and fell short of a first down at the two. A penalty at this point, just before Bob Brodhead passed to Carlton for 21 yards, hurt immensely.

Off-sides infractions marred the game for Duke. The linemen, especially on defense appeared jumpy or too anxious as they hopped in and out of the line before the snap. Several times the USC drives were aided by such infractions. As an example on the final Carolina drive which killed the time left on the clock, preventing the Dukes from another real chance at a tie, the red flags denoting Devil off-sides flew all over the field.

The game had instances which were reminiscent of last season. USC repeatedly kept Duke in the hole by punting deep into Devil territory. Georgia Tech did much the same last November in handing the Blue its first loss of 1957 in Atlanta, also a shutout, 13-0. There wasn't much the Murraymen could do with the ball inside the five yard line....

Unlike the Tech backs, the Gamecocks did not penetrate the Blue Devil line to its supposed weakness—the middle. Instead most of the big gains were made around the Devil flanks.

Murray had praise for his conquerors. Said the Devil mentor, "I think they are a good football team—big, strong, and experienced." The hosts showed him plenty of spirit, but nothing new in the way of offensive plays.

Meanwhile the Devils pulled some surprises including a fine reverse play and some new pass patterns. The topsy-turvy ACC race should provide the Devils with plenty of action.

Practice Begins For Booters Without Bly

Beginning practice last Thursday without the services of their coach, Jim Bly, the Duke soccer team went through drills under the guidance of their captain, John D'Angelo. Coach Bly has been hospitalized this past week and is expected to resume his coaching duties this week.

Not much is known about the Duke booters as yet but with approximately 25 men showing up for the first practices they appear to have more depth and a bigger squad than last year's team which finished with a 3-3-2 record.

The opening game for the booters will be Homecoming weekend with Navy. All of Duke's five home soccer games will be held on the Freshmen field and there is no charge for seeing the contests.

House L Frogmen Splash To Frosh Swim Victory

By RONNIE JOHNSON

The freshman frogmen of House L topped some 200 competitors to win the 31st annual Freshman Swimming Meet held Saturday afternoon in Card Gymnasium.

Following L were House J with 36 points, House O with 32, House G with 9, House N with 9, House H with 7, House I with 7, House P with 7, House M with 6, and House K with 2.

When asked his impressions of the meet, Coach Jack Persons replied, "We didn't have another Steve Smith or Donnie Schumacher, but taking everything as a whole, we had a pretty good group of boys."

The varsity swimming coach was very encouraged with the enthusiasm and eagerness of the participants and was especially impressed with the efforts of swimmers Bob Breen, Tony Adams, John Lange, Wed Francis, Steve Brown, Pat Coughlan, Art McCausland, Ed Heidt, and Bill Watrous.

Coach Persons was also impressed with another five or ten boys who were handicapped through slow starts or slow heats.

Individually Adams of J won the 50-yard free-style, Lange of J won the 100-yard backstroke, Brown of L won the 100-yard free-style, Tony Batelle of I won the diving exhibition, Lange won the 75-yard butterfly, and Adams topped the 100-yard breast stroke. House J won the 200-yard freestyle, while House L came out on top of the 200-yard medley relay.

Tennis Meeting

Coach Whit Cobb has announced that there will be an important meeting of all prospects for both the varsity and freshman tennis teams tomorrow afternoon at 5 p.m. in the physical education office. At this time plans for the fall tennis practice will be discussed.

A former chancellor of another university is reported to have said that all universities should be burned down every twenty years, lest they get into a rut, stagnate, or become self-satisfied. This university was endowed in 1924.

Gridiron Grist
