CLEMSON AND HAMILTON

TRINITY VICTORIOUS IN LAST TWO GAMES DOWN SOUTH, AND FIRST ONE AT HOME

MADE AN EVEN BREAK ON TRIP

Double Header from Clemson.—Revenge for Treatment at Hands of Mercer.—Total of Thirty-Eight Hits in Three Swat-Fests Tells Story.

Trinity closed the Southern trip in a whirl of glory and swatting that served in some measure to compensate for the hard luck that had attended the team in the previous games during their march through Georgia. Clemson's pitching staff suffered some stinging snafus from the sticks of the travelling gentlemen, twenty-four hits in seventeen innings being the record of the two consecutive defeats that were administered, one in the morning and one in the afternoon, to the South Carolinians in the little town of Sumter. These two visitors made an even break for us in the games played on the trip which is not such a bad record when you come to think about it.

The run-getting began in the first half of the third round, after Foushee and Bundy were out. Cooper met a meandering one of Schroeder's fairly on the nose and when the disturbance subsided he was sitting calmly on the third sack. Thompson was equal to the occasion and scored Cooper by a single. West followed suit and sent a hot one out that was good for two bags. Henderson failed to connect and retired the side leaving Thompson on third and West on second.

In the fourth Anderson, and Maddox failed to secure the necessary credentials to get on and it looked like a forlorn hope for scoring even when Bob Gantt received his base on balls. But Foushee was sage on first by an error of second, Gantt advancing to second. Gantt went to third and Foushee to second on Bundy's single. Cooper scored Gantt and advanced the other runners by beating out a bunt. Thompson retired the side by grounding out to second.

Again in the fifth West scored for Trinity on his own single. Henderson's sacrifice and Maddox's single. Two more were brought around in the sixth. Bundy singled, and Cooper followed with his accustomed facility, while Bundy advanced to third, from which he scored on Thompson's hit. Cooper who had gone to third when Gantt hit and he and Maddox scored on Foushee's single to right. Bundy put his hit in the hands of the left gardener and thus ended the morning lesson.

Henderson got a safety, went to second on Maddox's single, to third when Gantt hit and he and Maddox scored on Foushee's single to right. Bundy put his hit in the hands of the left gardener and thus ended the morning lesson.

DR. HAMILTON LECTURES

First Address in Lecture Hall on Kirk-Holden War.—A Sound and Brilliant Presentation.

The fitness of the lecture hall in the new academic building for public addresses was well demonstrated last night when Dr. J. C. de Roulhac Hamilton, of the Department of History at the University of North Carolina lectured to the Historical Society on the Kirk-Holden War of 1870. The audience that filled the room and warmly greeted Dr. Hamilton appreciated the value of the comfortable seating and the excellent acoustics of the hall.

When President Boyd said, at the conclusion of the address, that it was the "sanest and mildest discussion" of that turbulent Reconstruction period he had ever heard, he voiced the thought of all present. The importance of a "sane and mild" treatment is particularly evident in this case, for many incidents of reconstruction history are still the stuff for bitter and partisan political warfare. Where prejudice and sentiment are most strongly entrenched, there lies the historian's most trying labor. But the usual charge that the modern historian is but a narrator of dry, detailed facts cannot be laid at Dr. Hamilton's door, for his lecture was enlivened by delicate sarcasm, broad irony, and the vigorous language of fearless men.

The troubles occasioned by Colonel Kirk's notorious campaign grew out of Governor Holden's desire to influence the elections of 1870 in favor of the republican party. Using the violence of the Ku Klux Klan in its struggles against misrule and inhumanity as a pretext, Governor Holden finally secured the services of Colonel Kirk of Tennessee, who raised a force of about nine hundred men, and, permitting the outrageous conduct of his troops, proceeded from Morganton to Alamance and Orange counties, the seat of Ku Klux activities, and a district then declared in insurrection. In spite of the fact that the best people of the state had protested against the governor's plan, and that the conservatives won in the election, Holden continued with the scheme. A conflict arose between him and Judge Brooks of the Federal District Court as to the right of the latter to issue writs of habeas corpus.

