Party Chairmen Silent On Nomination Seekers

Campus and Union party chairmen yesterday declined to release any information about possible nominees in the upcoming nomination caucuses Wednesday and Thursday.

Mac Sharpe, MSGA treasurer mentioned as a possible Union party nominee for MSGA president, declared, however, that he would not seek nomination for any MSGA executive office.

"I would run if I felt that I had a program that would benefit the students, I don't, consequently I'm not running," Sharpe said. He added that he was undecided whether he would seek Union party nomination as senior fraternity senator.

John Harrington, Campus party chairman, said he would not release any information about possible candidate because "it wouldn't be fair to our party."

"It would give the opposition an advantage," Harrington added. He said the Union party would be able to plan on what men they would nominate opposite Campus party nominees.

Union Party chairman Craig Choate also declined to name possible nominees. Choate said that attempts to place the best man in each office made it possible that a man would be nominated for an office that he had not had in mind.

Both chairmen gave their approval to individuals declaring their candidacy for nominations.

Both parties will caucus Wednesday and Thursday nights. The Union party caucus will convene at 9 p.m. Wednesday in 117 Social Science. The Campus party caucus will also be held at 9 p.m. in 114 Social Science.

ZBT's $4.14 Average Tops Fraternities; House J Leads Freshman Contributors

By DAVE SANFORD
Chronicle News Editor

With total collections in cash and pledges for this year's West Campus Chest campaign now standing at $3,190.25, Chairman Brian Thiessen expressed confidence yesterday that the drive will pass last year's collections.

He indicated that he was not sure the campaign would reach its $3500 goal.

"Since a number of solicitors have not made their final report, I expect $150 to $200 more," Thiessen said. With this money and pledges still to be collected, final results will not be known until March 20.

"There is a possibility that the money yet to be turned in will make up the $310 needed to reach our goal," observed Thiessen.

Cash donations at the end of the active campaign last Saturday totaled $2346.68 leaving $843.57 in pledges to be collected during the next ten days.

Freshmen pledged and contributed a sum of $999.91 led by House J averaging $1.77 per man. Collecting $1.58 from each resident, House V took second place, House M with an average of $1.51 followed closely in third position.

Fraternity men added $1067.13 to the campaign with ZBT reaching the highest average of $4.14 per member. The second highest average was made by SAE with $2.13. SigEP came in third with $1.83 per man.

In the independent dorms House GG donated the largest amount with $306.27. Second place was filled by House HH with $227.11, and House FF contributed $185.01 bringing the independent total to $718.39.

Hanes House turned in $293.90 averaging approximately $.98 per student, and the Men's Graduate Center gave $80 bringing its average to $.20 per resident.

Research Projects Total $1,000,000

The University has announced plans for more than a million dollars worth of research, headed by the construction of a $776,000 gerontology building.

The building, to be located across from the Hospital in what is now parking area, will provide facilities for study of the problems of the aged and aging by researchers in medical, biological, social and behavioral sciences.

One-half of the funds for the building are to be provided by the U. S. Public Health Service. The University is now seeking matching funds from other sources.

RADIATION FACILITIES

Major expansion of radiation treatment facilities at the Medical Center is scheduled to begin in April. The radiation facilities will be housed in a one-story addition to the southeast end of the Hospital.

Total cost of construction and equipment will be about $375,000. The North Carolina Medical Care Commission has allocated $193,333, while the rest will come from University sources.

BIOCHEMISTRY

The University has also received three U. S. Public Health Service grants totaling $85,704 to support research and to provide equipment in the Medical Center's department of biochemistry.

Both the new building and the addition will be done in North Carolina stone.

SU Committee To Hear Israeli Official

Arich Eilan, counselor of the Israel delegation to the United Nations, will appear at a seminar Wednesday for members of the Student Union's Educational Affairs Committee and invited guests.

The Russian-born Eilan, a former journalist, is a veteran of fighting in the Israeli War of Independence in 1948 and a leader in the government of the new nation.

