ADDRESS OF DOCTOR SNYDER

EXERCISES ON BENEFACTOR'S DAY
FEATURED BY PRESENTATION OF
CASE FOR HUMANISTIC IDEALS

LARGE AUDIENCE HEARS HIM

Wofford's President Makes Inspiring Talk on Humanistic Education, and the Way It Produces Construction Leadership in Maze of Modern Problems.

Benefactor's Day at Trinity College closed this evening with the annual address, delivered this year by President Henry N. Snyder of Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C. The audience which listened to President Snyder's remarks was a larger one than usual and his every word was carefully attended. The reputation he holds for oratorical powers and keenness of perception in regard to the problems of to-day, which, said the speaker, are not problems after all, was well maintained by the utterance of last night. In his address he showed a sense of humor in his view of questions that possess great seriousness, which coupled with the serious aspect that he also gave them, made his address one of the most helpful that has been heard at Trinity in many a day.

The central theme of the address was humanistic education, for which the speaker pleaded with all the power at his command. He showed the worthlessness of an education that trains men only to earn a living and illustrated his remarks with many an experience or incident that gave to the talk a personal quality, exceedingly attractive.

"On the rostrum with Dr. Snyder was President W. P. Few who made the remarks introducing the speaker in apt terms. Later he, himself, had something to say in regard to the debt we owe to those who have given of their generosity to aid the institution, his words being, as it were, a preface to the reading of the list of benefactions that followed the address. At the conclusion of the recital of donations by Dr. Few the audience was adjourned.

Dr. Snyder began by calling attention to the value of such an occasion as this day in recognition of benefactions to a great institution of learning, and spoke of the many physical witnesses of liberality that stood on Trinity campus.

There were, he said, two kinds of educational institutions: those which derive their support from the state thru the medium of taxation and those which are established thru the generosity of private citizens. There is something especially noble, said the speaker, in the providing for the education of future generations by private donation. The thought of this calls up, he went on, the idea of the tendencies in education at the present time and the needs of educational institutions. He hoped to make some suitable interpretation of educational ideals in respect to these two tendencies and to show the need of modern life.

Of course, continued Dr. Snyder, the first object of education today is the fitting of a man to perform some special task that will procure for him a living. The technical or special school is all right, but what of the older ideal of a cultural education in this maze of modern life? The most conspicuous need in our education at this time is a return to the humanistic ideals, that put man into a full possession of the inheritance of his race, and place in his hands the knowledge that has been accumulated during the past ages. A man has a right to know the things that his predecessors have learned in the realm of pure thought, and to withhold from him these facts is to make of him a mere machine for earning money, and the vital need of our modern life is an education that places emphasis on what a man thinks and not on what he can do. The liberal arts school is as beneficial as the technical one and as vitally connected with the progress of the race.

The great call that should be sounded from the trumpets of advance, is the return to old methods of simplicity in thought. The tendency of everybody now is to make a problem of the simplest of things. Child rearing used to be a simple matter of a bundle of sticks administered in properly timed doses, until modern thought got hold of it and made a problem out of it. Marriage is become a problem, too it used to be considered a lottery.

Modern life is a wilderness of problems and there can be no leadership out of it except that leadership be intellectual and be trained in a system of education with an ideal back of all this complexity.

Life is today calling for constructive thinkers and the educational institution that can, once in a generation turn out such a leader with personality, and power to think thru a problem, will more than justify the large amounts of money expended in creating it. Such a leader must have confidence in the ultimate progress of human society, and the most suitable way to insure this confidence is by training leaders with humanistic methods.

The test of a civilization, went on the speaker, is the measure of moral ideas that underlie its intellectual growth. Building on wealth or power, or pleasure, is building on sand, and national immorality is national suicide. If the newspapers with their stories of corruption, bribery, adulteration, social dishonor, and other revolting items is the mirror of our modern life, what of its foundations? In it, there can be nothing but confusion.