The Federal Government finally urged Holden to yield to Judge Brooks. Kirk was arrested and brought to trial. And thus, to Governor Holden's humiliation, was the notorious Kirk conflict brought to an end.

The entire address was suffused by the gracious good nature of the lecturer. A strong, healthy, rapid voice, a genial disposition, a facility in handling a mass of minute facts drawn from numerous sources, a scholarly unwillingness to accept statements without questioning—all combined to make the lecture of Dr. Hamilton one of the most entertaining as well as illuminating discourses the college community has been privileged to hear this year.

Miss Emma Burns Foushee, class of 1906, is teaching in the public schools at Saranac Lake, New York.

DR. FERRELL ON HOOKWORM

STATE PHYSICIAN DISCUSSED NATURE, ORIGIN AND CURE OF WIDELY PREVALENT DISEASE

LECTURE ILLUSTRATED BY VIEWS

Outline of Work of State Commission in Eradication of Pest.—Examination Free.—Remedy Simple and Inexpensive.—No Reason for Disease's Continued Presence.

To the students of Trinity College, at least, the Hookworm is no longer a pseudo-scientific entity. The Freshman who is inclined to apply contemptuous terms to himself in appearance will now be able to enlarge his limited but expressive vocabulary by the creeping epithet "hookwormy," a word which has taken on much more definiteness. What is the hookworm, how does it originate, what are its ravages in the human body, and can it be eradicated—these were the themes entertainingly handled by Doctor A. Ferrell, assistant secretary of the North Carolina board for the prevention of the hookworm disease, in a lecture in Memorial Hall last Thursday night.

Doctor J. J. Wolfe in introducing Dr. Ferrell, commented on the educated, of the most elementary ignorance of many people, even laws of health and their negligence in caring for their body which is a most delicately constructed mechanism, in contrast to their attention to the workings of other machines. Any movement therefore, for public education in hygiene deserves the support of all who recognize the evils attendant upon the disregard of the laws of hygiene.

Doctor Ferrell, who is quite a young man and yet speaks with an earnestness and enthusiasm that make theory and exhortation seem vital, explained that the Rockefeller Commission has decided upon an educational policy as the most feasible and practical method of bringing about a better condition in public health. In educating the people to a realization of the dangers growing out of disease and of the ease with which they can be obviated college men must take the leading part. And it is to the college men that the Commission first addresses itself. Their willingness to co-operate in this work will before long, be seconded by the part of all the people.

In simple, clear language Doctor Ferrell, took up a discussion of how the worm, working itself into the body through the skin of the bare-foot boy, passes through the air passages of the lungs by means of the veins, then into the esophagus, and lodges finally in the lining of the small intestines, where they attain adult age and live as parasites for about eight years. By means of stereoscopic slides he showed that the chief effects of the disease are loss of blood, prominent shoulder blades, listless expression, loss of vitality, and stunted growth. The statistics he gave in regard to the hookworm show that it is most prevalent in the coastal region, and least prevalent in the Piedmont section. The board Doctor Ferrell urged, with the assistance of the State, is prepared to make microscopical examinations for any individual,

NEW CHRONICLE EDITOR

J. N. Aiken to Guide Weekly Next Year.—E. L. Jones, Manager.

The Chronicle governing board, composed of eight members, four from each of the two literary societies of the college, met Friday afternoon and elected the new editor of the Chronicle for the coming year. Mr. J. N. Aiken, of Cleveland, Tenn., who has this year been a member of the editorial staff of the paper, was chosen for the position. Mr. Aiken is known to the college community as a writer of first-rate ability, having contributed frequently to the Archive, and having taken an active part in reportorial work on the Chronicle. In addition to good literary taste he possesses the rare ability of being able to write a news story which is something more than a mere statistical account, and is a good judge of the comparative news value of the various college happenings. Under his leadership, the Chronicle will continue to hold its place among the best edited and most thorough-going college weeklies in the South.

