NEW MEMBERS OF FACULTY

DR. FRANKLIN N. PARKER WILL TEACH BIBLICAL LITERATURE.—JUDGE BIGGS, LAW.

TWO PROFESSORS ELECTED

Notable Preacher and Writer, and Son of Bishop Parker; Delivered Avera Lectures Last Spring.—Eminent Jurist, Teacher and Student of Law to Succeed Prof. Anderson.

Two notable additions have been made to the faculty of Trinity College. Dr. Franklin N. Parker, who comes to fill the chair of Biblical Literature, made vacant by the resignation of Prof. J. C. Wooten, who is pastor of Grace Church, Wilmington, and Judge J. Crawford Biggs, who takes the Professorship in the Law Department which Prof. R. G. Anderson occupied last year in the Law Department, are both men of unusual ability and are eminently fitted for carrying out the work in their respective departments.

Dr. Parker, formerly of Alexandria, La., and one of the most distinguished preachers in the Southern Methodist Church, is the son of the late Dr. Linus Parker, Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who was recognized as one of the foremost writers and preachers in the Southern States. He was born in New Orleans, La., May 20, 1867.

After finishing at the High School at New Orleans, he attended the University of Louisiana. Later he returned to Tulane and did special work in Greek and English. He then entered the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University where he continued his preparations for the ministry. After leaving school he was admitted to the Louisiana conference of the Methodist Church, and he has been pastor of the various churches in New Orleans, was twice chosen as delegate to the General Conference and for the past several years he has been presiding elder of the New Orleans District. He was a delegate to the Methodist Ecumenical conference in London in 1901 and at Toronto this year, and is a member of the Federal Council of Churches.

Last spring Dr. Parker delivered the Avera Bible Lectures here and he impressed every one who heard him as a speaker of great power and a man who has made a deep study of the Bible. Trinity College feels that a very fortunate addition has been made to the teaching force by the coming of so able a man.

In regard to Judge Biggs the Raleigh Christian Advocate has the following:

Judge J. Crawford Biggs, formerly Professor in the University of North Carolina, and for the last five years one of the most distinguished judges of the Superior Court in the State, has resigned his judgeship and accepted a Professorship in Law in Trinity College. Judge Biggs has behind him a brilliant record as student, teacher, attorney, Supreme Court reporter, and judge. This bringing to the school of so learned and accomplished a lawyer is regarded as a most valuable acquisition.

Members of the Faculty will be in their recitation rooms for consultation. The schedule of hours will be posted on the Bulletin Board of the Academic Building.

OTHER NOTICES.

College work for all classes except the Freshmen will begin Thursday morning according to the schedule posted on the bulletin board.

All students must hand in their course cards, approved by Professor Wannamaker, not later than Monday morning, Sept. 18.

Announcement of the hours for matriculation of the members of the Freshman class will be posted on the bulletin board.

OUT OF THE SUMMER'S HEAT

WORK ON BUILDINGS AND CAMPUS GOES ON THRU AT VACATION TIME.

RESULTS OF 3 MONTHS' LABOR

West Wing of Main Building Ready for Roof.—East Dormitory Completed.—Grading in Front of Main Buildings.—New Athletic Field.—Bell Installed.

Trinity students left the college campus last June knowing well that they would return to a place improved, changed, made new. And, in fact, the summer has brought many alterations in the appearance of the campus and buildings. Entering the campus through the new roadway, the returning student notices that the macadamizing has been carried on so that the drive stretches from the location of the new gate to the foot of the flag pole, broken only by the plot of grass around the statue of Mr. Washington Duke, which was moved, before commencement from its old resting place in the Anne Roney Gardens and set up in front of the spot where the tower will stand when the two wings of the Main Building are connected by the loggia that is planned.

Coming up the front driveway toward the Washington Duke statue one notices that the ground on each side has been graded, terraces constructed, and part of the ground thus improved sodded. The campus immediately in front of the two wings of the Main Building is beginning to take on something of the appearance it will have when the landscape gardening is undergoing is completed. One sees to the right, the walls of the East wing of the Washington Duke Building, part of which is already capped by the roof supports. Work on this building has been going steadily forward through the summer, and it is almost as far along as was the West wing at the opening of school last year.