The thinker who would solve the questions of today must have an abiding faith in the eternal verities or else he will find the ruins of a disordered civilization toppling about his head. The humanistic educational process is the one necessary for a world needing to be moralized and for a disorder that will end in chaos unless organized on an ethical basis. We need men in the various walks of life—that regard their work as having higher ends than the mere obtaining of a living. An idealistic conception of a man's own ends and of his relation to society about him is a

FUN FOR JUNIOR CLASS ORDER

Initiation Ceremonies in Epworth Building—Annual Parade of Initiates in City Arouses Interest.—Banquet at Corcoran Hotel Conclusion.

The practice of paternalism is the term that might be applied to the stunt pulled off Friday afternoon by the initiates of the society in College known as the "Tombs." The procession of 12 men wearing black suits, standing collars and white ties with derbies, might have been seen by any passer on Main street Friday afternoon between the hours of 3 and 6, Part E. of the time they were pushing before them baby carriages of the most improved models, the first man in the line manipulating an exceptionally large one, while the person in the rear rolled a baby baby carriage. Later the whole line visited the Union Station in the capacity of newsmen, each bearing copies of the Durham Sun, which were disposed of with the greatest ease. Returning to Main street they cried the latest news in the most improved metropolitan manner, getting rid of their stock of papers in a hurry. Up and down the street they marched for the space of about three hours and until their limbs were weary with the tramp and their ears filled with the jangling of the bells each wore on his right ankle. Their high collars were sadly depressed, the white socks which graced their right feet were dusty with travel, and their once beaming countenances showed signs of longing for that which satisfies the inner man. It was with expressions of joy that they were permitted to repair to a drug store and refresh themselves.

The "Tombs" initiations furnish every year a source of great amusement to the people of Durham and the harmless antics through which the candidates are put by the seniors in the order, have come to be traditional with the college. The "Tombs" is an organization of juniors and seniors that has long played an important part in the college life among students at Trinity. Last year the trophy cup given to the winning team in the interclass track meet, was a gift from this organization, and after the meet an address was delivered by President Few in Craven Memorial hall on invitation from the order. It has other acts to its credit and hopes to perform greater things for the athletic interests of the college during the coming year.

The ceremonies of the initiation were completed Friday night in the "9019" Hall on the fourth floor of the Epworth Building, and after the last man had been admitted to the secrets of the rank, all repaired to the Corcoran hotel and partook of a six course supper, consisting of grape fruit, baked shad, with shoe-string potatoes, broiled young chicken with green peas, salmon croquettes with mushrooms, tomato salad, punch and ice cream and cake.

When the cigars, which topped the feast, had been lit, Prof. H. E. Spence, of the English department of the college, who was toastmaster, rapped for order and said a few words to the new men. He stated that there would be no responses from the old men, but that each new member was expected to do his duty in the way of a speech. The initiates, Messrs. C. C. Foushee, C. W. White, Hal A. Hayes, C. W. Morgan, C. B. Brinn, J. A. Lee, J. A. Rand, D. H. Fuller, J. M. Thompson, W. G. Sauter, S. S. Alderman and H. L. Wilson, made short talks of appreciation and impressions in regard to their membership in the order. Later M. A. Briggs, who was present, was called upon to tell the new men something of what the "Tombs" stand for. H. G. Hedrick and E. E. Bundy were also called for by the crowd to make impromptu talks. Their remarks were in a witty vein. When the supply of yarns had spun itself out, about the hour of midnight, the toastmaster announced that the meeting was adjourned and the boys dispersed to the college.

Prof. Merritt Addresses Mid-week Meeting of Y. M. C. A.

Professor A. H. Merritt, of the Greek Department, addressed the mid-week meeting of the Y. M. C. A. at 7:30 last Wednesday. He made a heart to heart talk to the men present. Taking as the basis of his remarks the quotation "Apply your whole self to the text, then apply the whole text to yourself," from the preface to a Greek testament, he tried to impress upon the mind of his hearers the neglect of college men in regard to use of the Bible.

"There is no way," he said, "wherein a man can cleanse his way more thoroughly than by applying himself to the use of the New Testament. Leave the settlement of minute questions to the future, and consider the things that need your attention here. It is up to you to make the most of your college course."

The second part of Professor Merritt's talk was based on the words, "To him that hath shall be given." He showed that college men should increase their stock of knowledge since God always gives to him that hath. "There are," he said, "too many people, in the world, and in the college, trying to do business on too small capital." He showed how the average man, when he enters college, having neglected his studies in the preparatory school from which he comes, tries to squeeze in through the influence of his father or teachers, and after getting in tries to get along with doing just as little as possible.

