The first of a series of debates between Trinity College and Vanderbilt University was held in Nashville, Tenn., on the evening of Wednesday, Dec. 21, 1905, in West 2nd Methodist church. The representatives of Vanderbilt were Messrs. H. B. Burns and A. T. Howard, with the affirmative side of the question. The representatives of Trinity were W. G. Jerome and E. O. Cole, for the negative. The question was: "Is Protection necessary to the development of skilled labor in the different industries.

The first speaker on the affirmative was Mr. Jerome. On the first negative, a synopsis of whose speech is given:

Mr. Jerome's speech:

We of the negativists hold that the principle of protection is untried, that it is a system of discriminating favoritism, that it unreasonably and unjustly burdens some and benefits others, that the essence of government is to regulate and protect, and yet in this system it is the strongest who are favored and the weakest who are taxed.

Finally, it should be maintained for three reasons: 1. It increases the war-making spirit; it brings the prices of necessities by admitting free products that otherwise would bring prosperity and good will between our country and foreign peoples, and between the better men of the world.

Mr. Cole, for the negative, closed the debate by saying:

He began by stating that recent events indicate that protection is being betrayed in the house of the manufacturer; after summarizing the argument of Mr. Jerome and stating the position of the negativists, he analyzed the three chief claims of protection, etc. That protection increases the earnings of labor, fosters the worst forms of monopoly, and that it was a tariff principle which had often led to an opposite result.

The second speaker on the affirmative was Mr. Baskette. On the first negative, a synopsis of whose speech is given:

Mr. Baskette's speech:

He began by stating that the element to which the COLLEGE PESSIMIST belongs. The price of the book will please see him as soon as possible. We hope it will not be held next year at Durham. The next debate of historians will be held next year at Durham.

ATHLETICS.

With respect to sports comes the material for the editor of this department. Though Trinity's students may be as skilled as others in college, there are other colleges who have intercollegiate athletics in every form, very much more skillful than us in spring. The slow, persistent gymnast in the weightroom can hardly compare with the one who can run the games be written up. So this department is necessarily limited to the three or four tests of interest, and to incident, leggende contest.

One essential to an athlete is courage. When the team is winning he is an ardent supporter, but when defeat is apparent he sticks off and says, 'I told you so.' Such men as these have their influence. Create a sentiment, after all that is one of the greatest powers, against this, and soon it will be reduced to a miniature.

C apt. "Billy" Smith states that the outlook for a baseball team is better this year than it has been for years. All that he wants to get is the boys out, and then the rest of the student body, aided by the coaching of Stockdale, we expect to find an account of all the games. The success of a team in any branch of sport as a rule is not due to one man, but a series of things. There is one element in college, which is found in every college, which is an ardent supporter, and is always ready to represent. This is the element to which the college is indebted. It is a man who is always predicting defeat. He is a man who lacks the courage to win. When the team is winning he is an ardent supporter, but when defeat is apparent he sticks off and says, "I told you so." Such men as these have their influence. Create a sentiment, after all that is one of the greatest powers, against this, and soon it will be reduced to a miniature.

The second speaker on the affirmative was Mr. Baskette. On the first negative, a synopsis of whose speech is given:

You as jestingly as the next one. Some man may want to buy, but honestly feel unable to subscribe to this paper. Of you and to your friend, I am not speaking. If you do believe, show your col­laboration, a leader. I take off my cap to you. You ring true. Still, we make up this and are either leaders, fighters, or partisans, marksmen, or carpet-baggers. Choose either the first of the two. Pray do not be a carpet-bagger.

AN APPROPRIATE ACT.

In the shaping of the life and character of the young the person next to the father is the mother. Within the possession lies the power of influencing the tender and peeling mind, as the potter molds his clay, into a niche, smoothly molded and into one of great beauty and worth. He who would wondrously make the material given into his hands into a rude, mis­shapen form injures the world and justly deserves the con­demnation of all who may be called upon his head. On the other hand, the whole teacher who rightly leads the youth along the right and pathway to knowledge adds to the world's assets many many fold, and secures him the world as a great debtor. But, alas, it is too often true that this debt that he assumes, no acknowledgment, no lossing me­morial, no token of apprecia­tion of his achievements are made while he is alive or after he has been carried away by death.

It is therefore, an indication of more than local importance that the memory of Professor J. P. Avery, the first headmaster of the Trinity Park School, has been forever linked with that of the life of which he was a part of his own life, by the nam­ing of the handsome new dormi­tory in his honor. To be sure he shall forever live in the hearts of those students who sat at his feet and imbibed the inspiration and the manhood of his life. But this act of commemoration and recognition in simple a mark of indication of the progress of our State and Southland on the road of the full recovery from the futility of the life of the selfish and loving teacher, such as Avery, and from the young man.

In the beginning of his career he shall forever live in the hearts of the people as the first headmaster of this illustrious school. He has also left his mark on the minds of smallpox in that section. His name was Avery's "life-Comments." The name of the much revered teacher is of an inspiration for the State and Southland on the road of the full recovery from the futility of the life of the selfish and loving teacher, such as Avery, and from the young man. In the beginning of his career he shall forever live in the hearts of the people as the first headmaster of this illustrious school. He has also left his mark on the minds of people.

NOTABLE BOOKS.

The two books, which all others Trinity students and alumnus should be most interested in now are Dr. Edwin Minn's "Sidney Lanier" and Mr. Avery's "life-Comments." The name of the much revered teacher is of an inspiration for the State and Southland on the road of the full recovery from the futility of the life of the selfish and loving teacher, such as Avery, and from the young man. In the beginning of his career he shall forever live in the hearts of the people as the first headmaster of this illustrious school. He has also left his mark on the minds of people.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

One of the evils which has of late threatened the life of those who are capable of it to the student body and most worthy of support, is the frequent publication of these advertisements, notably The Trinity Archive, The Trinity Chron­icle, and the W. M. C. A. Hand­book, which exist largely by virtue of the advertisements con­tained in their columns. The Dun­ham business men have been very liberal in their patronage of these papers, but the late have complained somewhat of being constantly annoyed in this way. We are certain that every man is responsible for this state of affairs. One man gets out a large blotter with a number of advertisements on it. It drinks up quite a bit of one's ink, gets soiled and torn, and is consigned to the waste­basket. Another man gets out a schedule for classes, a 20x2 inch sheet with a 4x4 inch space for schedule, the space un­occupied by schedule filled with advertising. The advertisements are cut out and the advertisements thrown away. Another man gets out a schedule of courses, which is printed on red, yellow, and green paper and offered mostly with advertisements scrapbooked against a calendar on account of its unhandy shape and extreme ugli­ness of design, which makes it immediately thrown aside. One other man yet gets out a score card in the going, which gets thrown away after each base ball game.

Suppose one merchant has given three dollars to such of these men? Is it not natural, when three other men come to him for investments for worthy publications that he should complain that all of these are mere name of the author of the books, and justly deserves all the con­tribution enough for it, and is. It is with the utmost pleasure and satisfaction that we would see the publication and its contents to be justly deemed of the highest possible standard in the mechanical appearance and literary excellence.