Mr. E. L. Jones, of Charlotte, who has for the past year been assistant business manager of the paper, was, at this meeting, chosen business manager for next year. He has had ample experience this year and will take up the work of making the Chronicle a business success with a thorough knowledge of the business end of the college paper. The new men will take charge of the paper at the opening of college next fall, at which time, if not before, the other staff positions will be announced by the new editor.

Pending the arrival of the large bell which has been ordered for the college, a small one of the dinner-cald variety has been hung in the tower of the Inn. It made its initial appearance Friday, when it was mounted on a tall post north of the east dormitory. The dangling quene was too much of a temptation to the passers by, everyone of whom treated himself to several satisfying yanks. This destroyed its usefulness as a class-announcer and the difficulty was not remedied until it was removed to the high Inn tower where only the hourly hand of the janitor now disturbs it. It is but a mere parody of a bell, but it makes a noise like a big one.

Mr. J. E. Blalock, ex-'11, is spending a few days on the Park with friends.

furnish him with prescription for the remedy to be used, and the literature of the State Board of Health. How active the Commission is in North Carolina can be seen from the fact that in the short period of its work, 18,000 analyses have been made. There is scarcely an excuse for any person, thinks Doctor Ferrell to go on suffering from the disease when a little trouble and a few cents worth of a simple remedy will effectually eradicate the hookworm. A united movement for improved sanitation would soon result in freeing North Carolina from a disease, which though easy to cure, is almost destructive in its influences.

MR. POE TALKS ON ORIENT

FIRST OF PUBLIC LECTURES ON MONDAY NIGHT BY EDITOR OF PROGRESSIVE FARMER

WHAT THE SOUTH CAN LEARN

Oriental Poverty the Result of Ignorance and Lack of Machinery.—Individual Prosperity Depends on Prosperity of Average Man.—Our Duty to Future Mainly Educational.

The initial lecture of the series recently inaugurated at Trinity was delivered Monday night in Craven Memorial Hall by Mr. Clarence Poe, editor of the Raleigh Progressive Farmer. Taking as his subject, "The Orient's Greatest Lesson for the South," Mr. Poe gave his hearers some of the conclusions at which he had arrived as the result of his recent trip to the Far East.

The East holds many lessons for the West, said Mr. Poe. Among these might be mentioned that of conservation, which is impressed very forcibly upon the mind of the traveler in eastern Asia in seeing the vast tracts of barren land, made barren by the denudation of the forests. Another matter which is inevitably suggested to the western mind is what is supposed to be the result of the conflict of ideals between the East and the West. Seeing, too, the advancement in the Far East and the great attention paid there to military and naval affairs, led the speaker to express himself in favor of a maintenance, on the part of this country, of a sufficient armament to hold our own in a conflict with any of the Oriental nations.

But the greatest lesson which a westerner can draw from a view of Eastern conditions is the knowledge of the fact that the prosperity of the individual depends on the prosperity of the average man in the community, and this in turn is dependent on the efficiency of the average man, and his efficiency again is determined by his intelligence. Wages in China, said the speaker, were low, being only about eighteen cents per day on the average; in Japan they are not much greater, while in India the scale is even lower. The struggle for existence is keen in the East; so much so that almost every industry is overcrowded and human labor is used in many lines of work in which machinery is employed in the West. The speaker called especial attention to the rickshaw business in Oriental cities. The rickshaw is the eastern carriage, and the motive force is a human being. These runners are forced to go at breakneck speed throughout a whole trip, and in bad weather are exposed to the rough elements for periods of long duration. Despite the fact that this strain and exposure materially shortens the life of a rickshaw man, the calling is always full to overflowing. Women and children are employed at many of the more arduous tasks that are to be done in the East, especially in the construction of homes, and even of the great public edifices.

There is a perpetual hunger among the peoples of eastern countries, and the western individual with his higher standards of wages

And the pleasant land."

The latest addition to the campus equipment is the college cowbell. Heard it? Aloft in its tower it sits like Elaine the lovable, Elaine the beautiful, Elaine the lily maid of Astolat. And somewhere within fifteen minutes of the hour it peals forth its childish staccato lending spice to college existence and adding to the gaiety of the nations.