Coming on to the north, along the drive, the new East Dormitory falls upon one's eyes, standing there, white with its green tile roof simple in its architectural design and on the interior comfortable and much roomier than was expected by the students when they left. The East Dormitory has been furnished with an eye to conserving as much space as possible, and most of the rooms will easily accommodate two students, as was intended. On the left, opposite the East Dormitory, the familiar outline of the Mary Duke Building meets the gaze of the curious student who expected to see its location only a cleared spot and preparations being made for the erection of another dormitory, the replica of the East Dormitory, in its stead. Yes, there are figures moving about through the rooms of the old Woman's Building, and sounds come from the windows, but the voices are masculine, and the wonder of the gaze increases. This year the building is to be occupied by boys. The reason for this is the fact that owing to a delay in the preparation of the plans for the West Dormitory by the architect the work of construction may not begin until later in the year, and, as arrangements had already been made to house the co-eds in other

TRINITY BANQUET

By Students and Alumni of Elizabeth City District.

An event notable for Trinity men in this state was the banquet given by the alumni and students of the college in the Elizabeth City District, in the dining room of the Eagle Hotel in Elizabeth City, on the night of August 24th. The guest of honor on this occasion was Professor W. H. Wannamaker, head of the German Department of the College, and one of the foremost advocates of the newer and greater Trinity.

After an address in the Methodist Church by Professor Wannamaker on the subject, "What Real Education Is," the body of Trinity men adjourned to the hotel where a sumptuous feast had been prepared. While the various courses were being served several toasts were responded to and jolly stories told of the old days at college. Mr. M. F. Plyer, Presiding Elder of Elizabeth City District was toastmaster. The following was the program of speeches prepared:

- "Old Trinity," W. G. Gaither.
- "Trinity's Worth to a Preacher," W. H. Brown.
- "Trinity's Worth to a Business Man," R. K. Taylor.
- "The Cost of Sending Boys to Trinity," R. A. Brinn.
- "The Man in Trinity," Willis Smith.
- "A Methodist's Duty to Trinity," Rev. J. D. Bundy.
- "Greater Trinity," W. H. Wannamaker.

Mr. Randolph Currin, until this year a member of the class of 1912, accepted a position with the American Tobacco Company during the summer and is at present in Apex, where he went on Monday of last week.

Y. M. C. A. Handbook

The eighty-two page booklet issued this year by the Y. M. C. A. for the use of the students is one of the most attractive that has been put out in recent years by the association. Outside of a few minor mistakes in proof-reading the pages of the book are excellent both in their information, which will be of much help to the new students especially, and also to the old ones, and in the large number of advertisements carried this year. The size of the booklet is much larger than formerly and this is due to the increased advertising patronage.

It is bound in red leatherette with straight edges and cut leaves, and is just the size to go into the inside coat pocket without inconvenience. The booklet was gotten up by Mr. E. J. Harbison, President of the College Y. M. C. A., and he deserves much credit for his energetic efforts in the publication of the booklet. It was issued from the Press of the Seeman Printery.

Stenographers' Notice

All men desiring work in stenography and typewriting are requested to meet in the Chronicle office, at seven thirty Thursday evening, room 311, middle section, third floor of the East Dormitory, in order to talk over the organization of a stenographic bureau, plans for which have been already made. Every man who has had any experience in typewriting or stenography is requested to be present at this meeting.

Messrs. F. S. Bennett and W. H. Muse, both members of the class of 1912, who made the trip to Europe this summer on a cattle ship, returned to Durham on August 13, happy and contented with having seen the lands across the seas. Mr. Bennett spent the remainder of his vacation at his home in Cleveland, Tenn., and Mr. Muse at his home in Durham.

HOURS FOR CONSULTATION

RETROSPECTS AND PROSPECTS—PRINCIPALLY THE LATTER.

It is with something of hesitation that the new staff of the Chronicle takes up the work that lies before it and bends to the task its every energy and prepares to call into the labor all its patience and perseverance. It is a hesitation caused by the high standard of excellence set by the editors of the paper during the year just passed, and the realization of our own shortcomings in comparison with their talent, and lastly by the increasing size of the college which we are proud to call our own, and which promises sooner or later to demand a semi-weekly paper instead of one appearing only a single time within the course of seven days.

It is customary in the opening issue of any paper for the editors to set forth the lines along which the work of the sheet will be directed and the policy to which it will adhere in an editorial way. Far be it from the present board to decry the usages of the fathers or to depart from the good old way in the very initial number of our volume; and so we take up the editorial pen and fondle it tenderly, trying its pliant point carefully on the clean sheet of paper before us, thinking, the while, of how to begin the opening sentence of what is, for us, a record-breaking bit of composition.

