"These stories are very interesting by a common-sense speech, anyway," said the Columbia "State" just now we should say that of the publication which makes the Duke Chronicle Daily News

Tuition is raised. But this won't affect our most important groups, the ministers and most of the athletes.

Somehow or other we envy the seniors. Most of them will never again have to attend boring lectures in a class room. Some of them, however, will have to attend boring lectures in cash or checks and who gave Arthur A. Hays Sulzberger the stuff that got him into court last week—Columbia Daily News

Little Miss Doris Duke will lay the cornerstone of the new university some time this spring. We wonder of she has yet made reservations to enter Duke as a co-ed.

Old grads returning for reunions will pick ticks about the campus. That should put an Oriental tinge in the atmosphere of an Occidental campus.

"O. D. K. take him," says caption above Gov. McLean's picture in the CHRONICLE. We wonder whether it is O. D. K. honoring the Governor, or the Governor honoring O. D. K.

Duke students commit their baseball team for making a clean sweep of the two-game series with Carolina. Next to winning the state championship beating Carolina is best for Duke teams.

EXECUT

News stories appearing in the daily papers of the State proclaim that Duke is missing the boat for her twenty-sixth commencement. Thus we are reminded of the fact that in conventional ceremonies two weeks from today approximately two hundred students will receive sheepskins from the hands of our President which will place upon them the trademark of Bachelors of Arts. Robed in caps and gowns which they have rented for the stuporific (to those occasion), these young people will be presented with Bibles in addition to their diplomas and the maternal blessings of their alma mater. In such a manner will be officially and very suspiciously terminated four of the pleasantest years they have spent or will ever spend.

How much they have learned by imbibing at the local spring of knowledge? That question should not be asked. Only a very few of them have attempted to ground themselves in the arts and sciences which it was their duty to come in contact with while enrolled in an institution of higher learning. Yet they have all learned something about life and the best and most profitable way to live it. They have made friendships that will endure for the rest of their days even though that prevalent wind may scatter them far and wide on the face of the earth and their little names may be paddled in opposite directions on that well-known stream of life. What does it matter if some of them can not yet express themselves in writing or even write a sensible letter home to the parents? What does it matter, if after four years of university life, they will still cling to the backs of some? At least some of the rough edges have been toned down by their associations here. What does it matter if, when the smelter reviews his college life in retrospect, he reaches the conclusion that it has been a farce? Yet he will admit that it has been a wonderful and thoroughly enjoyable farce, and he will feel a slight regret that it is ended. And that is what counts; he has had a good time; he has made additional contacts; perhaps he has learned a little something that will be of value to him in the days to come.

Probably the above picture of the members of the class of 1929 is not an authentic portrayal of the position of the young graduates. We should express emotion at their impending departure from our midst and extol their scholastic, athletic, activity, and social merits. But we are unable to was sentimental over their glorious exit from the college drama. Indeed for the most part we are glad that they are going. They have served their time here; they have run their course; so "Good-bye and luck to them." Four years is a long period of time for any students to spend at one institution; yet some have developed such a strong attachment for Duke that they do not choose to leave and will return next fall in the capacity of graduate students or perhaps as repeaters. Of course they are welcome.

We wish for the present seniors the best of good fortune in the work they take up. Yes, success will be theirs. Politicians and preachers, lawyers and doctors, professors and bookers will come from among them. Perhaps one of their number will be president of our country some day. Who knows? To a certain degree their success will redound to the credit of the institution where they absorbed much wisdom. For the sake of Duke we wish them luck. And if some of them are unusually fortunate in their quest for wealth, they will undoubtedly donate money enough for the construction of a national stadium, swimming pool, or what is more important, subsidize a tax line connecting the two units of the greater university. We cannot refrain from saying that some of them have been so successful as collegiate activity men we are dubious about their future well-being when they shall venture into the world from the college atmosphere.