Not all of us are spiritually adapted to "Elektra." One can't always instinctively thrill with emotion at the sight of the Fate-riven heroes of the Greek tragedies, any more than one can instinctively love the women that Rossetti painted. It takes time and study. Those students to whose minds "Elektra" suggests magnetic fields and induction coils will do well to hear next week Professor Merritt's lecture on the play.

O, Rainchild! Put this into thy pipe and smoke it. Full many a man and woman, too, for the matter of that went into raptures about Damrosch's rendering of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, who would have disdained lying in any other case. When thou hearest a braver wight confess that he doth not understand Wagner and Verdi, and that he doth far prefer Victor Herbert, let not thy soul grow wroth at his crassness — he possesses yet a frankness which departeth from most men when one calleth into question their musical selves.

And now, a royal ukase says that all students holding college positions will have to room in the Inn next year. This business of segregating students who are serving the college in some capacity snacks just enough of paternalism to make it galling to a good number of men who are presumably rendering value received for the various college concessions they receive.

A large number of the students of this college had rather room in the Inn than in any dormitory on the campus. There is an attraction about the old Inn that the other dormitories, the newest ones not excepted, lack. But to make it the compulsory residence of college assistants must inevitably endow it with an eleemosynary air which cannot but be extremely repugnant to every inmate, to say nothing of the tang of class difference which the scheme cannot escape.

From the assistant's side the matter is simple. He is either an honorable worker, selling his services to the college, and as such entitled to his wage with no restriction as to his residence, or he is a worker only by courtesy so-called, but in reality a ward of the college, and as such subject to its paternal disposal. The solution is equally simple. Let the man holding a position under the administration choose his quarters in any of the dormitories, and let him pay the difference in price, if there is any, over the rental of the rooms hitherto allowed to college assistants. Such an arrangement would preserve the democracy which colleges should carefully foster, and at the same time save the Inn from acquiring in the last year of its long and honored existence, the stigma of the charity ward.

and living is apt to feel a sense of superiority as he sees the manner in which the Orientals live. This superiority goes back to the original doctrine laid down by Mr. Poe, that prosperity depended on the prosperity of the mass, and this in turn on efficiency and intelligence.

But what is the cause of the general prosperity of western peoples, in contradistinction to the poverty of the East. It does not arise from over-population in eastern countries, said the speaker. China is capable of supporting many more people than she does today. Mr. Poe picks as the reason for our greater ease, the fact that we make use of machinery wherever possible, and believe in increasing the general intelligence by a huge system of public schools. If Asia had a Panama canal to build, went on the speaker, it would be done by manual labor with the use of only the simplest tools. The Oriental belief is that machinery cuts men out of work, while it is a simple doctrine of our system of political economy that any number of men liberated from work in one line by the introduction of machinery are able to turn their energies to some other industry, and the margin of productivity is materially increased, both for those entering the new industry and for those remaining in the old. The greater knowledge of the West enables it to direct its efforts along a greater variety of lines of activity than is possible in the more unlearned East. For knowledge, said Mr. Poe, cuts the shackles that bind a man down to a few occupations.

Our knowledge, he said in conclusion, is the result of the heritage handed down to us from past ages. The people of America would still be procreting their living by the use of a crooked stick were it not for the accumulating store of information that has been handed down from generation to generation. Our duty to the future is to increase the use of machinery among our people, and to do all in our power to promote the education of our youth on a grander scale even than now, a duty not only incumbent upon the individual, but upon the whole commonwealth.

The Germans in Session

The Deutscher Verein of Trinity college met in regular session Friday night in their room in the library. The prep school debate, the carnival, and James K. Hackett at the Academy, scaled the attendance somewhat, but those who were present spent a useful and very instructive evening. The subject discussed was "Folk Poetry," in particular that of Germany. Professor Wannamaker lectured in German on the origin of the song and of the verse feeling among primitive peoples, and gave the several theories which have been proposed as the probable origin of earliest song. According to the best modern thought, folk-poetry was an outgrowth of the ritual dance as an accompaniment to which the earliest rhythmical poetry was composed. The discussion was entered into generally by the members present, and Professor McCobb read typical selections from the great mass of folk-poetry that the German nation has accumulated.

