RED FRIAR'S MEN WILL BE TAPPED FRIDAY MORNING

Seven Outstanding Men Will Receive High Honor of Election to Red Friars.

SPECULATION AS TO MEN Possible Suggestions Are Offered by Reporter, Leadership and Popularity Contest.

Friday morning at chapel the annual Red Friars tapping will occur. When the seven fortunate men, chosen for perhaps the highest honor of the school year, will be already a topic of questioning conversation among the students. As is the tradition of the Red Friars (founded in 1883) only men enrolling on the campus for their character, leadership, and participation in student activities, will be elected to membership. These men who excel in athletics, arts, public life, and religion have a good chance if by excellence in these fields, religion, and religion is also meant real leadership in those fields. Perhaps a man may even make the coveted Red Friar (Continued on page five)

DR. GILBERT HAS WRITTEN PAPERS

Classical and Scholarly Magazines Publish Articles by Duke Professor.

Within the past several months Dr. Allan H. Gilbert, of the English department here, has written, besides his very successful book on "Daniel's Conception of Justice," a number of papers on various classical and scholarly subjects. His "Sense of Discovery in Othello," published in the April Gilbert Quarterly, is at once Dr. Gilbert's longest article and the one of most general interest. Other recently published articles, published by Dr. Gilbert are: "The Source of Pindar's 'Arrangement of Parts,'" in Modern Language Notes for January, 1926; a book review of "Studies in Shakespeare, Milton, and Donne," by Members of the English Department of the University of Michigan, also in Modern Language Notes, April; and "The Olympic Decadence," in the Classical Journal. Mr. Gilbert's articles will be published during the summer season in "Archaeological, and in the Philosophical Review, and "The (Continued on page five)

COMMITTEE AWARDS CAT'S HEAD PRIZES

Eight Pins Given to Members of The Chronicle Staff in Recognition of Meritorious Work.

The Cat's Head Club, through a committee composed of Dr. N. L. White, Gay Allen, and W. Freeman Thawdell, awarded eight gold pins to members of the Chronicle staff who have done meritorious work on the staff during the present school year. All associate editors under Mr. Allen submitted to the committee work done by them this year and from this record the men were chosen.

This is the first year that the Cat's Head Club, a local literary organization, has given pins for meritorious work on the Chronicle. In all probability the Club will continue to offer something for satisfaction work. Seven men and one woman received pins this year. Miss Evelyn Miller, co-ed editor, was the only co-ed to receive the pins. The men are Gay Allen, R. T. Hubbard, W. Freeman Thawdell, Ray Andrews, T. K. Wagon, J. T. J. Shaw, Jr., and Albert Cottrell.

LOCAL CHAPTER SCHOLA CAVEAT GROWS RAPIDLY

Student Organization Adopts Constitution and By-Laws at Recent Meeting.

STATE CONVENTION SOON Plans for Holding First Inter-Collegiate Convention of the Organization in Durham Are Maturing.

Schola Caveat, the recently organized student organization at Duke to protect against legislative restrictions of education, has in the past few days grown with unusual rapidity. Representatives of the Duke chapter have visited other State Colleges and have found that in general the sympathy of all state colleges is with Schola Caveat. Copies of the constitution have been mailed to all colleges in the state.

Preparations for the first inter-collegiate convention to be held in Durham at an early date are nearly completed. All state schools will be represented at this convention. Noted speakers, capable of addressing such a gathering, will be on hand. There is a rumor to the effect that Mr. Poole and other notable connected with legislative suppression of education may be asked to present the logic of their views to the convention current at Duke. However, positive information is not available at present.

CLUB HEARS PAPER BY JAS. TRUESDALE

Classical Student Reads Critical Paper to Members of Classical Club at Meeting.

Jas. N. Truesdale read a valuable and interesting paper before the Classical Club in its regular meeting in the Greek room Thursday night, May 6. The subject of Truesdale's paper was "Plautus' Menecleon and Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors."