The speaker closed by urging every man to try to increase his stock of knowledge, especially about spiritual things, and suggested as a means to this end the reading a passage from the Bible every day or night.

YEAR OF GENEROSITY CLOSSES

NUMEROUS AND LIBERAL DONATIONS MADE TO COLLEGE DURING YEAR ENDING OCTOBER THIRD

TOTAL GIFTS REACH $234,669

President Few Prefaces Reading of Donations With Words of Gratitude to Benefactors of College.—The Duke Family Largest Benefactors

During the time that has elapsed since Benefactor's Day of last year there have been numerous donations to the college and its various organizations. In point of numbers and value of gifts this has been one of the most prosperous years in the life of the college. Benefactor's Day is proving itself a feature of the college calendar that commends it self to all.

In the list of gifts to the library, the Historical Society, and the various scientific organizations of the college are found donations from the students, the faculty, and various persons and institutions outside of the college community. There were 21 donations made during the year by students, 21 by members of the faculty, and 71 by those not directly connected with the college. A marked feature is the interest taken by the students, as manifested in their contributions.

The larger donations are as follows: from the North Carolina Conference, $4,369.86; from the Western North Carolina Conference, $1,000.00. From Messrs. B. N. and J. B. Duke, for current expenses, $27,500.00. From Messrs. B. N. and J. B. Duke, for buildings and grounds (announced June 7, 1911) $201,800.00. These sums make a total of $234,669.86.

In making the announcement of the various benefactions President Few said:

"I do not believe that the men who achieve greatly in the world are impelled either by a love of money or the desire for fame. They are rather moved by inward necessity to release the impulses that stir within them—the impulse for power of the man's stirring to greatness is selfish or the sweet yearning of the noblest mind to leave those who come after them a remembering of them in good deeds.

"But the direction of even a great man's impulses is partly a response to circumstances. The national passion of an inspired race for righteousness, despite its strange ebb and flow, remained constant through centuries and was rewarded by a long succession of Hebrew prophets. The Olympian and the literary emulations and popular enthusiasm for art developed the physical and intellectual power of a gifted people and made the glory that was Greece. The influence of the Elizabethan stage called forth a great dramatist, and the men who lived with Shakspeare became poets, for the air was fame. The conquering of a vast new continent and a consequent engrossment in material things have created powerful organizers of wealth that have made ours the richest nation in the world.

COLLEGE CITIZENSHIP

Some years ago a distinguished lecturer, widely known thruout the nation, made this statement in regard to his feeling for his home town: "If I did not think my town was the best town in this world in which to live, I'd get out of it to-morrow." Speaking to the men gathered at the athletic rally last week Professor Wilson laid especial stress on the value of concentration of student interest on the college campus, and the limitation of men's activities while in college to affairs having to do with the college community. Later, in talking to the senior class along this same line, President Few remarked that the slogan of his administration would be, for the present, intellectual concentration.

A motive like that which animated the lecturer mentioned above is a prime necessity in the development of a wholesome and united community spirit; it is especially necessary in a college community, because the persons composing that community are not members of families living within its boundaries, but individual men come together from all parts of the country to spend some months each year, in a special pursuit—that of obtaining an education.

Many men regard the college they attend as only a means to an end, as a temporary abiding place, which has no claims to present upon their time and interest. Such an idea as that which possesses these men cannot fail to be harmful to any college community, nor to the students in that community. For it prevents the students from performing those duties for the benefit of a community, incumbent upon its citizens thus hindering the development of a well rounded body of men working together for the common good of all, and at the same time renders it impossible for college students to make of themselves men of the highest type, in that, while they regard themselves as citizens of the town in which their parents live, they are so situated as not to be able to ally themselves actively with its interests.