He was appointed in 1956 as first secretary of the permanent mission of Israel to the United Nations. In 1958 he was unanimously named one of three presiding officers of the General Assembly's Trusteeship Council, the first Israeli delegate to serve in this capacity.

He received his appointment as counselor of the Israeli UN delegation in December of last year.

A Horrendous Possibility

One must be amazed at the daily advances made by science; it becomes more and more evident that nothing is impossible. We were fascinated and made somewhat uncomfortable by a recent article on current advances being made in the biological sciences and the possibilities they suggest for further development. It is the possible social consequences of the modification of the human being that leave one just a bit horrified.

Fatherless frogs, we are told, are being produced now by the routine substitution of chemicals for male reproductive cells. Further research suggests that in addition biology may in the future be able to create any number of identical individuals, all real twins. Test tube culture can produce a superior individual; chemicals may be used to stimulate the brain to brief periods of superthought; and courage could be triggered by hormones. Pills for the complete satisfaction of hunger are possible, we understand, as are super-tranquilizers, or "happy pills" which would completely eliminate anxiety and strain in the individual. Fantastic, all of it.

Man has the wonderful power to better his environment and himself. But we will be so reactionary as to ask, "Where will the line be drawn?" It is a matter of values; who will wield them? And what happens to values when courage is chemically induced, human creation is artificial, and everyone is identical? French biologist Dr. Jean Rostand sees the problem from another angle: "People will live for 200 years, or even more. There will be no more failure, no more fear, no more tragedy. Life will be safer, easier, longer, but it will still be worth living?" Modern joiners, security seekers and tranquilizer addicts won't understand that question—but will it?

Fishing for Candidates

Politicians on West Campus are in a dither this week trying to uncover candidates for the various student government positions, and we hope the party chieftains will not become so desperate that they will nominate just anyone who throws his name in the hat. Even if a few positions on either party's slate remain empty, it would be better than nominating men who have no talent or real interest in the offices they seek.

Qualified candidates cannot be created by the manipulations of a few party leaders; they must arise by virtue of their past accomplishments or obvious talents for government positions. Unfortunately, the men who meet this criterion this year are few in number, but nevertheless the parties should not compromise with quality just to have a full slate.

In most instances both parties will have qualified men to nominate, but we hope that if the prospects for Senate and executive nominees look slim, neither the Campus nor Union party chiefs will resort to fishing for candidates.

The Bibbit

By CARLYLE WINDLEY

What is a Bibbit? Well, on this campus the Bibbit is the guy who draws subtle attention to himself by wearing unconventional clothing, indulging in unconventional behavior, and voicing trite, unconventional remarks.

Furthermore, the Duke Bibbit is the person who adopts the above characteristics not because he is convinced of their merit but because they express simply and harmlessly revolt. The unconventional clothing, behavior, and verbal declarations are but ways of saying, "I am an individual. I can wear what I please, act as I please, and say what I please. No elder shall forcefully direct my conduct and thereby destroy my individuality. I am in protest; I am a bohemian."

What happens? Well, a Duke student grows a beard, dons a cravat or a turtleneck sweater, makes a few radical remarks and convinces himself that he is a Greenwich Village compatriot. However, the cravat is made of silk, the sweater is woven of cashmere and the ragged trousers bear the functionally useless but oh so modest Ivy league fanny buckle.

This is Bibbit. This is a pseudo-bohemian. His revolt against the bourgeois is in itself a middle class revolt. Furthermore, his revolt is an ambivalent one because the things the Bibbit hates are also the things he hates to give up.

The objects of his displeasure are but part of a social world into which he was born and reared. It is the only world that he has ever known. He will not divorce himself from it. He will just enjoy the benefits of his society and at the same time half-heartedly fight for his own individuality.

This is the Duke pseudo-bohemian. What is he? Nothing more than a college student trying to find his way in a very complex and sometimes alarming world. He wants to be an adult but he prefers to crawl rather than walk. His dress and his actions are not an intellectual protest against the society in which he lives. They are but the last lusty cries of a young man growing up.