Truesdale began his paper with an explanation of Latin comedy as it is reflected in the days of Plautus and Terence. From this point he proceeded into a discussion of the Menecleon, one of the most widely read and generally admired Latin comedies, upon which it is understood that Shakespeare based his Comedy of Errors.

In summing up the merits of the two plays in order to determine their relative rank, Truesdale quoted Horace: "The Comedy of Errors is taken very much from the Menecleon of Plautus and is not an improvement on it."

HESPERIAN SOCIETY HAS ANNUAL SOCIAL

Members and Visitors Are Entertained by Miss Childs, the Mandolin Club, and Mr. Warner.

Following the custom of a number of years last Friday night the Hesperian Library Society held its annual reception in its hall in East Duke building. About 300 guests were present at this enjoyable affair.

Last Friday night was "Ladies Night" for the members of Hesperian Library Society, and many of the members with their invited guests were present. The hall was beautifully decorated with blue and white, which were the colors of the society, and this lent an enchanting atmosphere to the hall. Made up furnished during the entire occasion by the University orchestra. After all the guests had assembled, the mandolin club, composed of Messrs. Ivey, Warner, Truesdale, and Westbrook, rendered several selections, and after much merriment they were induced to make a second appearance. Following this time Mr. Childs presented a one-act play in an unusually successful dramatic style. She also rendered several short readings which further demonstrated her remarkable talent. Mr. Warner then made an appearance with his ukulele and played some of his favorite compositions, which proved to be a much success as usual. Following this refreshments were served by a group of young ladies from Southgate.

JUNALUSKA SUMMER SCHOOL ONE SESSION

College Credit Is to be Given For English, History, Bible, and Mathematics.

The Junaluska Summer school, situated at Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, which opens June 26, 1926, is to be a "buntings." If conclusions can be drawn from the recent bulletin sent out by that school, the school has recently been established under the auspices of Duke University, and is of one several schools which will be established as part of the University's extension program. It has been located at Lake Junaluska for two primary reasons: to bring the school closer to the homes of those in western Carolina, and to provide a certain amount of cultural recreation for those who wish to enjoy the outdoor life and at the same time go to school.

The new bulletin explains that the teaching staff consists of regular members of the Duke University faculty and other instructors nominated by President W. P. Dew of Duke University. Among those who are not from the Duke faculty are Mr. M. V. Moore, supervisor of Wayneville Township Schools, and Dr. L. L. Wagon, supervisor of the Mason College. Professor R. G. KIRKPATRICK READS PAPER ON STRACHEY

Last Sigma Upsilon Meeting of the Year Held. New Men Initiated and Officers Elected.

At the regular meeting last Thursday evening of the Fortnightly Club chapter of Sigma Upsilon, Mr. D. E. Kirkpatrick presented a paper on the English essayist and biographer, Lytton Strachey, as the basis of this study, Strachey's three most important books, East and West, Queen Victoria, and Books and Characters. Mr. Kirkpatrick went at some length into an analysis of Strachey's attitude toward his subjects. Citing as an example Queen Victoria, Mr. Kirkpatrick said that "Strachey began by severely ridiculing the Queen, but before the end, being won over by a study of her life and character, openly and even over-estimated and praised her."

Mr. Kirkpatrick also said that Strachey had set a new fashion in biography, by making it psychological, revealing men and women, rather than mere animated pictures of them. (Continued on page five)

SENIOR BANQUET MONDAY EVENING UNIQUE PROGRAM

Seniors Hold Annual Social Affair in Banquet Halls of Washington Duke.

PRESIDENT TOASTMASTER

Dr. Spoor and Dean Wannamaker, Speakers. Ed Cannon and Miss Roberts Lead Grand March.

The annual senior banquet, held in the Washington Duke Hotel banquet rooms Monday evening, proved to be one of the outstanding social affairs of the Spring season. Beautiful decorations carrying out the class color together with the entrancing music of the hotel orchestra, made an atmosphere of high sociality in the last meeting of this kind for the class of 1926.