We are proud of the class of 1929, the preceding remarks notwithstanding. In every respect it is as good as any other class to be graduated here. We shall watch the careers of the members of the class with interest as well as with amusement. Again after our felicitations upon their immediate removal of those highly prized Latin-voiced diplomas.

TUITION GOES UP

The university catalogues for the 1928-29 term are at last in the press. As a whole, it has the general appearance and contents of the catalogues of other years, with the usual "Not offered in 1928-29" phrase tacked on to many of the most desired courses. Or is it that phrase which makes the student think he would like to take that particular course?

After scrutinizing the list of estimated expenses for the student here next year we made the discovery that tuition charges have been boosted, effective next year, from thirty dollars to fifty dollars a semester. Fortunately, the figures represented no greater sum than they did for this year. This revelation will probably surprise no student as it has long been rumored that an increase in university charges was contemplated. A hasty scanning of the catalogue did not reveal an increase in some of the other charges.

This university undoubtedly is in need of a greater source of revenue. Operating expenses are obviously high, and tuition has been ridiculously low. Some enthusiastically lay Duke has posted signs at various places along the campus informing the students that they pay only one third of their college expenses, while the university magnanimously lays the remaining two thirds of the financial burden. We don't know whether this magnanimity will have to alter his figures when the new rates go into effect or not, but we do wonder if these posters were intended to bolster the students up somewhat when they were informed of the higher tuition figure. Anyhow the authorities realize that the student has not been paying his share, and have justly taken this as a means of slightly rectifying the situation.

The total fall registration of students in the undergraduate body, the graduate school, the law school, and the school of religion was reported to be 1521. Perhaps a third of this number are exempted from tuition charges on the grounds of being sons of ministers, embryonic ministers, athletes, students of the law, or scholars and the like. But even if forty-dollar increase affects only a thousand students that will mean an additional four thousand dollars for the running expenses of the university. A sum of that size will not go far in running a business of the size of the university but it will add materially in a financial way.

What effect will this increase in tuition charges have on the student body? It will surely not bring about a smaller enrollment. It will not prevent any of the best students from matriculating here, and, unfortunately, it will in all probability not retard those of a certain undesirable element who have recently taken a liking for Duke and are seeking admittance here. Only when tuition charges amount to two or three hundred dollars a year, they will be considered as barriers to students desiring to come here. And means other than financial prohibition should be, and can be, determined upon as a basis for deciding the eligibility of students desiring admittance. Eligibility of students should be given much more careful deliberation than it obviously has been given in the past. Not wishing to see the university with all of its beautiful new buildings as hard pushed as was poor Trinity College for money, we heartily commend this slight increase in the tuition rates. If it will put our expenditures exceeding her various forms of income.

If the greater expense causes anyone not to enter Duke, it will not be, however, certain residents of a certain large city, but some industrious farm boys, who will perhaps be one of the smaller colleges of the state. That loss will not be felt.

THE LOUD BASSON

T. J. S. Jr.

The Training of An American, Burton J. Hendrick's final volume on the life and letters of Walter Hines Pate, has just been published within the month, but it adds little to the account which we already have concerning Pate's stay at Trinity college. It will be remembered that Mr. Hendrick visited the Duke campus about a year ago for the purpose of collecting material for this study of the earlier life and letters of Pate. That say more favorable light upon young "Walt's" unhappy fifteen months at Old Trinity college. It will be remembered that Mr. Hendrick was not to be expected. The picture of the dirt and poor towns existing in 1871, of the poverty stricken college, and of its combination farmer-blacksmith-literary president, the Rev. Braxton Craven, is all set down in cold print by the biographer.

In all fairness to all it should be said that perhaps Mr. Hendrick overstates the dismal picture. Bad as conditions were in Randolph county and in the Trinity community they could not (at least) have been as bad as they were in the more secure Wake county section from which young Pate came. With commendable skill Mr. Hendrick does his best in this new volume to show good rather than evil coming from young Pate's contact with the head of the college. He attempts this good impression by trying to demonstrate how "Walt" is ideal for education by the state came in it is drawn from the sometimes gruff Francis Craven, but, for or against, put a smooth finish over rugged edges. All people interested in the reactions of one of North Carolina's few non-conformists will enjoy these earlier Pate letters.