A college is a man's home for four years. There is no getting around this fact, for fact it is. Nine months out of four consecutive years are spent on the college campus. During a student's residence there, the responsibilities that rest upon the citizens of any community in respect to its welfare and progress, rest upon the student with a weight proportional to the importance of the college, and the place he fills in its life. The college man has a duty to his own generation of students, like the men in the outer world, and he owes something to succeeding generations of college men, just as the citizen of a state has obligations to discharge to those who may come after him. In after life the man who refuses to ally himself with the interests of his own neighborhood is looked upon as unpatriotic and a misanthropist; the man who comes to college and endeavors to get all he can from his college course with only his books and classes as companions, or who goes out into the society of the town outside of the college without centering his life in the heart of the college, should be judged in the same light. Such a man fails to discharge the duties of citizenship in his own community. For there is such a thing as college citizenship, a citizenship with obligations as binding as those that rest upon dwellers in the cities of the world, and with obligations that no man can shirk without laying himself open to the charge of slighting the requirements made upon every individual man by society at large. Such action can only lead to a similar slighting in after life.

The students of Trinity College owe it to themselves, if to nobody else, to strive with all their might to make of this community the best place in the South, in the nation, for college men to live in. Their interests should center around the activities of the college and their efforts be directed towards promoting those things which lead to the betterment and upbuilding of this community, whatever may be the phase of college life represented by particular movements along this line. There is no excuse for men in college not knowing about college affairs and not putting themselves heartily into the life of the college. To try to stretch one's interest so as to cover the City of Durham is too heavy a task for men whose first objective is getting an education. Bliss Perry once said of Longfellow that his true citizenship was in the heavenly kingdom, but that he voted for fifty years in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Such a view is applicable to our situation as college men. As students of Trinity College, we look forward to a useful citizenship in the world that lies before us, but this expectation should not deter us from the performance of the offices of that high estate which devolve upon us as members of this community, in which we live.

A. T. O. Picnic

The N. C. XI Chapter of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity of Trinity College picnicked at the pumping station yesterday. The following couples enjoyed the occasion:

Mr. H. A. McKinnon with Miss

Susie Markham; Mr. S. S. Alderman with Miss Margarette Glenn, of Greensboro; Mr. Henry Wilson with Miss Floesie Jeffries, of Rocky Mount; Mr. H. B. Mayes with Miss Katie Lee McKinnon; Mr. P. F. Hanes with Miss Lucile Korham; Mr. L. G. Cooper with Miss Walker, of New York; Mr. Lee Nelson with Miss Lucile Hundley; Mr. A. Sherrod with Miss Katherine Thomas; Mr. H. Sherrod with Miss Estelle Flowers; Mr. F. S. Bennett with Miss Mattie Lehman; Mr. Rob Courtney with Miss Lucile Pierce; Mr. Reade with Miss Florence Green; Mr. Thorne with Miss Lavinia Prigden; Mr. Roy Ivey with Miss Anna Branson; Mr. G. G. Kimball with Miss Frances Brown, of Raleigh; Mr. Henry C. Doss with Miss Fannie Markham; Mr. Reed, a Phi Delta Theta from Randolph Macon, was present as a guest of the chapter, with Miss Ruth Potteat. Dr. and Mrs. Brooks and Dr. and Mrs. Boyd went along as chaperones and afforded much amusement in their efforts to scale the cliff.

In spite of the dreary outlook of the weather, the party was a great success. The chill in the air was just enough to add a zest for pleasure seeking to the jolly picnickers, who built a roaring fire on the leeward side of the cliff and there told yarns, sang songs, played games and tried to take pictures. The crowd returned late in the afternoon.

CLASS OFFICERS

Chosen By Members of All Classes.

Every class in college has by this time met and elected the officers who will serve thru the coming year. At each class meeting considerable enthusiasm has been shown in regard to the relay race which, it is planned, will be pulled off during the latter part of the present month. For some of the class teams, captains have been elected and the men who will try for places on the team are already at work training for the event. Other phases of college life have come in for their share of notice and especially in the meetings of the seniors there has been much discussion about co-operation of students with the college administration.

The Senior class officers are as follows: President, J. N. Aiken; Vice-President, R. G. Chery; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Emma McCullen; Representative on the Athletic Council, H. A. McKinnon. Mr. McKinnon will also represent the Seniors in the Student Life Committee.

The Juniors will be served by the following officers: President, W. A. Cade; Vice-President, Hal A. Hayes; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Susie Markham; representative on the Athletic Council, C. A. Godfrey.

