OPEN FORUM

We have had a number of criticisms of certain paragraphs and articles recently appearing in the Duke Chronicle. We feel that this is not too bad, as it is a sign of the increasing number of students who are taking an interest in the affairs of their college. It is also a sign that the students are becoming more critical of the work of the editors of the Chronicle.

However, we would like to point out that we do not intend to be unnecessarily critical of the work of our editorial staff. We believe that they are doing a good job, and we do not wish to detract from their efforts.

We would like to make it clear that we are not overly optimistic about the benefits of exhorting students. We have always held this view, and we continue to do so. We feel that it is not always possible to get the desired results from this kind of approach.

In order to improve the quality of the work of the editorial staff, we would like to suggest the following steps:

1. The editors should be more careful in their selection of materials.
2. They should be more selective in their choice of topics.
3. They should be more careful in their use of language.
4. They should be more careful in their use of facts.
5. They should be more careful in their use of figures.

We would like to suggest that the editors of the Chronicle should consider these suggestions, and that they should take steps to improve the quality of their work.