Edward L. Cannon, president of the class, acted as toastmaster. He made a brief opening address to the seniors at the beginning of the banquet, and later introduced Mr. "Soop" Porter, Dr. W. H. R. S. Rankin, director of the senior class, and Dr. E. D. Spoor as speakers of the evening. Following the banquet the seniors moved into the ballroom where they were entertained by a very attractive program. Mr. R. M. Flynn, formerly of Trinity College sang several songs, much to the pleasure of the audience. Following this, a very attractive program of quartet entertainment with several selections.

The final event on the program was (Continued on page four)

W. S. RANKIN WRITES OF DUKE FOUNDATION

Has Interesting Article in April Review of Reviews on Hospital Fund.

"Of the many articles in the April 'New South' issue of 'The Review of Reviews,' the one by W. S. Rankin, director of the hospital section of the Duke Endowment, has most interest for Duke University students. Dr. Rankin's article, 'A Million Dollars a Year for Carolina Hospitals,' is at first concerned with average conditions. Quoting him in part as follows:

"A hasty glance at the medical problems of the average rural county of North and South Carolina will serve to indicate how large and fine a field of hospital service lies open to the hospital section of the Duke endowment. Such a county is 500 square miles in area and has a population of 20,000. Twenty-five people for each square mile of the population, a total of 125, are constantly liable to the extent of being bed-ridden, and of these 10 percent, or 75 people, are hospital beds in need of care, and 25 are in need of care. After quoting some figures as to the prevalence and fatality of many diseases, Dr. Rankin, opening these of the average rural counties there are no hospital facilities whatever. In about two-thirds of the counties there are from one to one and one-half hospital beds for each 1,000 of the population, where, according to medical authorities, five hospital beds are needed. Many of the hospitals in rural counties are privately owned and 'closed' to most physicians. Again, an occupancy of 75 per cent of hospital beds is not a normal condition. This condition is probably due to inadequate provision for maintenance."

Then follows a discussion of the situation in rural communities in regard to inadequate medical facilities, doctors, and hospitals, of which to quote Dr. Rankin again:

"The fact is that the expressed opinion of the board of delegates of the American Medical Association that a proper distribution of hospital facilities will go far in bringing a normal distribution of doctors."

BIGGS VICE-CHAIRMAN OF STUDENT COUNCIL

At a meeting of the new Student Council held Monday night, W. A. Biggs was elected vice-chairman and H. L. Hester secretary.

ORMAND SUPERVISING COMPREHENSIVE MAP

Map Will, When Finished, Show Every Country Church in North Carolina. Key Map Displayed.

The key map to a map which, when finished, will be the finest and most complete map of North Carolina to be found, was exhibited in the office of Prof. J. M. Ormand, head of the Rural Life Department of Duke University, last Friday.

The map was 11 feet in length, and had a width of 36 inches. When completed, it will show, in addition to the general features of a map, the districts of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in North Carolina.

The map to which this map is a key is made up of units, each county being one unit, thereby making a map of one hundred sheets. When finished, it will show every country church in North Carolina, schools, highways, principal cities, and other topographic features. The finished maps are to be placed in a book of sufficient dimensions and kept in the Rural Life Department, where they (Continued on page five) exercising the same careful and discriminating judgment in investing in humanitarian service that he had used in his business enterprises, saw this great and vital need of rural people, and out of the impulse of a generous heart, backed this judgment with his millions. In addition to making generous provisions for education, including the establishment of a great university which is to include a well-equipped medical department with a training school for nurses, and in addition to large sums set aside for dependent children and religious causes, Mr. James B. Duke provided a sum of money which it is estimated will produce an annual income of approximately one million dollars, this income to be used exclusively in the development of hospitals, especially in rural communities.

Through the medical school and the income from the trust fund for hospitals, four distinct types of medical service will be rendered to the people of the Carolinas.

First, the endowment will render financial assistance in the development of hospitals. Under the terms of the gift, it is provided that the trustees may give to any hospital in the Carolinas that is not operated for private gain one dollar for each day a hospital bed is occupied.