The Sophomores chose the following men to be their officials this year: President, W. F. Starnes; Vice-President, R. B. Murray; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Katie Lee McKinnon; representative on the Athletic Council, R. B. Anderson.

The meeting of the Freshman class was prolonged and heated. Deliberation in the parliamentary sense was the order of the day, and the results of their work may be taken as indicative of the ability of the class, which is of a high standard. The following men will be the Freshman officers: President, D. C. Lewis, of Bessemer, Ala.; Vice-President, Henry Yow, Thomasville; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Natalie Tuck, Durham; Representative on the Athletic Council, Frank Crowell, Charlotte.

Kappa Sigma Picnic

Without heeding the threatening appearance of the clouds hovering on the western horizon and almost covering the sky, the members of the Eta Prime chapter of Kappa Sigma of Trinity College set out Tuesday morning for their annual picnic excursion to the Cabin of Mr. James H. Southgate, near University Station. Leaving the city at about 10 o'clock the couples drove to the cabin in buggies. The time after their arrival was spent in the disposal of the excellent picnic lunch carried along by the young ladies of the crowd, and later in wandering about the country surroundings the cabin or sitting in its great hall or on the wide verandas talking and playing games. About the hour of six the happy people returned to Durham, protesting against the necessity of breaking up the party and beginning again to look forward to the occasion next year.

Those who drove to the cabin yesterday were: R. B. Anderson with Miss Rebecca Michie; Southgate Jones with Miss Helen Gribble; C. W. White with Miss Mary Louise Manning, Hal A. Hayes with Miss Lucy Stokes; H. G.

Hedrick with Miss Lola Jenkins; J. E. Pegram with Miss Bessie Erwin; J. N. Oiken with Miss Mary Gorham; E. N. Brower with Miss Nancy Renn, J. E. Baugh, Jr., with Miss Fannie Kilgo; William Sherrall with Miss Ruby Elliott; A. S. Brower with Miss Placide Kramer; T. Z. B. Everton, W. G. Sniter. Dr. and Mrs. F. C. Brown and Mrs. Stokes were chaperones.

ADDRESS OF DOCTOR SNYDER

prime necessity in arriving at a satisfactory solution of our difficulties in finding a way out of our wilderness of problems.

An educational process, concluded the speaker, binds a man when it turns him out in the world with no knowledge save that which enables him to earn money; it causes his life to be centered in himself and his value to be rated according to what he can get and not according to what he gives. The world of gain, in reacting on our education and making it to serve its own ends is creating a situation that is tragic in the extreme. To combat this, is needed an all pervading idealism, an idealism trained in an atmosphere vital and stimulating, an atmosphere charged with the best of all that man has achieved, such as kindles the human personality to renewed effort to attain the highest. If an education furnishes this kind of an atmosphere, "we need not fear but there will come out of it the men, who, hearing the voice and seeing the bush aflame with the spirit of God, shall lead the people out of the wilderness into the land that is theirs because they have preserved and developed their humanity, mind, heart and soul. May not this, too, be a practical service to a practical age?"

Students, when down the street drop around at The J. T. Christian Press and see their display of artistic printing. Next to Western Union Telegraph office—Market Press.

YEAR OF GENEROSITY CLOSES

"This wealth remains to be humanized, and to help to bring about this new humanism we need to celebrate the needs of those who devote their wealth to the highest social uses. The men who succeed in America are victims in turn of overpraise and bitter denunciation. Colleges and educated men ought to hold a steadier light and become a more constant inspiration to the proper employment of all a man's power of whatever kind.

"Benefactor's Day at Trinity College is set apart for the purpose of cultivating a spirit of benevolence and directing the attention of the public to the right use of wealth. I now call the long roll of those who have made gifts to Trinity College during the year ending October 3. To all these the college feels a deep sense of gratitude and a renewed obligation to promote the widest good of mankind."

Science Club Meeting.

Next Monday night at seventy-third the Science Club will have its regular meeting. Professor Pegram of the Chair of Chemistry will read a paper on the subject, "The Constitution of Matter." There will be short papers by members of the club on various subjects and a full attendance of members is desired.