Is such a fight for freedom good? I really don't know. As for me, I shall tighten my cravat, put on my trenchcoat, pull down the brim of my Navy surplus "dixiecup," and go walk in the rain. There, alone, I can think sad thoughts about a sad world known only to youth.

Tower Talk

With the Gerontological Study now planning to build its own $700,000 building the list of possible tenants for the old Ordinance Research building on Myrtle Drive has been reduced, and we suggest that the mansion be used as an inn for visitors to and guests of the University.

Frequently the University needs different accommodations for its guests and visitors from those provided by the local hotels and motels, and these are not provided by the Union tower rooms or the University House.

The residential design of the former OOR building could be used to great advantage for these needed University accommodations.

WSGA council will discuss whether or not to release the election totals at tonight's council meeting.

Exact figures were not released with the names of winning candidates since it was thought to be unnecessary and totals have not been released before, according to Jo Holloway, acting WSGA president.

West Campus releases vote totals along with names.

Council also is expected to meet with the deans at this meeting as a step in the program aimed at better communication between the administration and the student body. The deans to attend were not named.

HUSBANDS, ANYONE?

It has been alleged that coeds go to college for the sole purpose of finding husbands. This is, of course, an infamous canard, and I give fair warning that, small and spongy as I am, anybody who says such a dastardly thing when I am around had better be prepared for a sound thrashing!

Girls go to college for precisely the same reasons as men do: to broaden their horizons, to lengthen their vistas, to drink at the fount of wisdom. But if, by pure chance, while a girl is engaged in these meritorious pursuits, a likely looking husband should pop into view, why, what's wrong with that? Eh? What's wrong with that?

The question now arises, what should a girl look for in a husband? A great deal has been written on this subject. Some say character is most important, some say background, some say appearance, some say education. All are wrong.

The most important thing—bar none—in a husband is health. Though he be handsome as Apollo and rich as Croesus, what good is he if he just lies around all day accumulating bedsores?

The very first thing to do upon meeting a man is to make sure he is sound of wind and limb. Before he has a chance to sweet-talk you, slap a thermometer in his mouth, roll back his eyelids, yank out his tongue, rap his patella, palpate his thorax, ask him to straighten out a horseshoe with his teeth. If he fails these simple tests, phone for an ambulance and go on to the next prospect.

If, however, he turns out to be physically fit, proceed to the second most important requirement in a husband. I refer to a sense of humor.

A man who can't take a joke is a man to be avoided. There are several simple tests to find out whether your prospect can take a joke or not. You can, for example, slash his tires. Or burn his "Mad" comics. Or steal his switchblade. Or turn loose his pet raccoon. Or shave his head.

After each of these good-natured pranks, laugh gaily and shout "April Fool!" If he replies, "But this is February nineteenth," or something equally churlish, cross him off your list and give thanks you found out in time.

But if he laughs silverly and calls you "Little minx!" put him to the next test. Find out whether he is kindly.

The quickest way to ascertain his kindness is, of course, to look at the cigarette he smokes. Is it mild? Is it clement? Is it humane? Does it minister tenderly to the psyche? Does it oodle the synapses? Is it a good companion? Is it genial? Is it bright and friendly and full of dulcet pleasure from cocker to tilt the heart of darkness?

Is it, in short, Philip Morris?

If Philip Morris it be, then clasp the man to your bosom with hoops of steel, for you may be sure that he is kindly as a summer breeze, kindly as a mother's kiss, kindly to his very marrow.

And now, having found a man who is kindly and healthy and blessed with a sense of humor, the only thing that remains is to make sure he will always earn a handsome living. That, fortunately, is easy. Just enroll him in engineering. © 1959, Max Shulman

Is Everybody Happy?

By ART SANTO DOMINGO
Chronicle Sports Editor

Saturday night's finale to the ACC Tournament was a farce from start to finish. Even a power failure darkened things.

For a game that had no meaning there were too many in attendance, but the ACC made money off the tourney and everyone was happy. Or were they?

How can the Tarheels live down that horrible defeat at the hands of a team they beat twice during the season? We're of the opinion that Carolina is not as good as they were a month ago, but still there was no excuse for that exhibition. It will be interesting to see how Frank McGuire "explains" this one to the New York basketball writers at their luncheon today.