"Second, the endowment will render most valuable assistance to hospitals in supplying information on hospital costs and services. This assistance will be made possible through the information furnished to the trustees by the hospitals which apply for financial aid. In this way a vast amount of valuable data with reference to hospital costs and services will be assembled, tabulated and made available to hospitals.

"Third, the endowment will render assistance to communities in helping to organize their large but, for the most part, latent and unorganized interests in the care of the sick. These interests are represented and assembled in such community agencies as the churches, the civic clubs, the women's organizations, the business organizations, and the official bodies of the counties and towns.

"Fourth, the endowment, through the close association of its trustees with great central hospital and medical school on the one hand and with many outlying hospital county hospitals on the other hand, will encourage in every way open to them the development of cordial co-operative and mutually advantageous relations between the large hospital and medical school and the smaller hospitals.

Finally, Dr. Rankin concludes:

"What a multiplication and perpetuity of life the endowment of a single hospital bed, with its annual turnover of 25 patients, means! The building and endowment of a hospital ward, the establishment of a Plummer Institute or a Brady clinic, an important part of a great hospital, with the salvaging of human life in many multiples of 25, how magnificent a service that is! But now comes a man, James B. Duke, of great constructive thought, of generous sympathy combined with ample means and true to the greatness of his own character, he thinks not in terms of hospital beds, or hospital wards, or individual hospitals, but plans and provides for a system of hospitals for two entire states.

ARCTIC TRAVELER MAKES DISCOVERY

College Bred Man Educated in "Department of Serious Education" is Found.

By JAMES STONE

During a recent travel into a distant land I came upon one of the queerest beings it has ever been my privilege, if it may be called a privilege, to see. I was in a desolate land far into the interior of the Arctic Circle which has never been explored by man. As far as the eye could see there was nothing but mountains and valleys of cold, gray ice. The sky was a dull, leaden gray. Of a sudden I espied a figure, a lone figure, sitting directly in front of me. As I drew near I saw that it was a man. He was sitting on a round ball of ice on which, made by nature's freak formation, was a distinct relief map of the world. The whole ball reminded me of the globe I had seen in school houses.

Wishing to find out something about the man I walked boldly up to him. As I stood near enough to touch him, I looked him over from head to foot. He wasn't so queer, as humans go, in physical appearance, so I decided to speak to him and awaken him from the trance in which he had seemed to be since my arrival on the scene.

"How do you do?" I addressed him. Without a start he answered: "As well as can be expected."

Surely this man must be crazy, I thought, sitting here alone in a part of the world thousands of miles from civilization.

I decided to question him.

"Are you an explorer?"

"Yes." His answers were in a monotonous tone.

"Where is your party? your pack? your train? your arctic clothes?"

"I have none of those."

Surely this man was an escaped lunatic, but how did he live? How did he get here?

Exasperated I decided to try to talk to him when I decided to enjoy him in talking in the way conventional lunatics are enjoyed. I started.

"My good man, the world is waiting with open arms to welcome you back. You have made the greatest discovery in history."

Notably he heaved a strange sigh, and shifted his feet impatiently, gazing farther and deeper into the cold and white north.

Again I thought, surely this man is insane. But I waited until he turned towards me and with an impatient but hardly noticeable shrug of his shoulders he resigned himself to my questioning.

Finding that treating him as a lunatic would not produce results, I resorted again to direct questioning.

"What are you doing here?" I almost demanded.

"Brother," he said plyingly, "you are like the rest. You aren't satisfied with simply knowing that I am here; you must know why and how. But you are so extraordinarily usual that I have no heart to deny you."

"The story is short, but the time required in making it, like all excessively short stories, was long."

"When I was finishing my last year in the public schools and was casting about to find the proper university in which I could acquire a higher education, I found a catalog from a certain university, the name of which does not matter. I will simply say that it was making a hard fight to establish its identity among the elite—like a small boy trying to attract notice by making more physical noise than his elders. This university, it seems, had spent its resources in all other fields, so it resorted to the vague and untrodden field of actually educating its students.