CLEMSON AND HAMILTON

off with Godfrey in the box. After he had let up three hits and two runs, he was relieved in the third by S. Gantt, who in turn was succeeded by Bob Gantt in the fourth. With one out in the first Connelly for Clemson secured Godfrey's single pass and went to second on a long fly by Rivers. Following this Cochran hit one to right and Connelly scored on Anderson's error. Harris closed this scene by grounding out to pitcher. In our half of the inning Cooper and Thompson scored, after Foushee and Bundy were down, on their own hits, a stolen base, and West's single. Anderson completed the act by grounding out.

Clemson came back in the second. Jenkins singled, advanced to second when West failed to handle Bates' hot one and to third on Luchicotte's sacrifice, scoring on McCown's single. The South Carolinians repeated their stunt in the third, bringing around two runs on an error by Bundy, a two-bagger by Cochran, a single by Harris and another double by Bates.

Trinity not to be outdone in the scoring made three runs in the last half of this inning. Bundy singled, went to second when Cooper got a walk, and both runners crossed the plate when Thompson laced out a double. West following suit allowed Thompson to amble across by hitting safely for two bags, after which he stole third, but was left in loneliness by Henderson and Anderson who failed to connect. In the fifth another tally was made by the travelers. Thompson got on by an error of shortstop, was sacrificed to third by West and Henderson, scoring on a wild pitch.

With Maddox down in the sixth Gantt hit safely, Foushee walked and Gantt scored on Bundy's single, Foushee going to third. Bundy pilfered second and both he and Foushee scored on a passed ball after Cooper had got on. Henderson and Anderson retired the side and terminated the scoring for Trinity.

Clemson made a faint effort to retrieve her fortunes in the eighth, when Cochran singled, went to second when Thomas was safe at first on an error and scored on Tuppen's single. With runners on second and third Bob Gantt showed his speed and Luchicotte beat the air in an agonizing attempt to bring across some more runs. Thus endeth the Post Meridian lesson.

In a slow and lop-sided game, the first that has been played on the home grounds since the Southern trip, Trinity defeated Hamilton by the score of eleven to one, Saturday afternoon. The affair was featureless, unless the fast work of Henderson at the first sack be mentioned, and to this might be added the usual comment on Cooper's speedy base-running. It looked like a walk-over from the very first. In the visitors' half of the initial round they demonstrated to the entire satisfaction of the bleachers the fact that they could not touch Sam Gantt's benders, while in the second half Foushee started the fun by singling through second, and then pilfering that sack from which he was scored by a long two-bagger by Thompson after Cooper and Bundy were out.

In the second the Hamiltonians again were unable to connect. They also seemed to be unable to force the sphere to remain in a direct course from second to first and after Henderson had grounded out, Anderson was safe on a wild throw of Manion. Maddox grounded out to second. Sam Gantt then laid down a pretty bunt toward the same locality and on another error Anderson scored. Bases were filled by Foushee being safe on an error by the catcher and Bundy's single. In his usual style Cooper placed an infield hit, scoring Foushee and Gantt. Thompson in turn scored Bundy and Cooper with a slashing three-bagger to center. The excitement became allayed when West fanned and retired the side.

Not until the fifth did the third and final ascension of the visitors take place, this time accompanied by three tallies on the part of the locals. Henderson began the ceremonies by singling through second, Foushee, who was put in to run for him, stole second, scoring on another error by second which at the same time allowed Anderson to be safe on first. Stealing second again Anderson added another tally when Allen made a wild throw of Maddox's grounder. Maddox crossed the plate by a single by Gantt, and the scoring was ended for the home team as Foushee, Bundy, and Thompson failed to get on.

Hamilton made their lone run in the ninth. Knox got a two-bagger off Gantt; advanced to third on Root's single and scored on Manion's long fly to right which Anderson failed to get to the plate in time to ent him off. Gould retired the side and ended the contest by vainly swinging the stick across the plate three times in succession.