A strange messenger from the outer world is a little pamphlet-magazine called The New Praterist. Its editor, one George Frederic Gundelinger, styles himself as "An Independent Value Paper." Judge from the contents the editor must have had quite a rough time of it fifteen years ago when he was in the Abolition, fraternalism, and tobacco smoking came in for a large share of condemnation. Questions of sex and the merits of the present and the past presidents of Yale also claim attention.

From a literary standpoint the editor of this Praterist seems to be amusing. For example here is the story:

"Professor Phelps met him (Gene Tunney) at Miami playing golf. We believe. It showed a great spirit in the professor's part to share Mr. Tunney with his students. Selfish and plagiaristic it would have been had William Lyon not been his original knock-out man. He had in private and then given it in the classroom as his own. The Yemas tells us that there was a capacity audience in Harkness, many being turned away. . . . Great credit to Professor Phelps for having discovered and trained the Harvard men to expound the Bible in his lectures. The large attendance clearly denotes the return of the professor's popularity, with which, we said, some one has been 'baking' the sale."

Rumor has it that members of the local golf-ether organization. It is, no undergraduate students in the wearing of caps and gowns. Such an innovation has long been advocated in this column and elsewhere and its adoption is to be commended. We begin to feel that the Basson can be heard as well as seen.

Unless by grace of the new editor room is made for it in the commencement of the Chronicle this is the first time that the Loud Basson will have a chance to display itself. The venture through the year has been as pleasant as it has profitable to the editor. That no more could have been said than said local golf-ether organizations. It is, no as we are able to judge, a very working group. The effectiveness of the work it will be able to accomplish here if Duke cannot well be measured before about this time next year, but we leave no great matter new, but the final word we leave with you is a commendation for the newly formed chapter of Sigma Tau Delta, the national professional English fraternity. A former editor of the Chronicle once wrote editorially to the effect that there were many organizations of one kind or another on the campus. Such may be, but trying very hard for common sense, we put aside the product of the editorialist referred to tried to carry out his accusations by leaving a particular meeting over over of his side. The program. But Sigma Tau Delta is of a different stamp from the most of the

with the hope that as a congenial group meeting together for the enjoyment Sigma Tau Delta will take this place along side of other fraternal groups striving to sustain a sound tradition and a wide awake future.

Staccato Thought

D. H. T.

It has been quite a while since we have had the muse whisper in our ear Staccato thought.—It has been the same length of time since we have had any thought at all.—Changes have taken place, and the smoke of the battle over the "Grive Issue" of the Chronicle has blown over.—There are still a few people coughing here and there, but we trust that there are no serious after-effects.—We think that the "Grive Issue" was mainly, and anyone with average amount of perception would have thought the same way, so again we are at all amiable.—There were a few who took it very seriously.—We think that if they would review the paper as a whole, they would get a good laugh out of it.

However, as long as there are people who are sensitive, and there always will be, and as long as there are others with no sense of decency or responsibility (as well as before) there should be as grievous issues of the Chronicle, and other publications that have been so serious.—We are rather dogmatic, we admit, but since we think that we are right, we are not as dogmatically going to stick to our statement.

Since the college is interested in electricity and in the electric power business we think that the plan to have the campus well illuminated with daylight lights a good one.—We will advertise our place of learning, and the business which we are interested.—We wonder whether it will be appropriate or not.—We have our doubts.—We wouldn't have these doubts if Duke university were a newly built department store, hotel, or movie house, but since we are supposed to be attending a dignified institution of learning, we think that it will be a little bit inappropriate.

We were highly pleased to see our learned commentators on the Taurian production of Andromeda and the Zoo and on the clothing of the ladies at said production so thoroughly sagged in their "open forum."—We thought that there was only one remark left out.