There was no pressure on either team, and Carolina put little pressure on the Wolfpack all night. Reporters after the game asked McGuire leading questions about his methods of coaching. He didn't have to win the game to make the New York trip, but he resented questions about his team's efforts. Guilty conscience, Frank?

It doesn't look too good for the ACC to send a team to the NCAA playoffs which has lost three of their last six, two by whipping scores. But Madison Square Garden lunary Ned Irish must have been amazed to see the "terrible" Tarheels lose like that. Lee Shaffer swung a few elbows early in the game and was pulled out, cautioned by McGuire and returned meekly; Doug Moe was going at half speed.

On the other end of the court State's Wolfpack had all the glory of the evening. The game, which should never have been played, ended perfectly a fine season for them. When asked if it mattered to his players that they couldn't go to the NCAA tournament Coach Ev Case replied that all they wanted was the ACC title. They looked happy enough in the pictures, but they must have had their thoughts about it.

Any pictures of McGuire receiving trophies after the game would be incomplete without the following caption—Boooooooo! That was the reaction of the crowd.

Remark heard at random at halftime of the final game: "I knew that Carolina wouldn't get through the tournament without the Mills brothers."

Cops Heavyweight ACC Title as Soph

Karl Schettler, a sophomore from Durham with no previous experience, won Duke's only wrestling crown of the year at the ACC Championships at Charlottesville, Va., by winning decisively three straight matches.

The Blue Devil heavyweight was one of two grapplers to break the Maryland monopoly in the sport.

Coach Carmen Falcone was tremendously pleased at the showing of his man. The win made a reality of the prediction a couple of weeks ago that Shettler could be the ACC champ. Falcone's captain, Ken LaBone also reached the finals before losing to Maryland's Nick Biondi in the 137-pound class.

Falcone remarked that "Schettler did a great job all year, and I'm especially happy about his success." He's come a long way for a boy without any experience," continued the Blue Devil coach.

Schettler was the only heavyweight who had to go through three matches in order to win his title. Other more experienced wrestlers received byes in the first round and were required to win only two matches.

Four other Devils won fourth place medals. Bob Crummie in the 191-pound class, Joe Warren, who just had a cast from his leg removed, in the 167-pound division, and Bill Scott (137) and Tom Baldwin (123) placed for Duke which finished behind Maryland, UNC, and Virginia.

Iron Dukes Prepare for ACC Indoor Games at Chapel Hill

Duke's indoor track team began preparations this afternoon for the final meet of the season on the hardwood, the ACC Indoor Games, to be contested Saturday afternoon in Carolina's Woollen Gymnasium.

Tickets for the annual event are $1 and will be available at the door. The first race will begin around 2 p.m.

The Blue Devils find themselves the underdog in the meet, as defending champion Maryland is expected to cop top laurels again. Duke along with the Tar Heels is expected to give the Terps a close run for high honors, however.

Leading the charges of coaches Al Buehler and Bob Chambers will be distance men Jerry Nourse and Cary Weisiger. Nourse is expected to run the mile and two-mile events, while Weisiger will be called on for the mile and possibly one of the relay events.

Middle-distance man Tom Bazemore, who can run either the half or quarter miles, will battle with Carolina's Dave Scurlock for individual honors. On their last meeting Bazemore pushed Big Dave all the way, finishing a close second and causing Scurlock to come within one and a half seconds of the world's record for the 880.

Three Duke Cagers In Charity Contest

Three Duke seniors will participate in a basketball game to be played in High Point on Saturday night between Big Four and North State Conference seniors.

Bill Watson, Jerry Robertson, and George Barrett will play in the charity tilt sponsored by the High Point Chamber of Commerce. The game will be the first of what is hoped will become an annual affair.

Other Big Four players are Lou Pucillo, George Stepanovich, Bob MacGillivray, and John Richter of N.C. State, and Dickie Odom, Olin Broadway, and Bill Greene of Wake Forest.
