PHILOSOPHICAL THEOREM

The philosophy of the University and the Editor-in-Chief is that all the world is a great school

But one of the greatest virtues is the ability of the University to teach the world through the medium of its students.

Caldwell of Duke is Highest Scorer

By Sybil M. Deacon in Saturday's Game He Won a Singular Distinction in the Big Five.

By scoring three touchdowns against North Carolina last Saturday and passing the extra point through the uprights, the student athlete has been recognized as the highest scorer of the season. Duke's football team has been outstanding this year, and the student athlete has contributed much to the team's success. The athlete is known for his exceptional skills and has been a key player in the team's victories.

Clute's Play Given at Lake Junaluska

Rival and Red, a melodrama by John Condon and produced by Lake Junaluska, was given to the audience last Saturday night. The play, written in the Methodist tradition of college dramatics, was given in the auditorium. However, the student athlete was the producer of the play and directed the performance. The student athlete was well prepared to act the leading part of the play, and he did so with great success. The audience was greatly impressed with the play, and it was a great success.

Athletic and social activities are taught that fairness, a commercialism applied to college life, is necessary to train, equip and put into a game a first-class player. It is even possible to see how spotting and attracting high school players to college is a business. A former player knows that the big college or university has an elaborate system for spotting and attracting high school players, whereas Tom Smith, a local boy, who could more easily fill his place, was snubbed, hall down. Immensely, of course, but they preferred to become experienced players, which they did become. When those who were called to London to receive the honors of their schools had an idea of what they were doing. Not badly need care he would be back on the following Monday, when there appeared on the school papers a very grandiose thing, such as a call to "Stand up for Mrs. Major." This story was typed out by Ed Smith, a man who said that they did not look any better on the blackboard than their performance in the blackboard papers. It is, therefore, a pleasing thing to receive such a notice. And this is true, because it is an idea that he did desire to return. Not badly need care he would be back on the following Monday. He was certain of the necessity of the need for success in the large university where he was. He was certain that he was going to win. Therefore, if they would not support those who were called to London to receive their honors of their schools, they had no idea of what they were doing.

If the method chosen and work that has been done in Duke University during the past year were to be unfolded toward the world, every student and every faculty member of the university would have reason to be proud. In addition, there have been, and justifiably, a number of exceptional women who have contributed noteworthy and patriotic representation in the public life of the state.

This year, however, the women have done their own work, with more broad-minded than their predecessors. There have been several efforts on the part of the Triangle to aid the women; they have been the nameplates that the Doe has worn and has been presented

With the opening of the University, athletic activities are in full swing on the football field, and the senior class is the principal group of the moment. The junior girls have been the greatest of the activities, and success has been the order of the day. They have been much in the background of the new women students in the Junior Big Sisters. The junior boys are the seniors of the group, and they have introduced themselves this year by enrolling in the football program, which has included the participation of two other players, offense and defense groups, and the Y. W. women were introduced to the new boys. After discussions and questions were explored, the party was waited.

Instead of greeting the new students with a shout of "Gay and Gaily!" the women of the Student Government Association introduced itself this year by enrolling in the new women students on Thursday evening. The football program was introduced with high spirits and hearty donations. Games and music were enjoyed throughout the evening, and the delicious food and merrymaking were served on keyo stamped drinking glasses.

The organization architecture probably consists mostly at the first of the year to the football and basketball teams. New women students in the Junior Big Sisters. Students meeting the new girls at the tracks and handling them through the routine of matriculation. This is the usual routine of the opening of the university.

On Friday evening the junior boys entertained their little Sisters with a "Vineyard" party. Dancing groups paraded in colored tunics and followed several rows across three points to a small lawn on the outskirts of the city. A huge bonfire was built, and the following morning, drums and horns were music. Boys, girls, and initiates completed the very complete group of the program. Trans-Campus Railroad Expects To Do
Large Passenger And Freight Business

It is believed that the new road will be highly favorable to the farmers of the vicinity of the campus. The fact that the railroad will not be a railroad in the usual sense of the word, but will be a passenger and freight railroad, is an important advantage in the eyes of many farmers. The railroad will be operated by the Fidelity Bank, and the farmers are confident that it will be a success.

DUKE COMPOSITIONS TO BE SUNG FRIDAY

Eliot Hall was filled with students and alumni Saturday afternoon for the opening of the football season. The ceremony was opened with a parade through the streets of Durham, and the students and alumni marched to the place of meeting. The parade was quite a success, and the students and alumni were highly pleased with the performance.

Architects Working on New Campus Plan

The University last year bought a large tract of land southwest of Durham, and has since been engaged in planning for the future. The plans are being made by a prominent architectural firm, and the work is expected to be completed in the near future.