The Chronicle will attempt to do for the college community this year what it is the province of every newspaper to perform for the community where it finds its clientele; that is, we shall try to serve the interests of the community in every way possible for a periodical of our nature. All the news that is fit to print, we shall endeavor to publish while it is still news. To every item we shall try to give the proper space and treatment, and affirm that in no case will we be led wittingly to give more prominence to one phase of college life than it actually deserves, and under no circumstances will the Chronicle have its columns the servant of any particular interest or group of interests in the college. To make of this sheet a newspaper in the first and truest sense of the word will be our first aim—a newspaper with balance and a sense of proportional news values.

The editorial policy of a college paper is not a matter of so much concern, relatively, as that of a newspaper serving a clientele composed of the varieties of people that go to make up a modern city. There are, as a rule, few issues before the students of a college community that merit the thoro treatment from an editorial standpoint that a political campaign gets from the average city daily. It is true that the ambition of every newspaper man centers around the editorial chair, and we—journalists in the embryo, perhaps—while making no pretensions to divine knowledge on any of the subjects we may discuss from week to week, must still confess to a little feeling of pride that we now have the direction of the policy of a newspaper—even a college weekly. And on occasion we hope our statements will not lack vigor and may ring true to all that is highest and best for the college community.

A declaration of independence is, for a newspaper, a dangerous proceeding. Even for a college paper, with none of the entanglements with advertisers that draw the strings this way and that in the offices of the metropolitan daily, such a pronouncement holds ample opportunity for retraction. The combination of influences that work upon human personalities are such as to make it exceedingly difficult for any one man or woman so to isolate himself from outside pressure as to be able to speak with authority and a clear conscience on any subject that may arise. The Chronicle begins the year with no boasts as to its independence. It does, however, make the definite assertion that, so far as is possible, the paper will not be the organ of any society in this college nor of any group of societies. All interests that are interests, and have a right to the consideration and respect of a college man, will be given fair treatment, and, it is hoped, treatment that will meet with the approval of the majority of the student body.

And while the paper will not have its policy dictated by any group of students, neither will it be directed by the administration of the college. This is a student paper, published in the interests of the students by two of the most representative student organizations on the campus, and in every case it will be the endeavor of the present staff to uphold the student point of view whenever it is at variance, and rightly so as we see it, with that of the college. But, again, we promise to give fair treatment to all, and sincerely hope that no occasion for disagreement may arise.

And we wish it understood that, at any time, the columns of the Chronicle are open to communications from students or from members of the faculty, and that these will be published, whether they are in accord with the views of the editors or not, provided they are accompanied by the name of the writer. In no case will any communication be printed when the editors do not know the name of the person whose composition it is, even though the identity of the writer may be withheld from the public.

We hope that we have made plain that the Chronicle is to be an independent student newspaper, printing the news with care, and voicing through its editorial columns the viewpoint of the students as we see it. We bespeak the support of all loyal Trinity men everywhere, and especially of those who are now students in the college—those who are more closely connected with the present developments of the college; who know better than anyone else what the newer and greater Trinity means. Student interests are inseparably bound up with those that concern the college administration, and, among student interests, we firmly believe that none should lie closer to the heart of the college man than the success of his college paper. Hence, we hope for the support of both faculty and students—that same cordial, wholehearted support that has been given the Chronicle in years past. It may be that we shall not conduct the paper along the lines some of the students would prefer. It is impossible to please all. But at least the paper deserves the support of every man on the campus, and off, who desires the advancement of his college. And having known Trinity men for three years we believe that the Chronicle, if it fail—and we hope such a calamity be not laid up for us in the garden of Fate—if it fail, the blame cannot be laid at the door of the students of the college.

A HOW DO YOU DO?

The Chronicle extends to the old students as they return a cordial greeting accompanied with best wishes for a happy and prosperous year. To the new men we express our hearty pleasure at your presence here, and hope that you will soon find yourselves at home. Anything the students can do to make you so will be done. The college will soon come to mean as much to you as to those of us who have been here before, and you will come to feel a peculiar tugging at your heart-strings when you speak the word "Trinity." To one and all we voice a hearty welcome, and as we go along together for the year's work we hope that it will be as happy as the last and as profitable as study and hard work can make it.