"We hereby state that if this important 'pabian' dissatisfied with conditions here at Duke, and in the South, please remember that he received no engraved invitation to enroll in this university, and will be further reminded of the fact that both the Southern and the Seaboard railways run trains back to his beloved New York as well as in his direction, and that he will no doubt be received with open arms in the city where Breeds for women cost more than $14.99.

We will now give several people a splash of relief.—We make the statement that this is the last time that Staccato thought will ever appear.—We have said so for the last time with the muse and should the new Editor choose to include us among his contributors next year we will try our hardest to keep the line.—Yes, we can now hear the snickers of several others.—We politely ignore them.—We don't give two whoops in the matter whether they like our work or not. They always have the privilege of slipping it.

OPEN FORUM

Dear Mr. Editor:

Some with light amusement, some with heavy disgust, some with a measure of anxiety some with still other feelings, have read the letters of Mr. Sarason, Mr. Kidd, and Mr. Lucas appearing in the two last issues of the Chronicle. I am writing to you the product of my own cogitations on the matters underlying the discussion.

One thing that seems clear in this, if we are to have here a true university, drawing together men and women of varied background and opposite views, we must not only be tolerant but also and courteous the better. Inconsiderate aspersions cast by men of one line or group upon those of another hold little promise of helpfulness.

Besides, we face together the deep mystery of life and the immense task of building a better civilization. To find meaningful satisfying solutions of that mystery and to make any substantial progress in the accomplishment of that task certainly will require innumerable and most varied contributions. It will be to learn to remember that those who ought to know most about it say that our ideological heritage, the heritage that we all share, includes certain elements, substance and barbarism, that give, shall I say, ground for humility. In a short moment of time every individual of our generation, 'plebian' and 'aristocrat', Gentile and Jew, southerner and northerner, get a good laugh out of it.

A Lady

You are beautiful and faded
Like an old opera tune
Played upon a harpsichord
Or like the sun-faded silk
Of an eighteenth century boudoir.
In your eyes
Smoulder the fallen roses of out-lived minutes.
And the perfume of your soul
Is vague and suffusing.
With the fragrance of sealed spice-jars.
Your halcyon delight are
And I grow mad with gazing
At your bleat colors.

My vigor is a new-minted penny,
Which I cast at your feet,
Gather it up from the dust,
That its sparkle may amuse you.

BILL LASSITER AND HIS BLUE DEVILS

Bill Lassiter and his Duke University "Blue Devils" who recently announced their engagement for the summer season at the Atlantic Hotel, Morehead City. The selection of this orchestra was made in preference to several very good orchestras, who were considered by the management of the hotel. The Blue Devils are quite popular on the campus as well as in other parts of the state and for several years have featured the concert tour of the Duke Musical Club. The personnel of the orchestra is as follows: Left to Right (Seated) E. S. Smith, Kinston; Julius Neal, Lenoirville; H. M. Gilson, Lenoirville; D. C. McDuffie, Asheville; G. W. Sanders, Asheville; D. Yes, Sir, P.A. is cool and comfortable and mellow and mild. Long-burning, with a good clean ash. You never tire of P.A. It's always the same old friendly smoke. Get yourself a tidy red tin and check everything I'm telling you!

DUKE MUSICIANS CLOSE YEAR WITH ENVIABLE RECORD

The Band, Symphony Orchestra, Glee Club, Blue Devils, and University Club Have Fine Season

PLANS FOR NEXT SEASON

J. Foster Barnes and C. E. Lettwich, Jr., Musical Directors for Duke, Predict Great Things From Musicians Next Year

Last Saturday marked the close of the season for the Duke University Musical Clubs, the Band playing the last time this year.

The season has been the most successful ever and the director is looking forward to even a better one next year.