"Like the minority of high school seniors, I had visions of learning and knowing things: books, people, and life. I decided that the college would give to me a card of introduction to all these things if I were but diligent enough in my efforts to meet its requirements.

"I started to devour hungrily the contents of the catalog when, as I picked up the book, a somber-looking pamphlet dropped to the floor. I picked it up and read it. Eureka! This little pamphlet solved the problem. It read as follows: The University maintains an unique department which is known as the "Department of Serious Education." This department is segregated from the other divisions of the University, and no students are allowed to enter this department who are not deemed fit to take the required work. An entrance committee for the "Department of Serious Education" passes upon the eligibility of the applicants. This committee is made up of men who are in no way connected with the University, other than participating in the decisions of this particular committee.

"As has been stated, this department is segregated from the rest of the University. This is literally true. No student of the regular divisions, or for that matter, any outsiders, may visit the department, nor may any student of this department leave the grounds set aside for their use. This holds good the entire year, until four years of work have been finished. For no reason whatsoever may a student in this department leave the segregated grounds. If he enters he must stay there for four years. All equipment, mental, physical, moral, and spiritual, is amply provided for and there is no need to leave.

The system of instruction for this school is modeled after the Oxford tutorial system. There are two experienced tutors to each student. Periodically, lectures of world-wide renown and knowledge will speak on their own peculiar specializations.

"Free speech and liberal thought is compulsory and the penalty for bigotry is immediate expulsion and a long term sentence to other departments in the University. The specific department to be designated by a committee in charge of this.

"Please note that none of these committees are in any way, other than their function as committees, connected with the University.

"Further information may be had by inquiring of the Committee on Entrance."

The man finished his recitation of the contents of the pamphlet. Needless to say, all of man's emotions arose and fell in me as he recited, parodied, these things. I could not speak, but he went on.

"I knew that was the place for me to go. So I decided to apply for entrance. I arrived in the land of ignorance and went before the committee and it found me eligible and worthy."

He stopped, but I was anxious to know more after I had sufficiently recovered from my amazement. I also shuddered and shivered at the loneliness and the boundlessness of this great arctic region became more noticeable.

But I wanted more information.

"But why, pray tell me, are you here? I queried with much curiosity.

"This is where they sent me," he said.

TALK about "alliteration's artful aid" . . . the printer certainly raided the "p" box that trip. But let that go! The advice is just as serious and sound as though it were couched in the careful diction of an English prof.

Just get yourself a jimmy-pipe and fill the bowl to the brim with Prince Albert. Light up, and let the first fragrant whiff tell you that no other tobacco is like P. A.—or can be! Cool and sweet and fragrant, P. A. has everything a fellow ever wished for in a smoke.

P. A. can't bite your tongue or parch your throat. The Prince Albert process settled that in P. A.'s freshman year. Get yourself a tidy red tin of Prince Albert today. The first load-up will tell you why pipes are so fashionable among young men today.

KITTRELL COLLEGE MAY BUY AND MOVE LIBRARY

Dr. Frank C. Brown, director of the Duke building program, announces that plans for the removal of the Library and Craven Memorial Hall to Kittrell College, a negro institution, are now under consideration. Dr. Brown stated, however, that nothing definite as yet has been decided upon, and it is questionable whether the negro college can make an economical purchase and removal of the two Duke buildings that are to be torn down to make way for the erection of new structures.

MISSIONARY DRIVE CLOSES SATURDAY

The money which was raised will be used to purchase facilities for Greensburg College. A tremendous effort is being made eventually to erect a memorial hall to the late J. M. Lander, a missionary to Brazil from the Methodist church who accomplished a significant work and was particularly instrumental in the progress of Greensburg College. Dr. Super stated that the prime motive of this missionary drive was to establish eventually Duke in Brazil as already Yale had been established in the Orient. The efforts of the Senators and Pirates have been a commendable step in that direction.