PROFESSORS IN VACATION

AN ACCOUNT OF WHERE AND HOW TRINITY FACULTY HAVE SPENT SUMMER.

THEIR DAYS WITHOUT CLASSES

Study in Eastern Universities and Abroad.
—Rest at Home and Travel—Those Who Have Been on Campus and in Office.—Dr. Glasson Returned.

All over the country in many states and on two continents, the teachers of Trinity College spent the summer in various ways. Some preferred to study during vacation while others passed the vacation in resting up for the work of another year.

Among those who studied during the summer were Professors Spence of the English Department and Markham of the Mathematics Department. They were both engaged in taking advanced work in their respective subjects in the summer school of Columbia University. Professor C. W. Edwards of the Department of Physics was another of those who preferred to work during vacation. After his marriage in the early part of the summer to Miss Marie Kramer, of Elizabeth City, he went to Ithaca, New York, to do work in the laboratories of Cornell University.

In North Carolina three of the Professors were engaged in work of various kinds away from the college. Dr. W. K. Boyd of the History Department, spent the greater part of his vacation in the State Library in Raleigh, later he spends some weeks in Rockingham with his family. Professor J. A. Morgan, who occupied the Chair of Political Economy last year during the absence of Dr. W. H. Glasson, also did research work in the State Library before leaving for his new work in Middlebury Vermont, where he will teach Political Economy in Middlebury College. Dr. James J. Wolfe, Professor of Biology spent the summer in the government laboratories in Beaufort. He returned to the campus, accompanied by Mrs. Wolfe, a week ago.

Professors Julian Blanchard and W. T. Laprade went far away to find their places of labor. Professor Blanchard did advanced work in engineering in the laboratories of the University of Wisconsin in Madison. Dr. Laprade left for London, almost immediately after the close of college and has been doing research work in English History in the British Museum. Part of the results of his labors will appear in an article to be published in an early issue of the South Atlantic Quarterly.

Many members of the faculty spent the summer in travel or in different places resting. Dr. and Mrs. F. C. Brown passed the entire summer at his old home in Harrisonburg, Va. Dean W. I. Cranford went to his summer home in Tuscola in the mountains, after commencement and has been there during the whole vacation. Professor A. M. Gates of the Latin Department has spent his vacation at his old home in Connecticut. Professor W. F. Gill, head of the Department of Latin, has been in his home in Henderson all summer. He returned to the campus last week. Professor A. M. Webb decided not to visit France this summer as is his custom and has rested at his home in Bell Buckle, Tenn. Maine claimed one of our teachers for the summer, and Professor A. T. McCobb of the Modern Language Department has quarters, and the college needed more space for the large number of students asking for rooms, it was thought best to place the boys in the Mary Duke Building as it would be much less inconvenience for them to move should the work on the building make it necessary.

Keeping on the driveway up to the race track, one sees that this has been macadamized and now is as fine a drive as there is in the city. A small portion of it, at the northern end, is yet to be finished. When the whole has been completed, all the surface will be treated with a binder to make it durable and smooth.

The other buildings present much the same appearance. Of course, they have had the usual summer courses of plastering and cleaning. They look much fresher than when last seen by the students, but their outlines are the same. All over the campus, little improvements here and there have been made during the vacation, such as the grading in front of the new home of Bishop Kilgo, which has been occupied by his family since July. The construction of roadways in the vicinity of the East Dormitory is another of the smaller changes that go to swell the total of the improvements. Down to the west, the new athletic field is beginning to appear as if spring had come again, for it has been made level as a mirror and sown in grass that is just raising its green tips above the earth, making the field look good to the eye of fans as they wend their way to West Durham.

And over on the eastern side of the campus, standing alone in its great green tower, especially constructed for it, is the new bell, which arrived during the month of July and was christened with appropriate and impressive ceremonies.

The great bell is destined to hold a great place in the hearts of Trinity men during the coming years—even greater than that which its predecessor held—and from its deep tones it is worthy to bear the name it does; for the bell was christened in honor of Bishop John C. Kilgo who for so many years was President of the college and to whose genius so much of the greatness of the college is due.

The summer has done its work. All through the heat of July and August the workers were toiling in the sun, and out of their labors the new Trinity is taking shape. The campus during vacation has been a scene of bustle and activity. The call of the laborers has resounded over the vacant plots and "Alabama-be-am" has echoed against the walls of the empty buildings that were being made ready to receive the returning students.