The Band, named by all the State papers as the best college band in the South, has played an important part in all the Athletic contests as well as parades and concerts. The band took a trip to Southern Plains where they were welcomed by the entire population and their concert was well received. The band also accompanied the teams to Davidson, Wake Forest and Raleigh, doing their part to push the team to victory. Next year the band will make several trips, giving concerts and parading for big events.

The symphony orchestra, as usual has won acclaim throughout the State with their strains of delightful music. They have been praised by all the prominent musicians for their ability and ease of playing the Masters compositions. They are the outstanding feature of the Musical Club trips and those of Music's student look forward to hearing them play.

The Glee club, needs no mention. They have sung laudable songs on themselves. Having won the State championship and also making a wonderful showing in the Southern Championships, puts them well up the ladder of fame and next year, the Southern Championship Cup will no doubt be the property of the club.

The University Club orchestra and the Blue Devils have both made names for themselves. The University Club will play in Hendersonville, N. C. this summer and the Blue Devils at Morehead, N. C. Those who have heard these two orchestras will certainly always remember them and that they are expected to make the campus lighter next year with their strains of jazz.

Mr. J. Foster Barnes, who has been added to the Musical Faculty, has done wonders with the Glee Club and with the State Championship already won the Southern will fall his way next year.

Mr. G. E. Lettwich, Jr., director of Music, says that he expects great things of the Musical Clubs next year and hopes to bring even greater laurels to Duke university through the Musical organizations.

SHIELDS SPEAKS AT ACCOUNTANTS MEET

Virginia Society of Public Accountants Holds Convention in Roanoke; College Men Favored

An address by Professor J. H. Shields, of the department of Economics and Political Science, on the topic of "Recent Trends in Controlship," was one of the features of the convention of the Virginia Society of Public Accountants, held Saturday May 19, at Roanoke, Va. The content of Prof. Shields' speech is of special interest to students in the business administration group. He pointed out the increasing importance of the comptroller in modern business, and showed that the type of work done by him demanded a thorough knowledge of accounting analysis. He also proved, by citing numerous cases, that big business today is selecting its executives from the ranks of those that are well trained in the field of accountancy.

The information that the Virginia Society of Accountants has agreed to do everything in its power to maintain the standards of the profession. They expect to do this by increasing the number of college graduates in the accounting field. Several representatives of prominent accounting firms announced publicly that only college men would be considered for positions on their staffs. They are demanding men that are equipped with a knowledge of practical business economics, county and municipal government, and accounting.

MEN'S ASSOCIATION PLANS FROSH BOARD

Freshmen Board of Control Will Go Into Effect

By a recent amendment to the Constitution of the Men's Association, a Freshman Board of Control has been instituted and will go into effect next year. This group will have charge of Freshman Week at which time the new freshmen will be inducted into the campus life. They will deal with and punish all minor misdemeanors of freshmen. In case of a serious offense, the culprit will be committed to the judgment of the Student Council.

The vice-president of the Men's Association, Jennings G. King, will be president of the Board and Johnnie Weber, secretary-treasurer of the Association will serve with him. The other members of the Board will be the presidents of the three Greek clubs and a representative elected from the freshman class.

DUKE MAN CALLED HOME BY HIS FATHER'S DEATH

Edward Dunstan, sports editor of the Chronicle, was called home late in Blount's City last week-end because of the death of his father which occurred on Sunday. Although Mr. Dunstan's father was well advanced in age, it is understood that he had been in good health until the news of his death was unexpected.

SENIORS APPROACH END OF THEIR TRIP

The Question Is "What Will the Seniors Do With Their Diplomas After They Get Them?"

Also, those dignified individuals who now possess the title of seniors are about to receive their diplomas. The next question is what to do with them. Of course the most obvious thing, and probably the most fitting is to have them framed. This suggestion is made to them at any rate and should prove a valuable one since it will preserve the valuable document against the great wear that it will receive soon after it is procured.

The senior class, at present, is divided into two groups: those who are north of graduating, and then those who are trying to decide which school they attended next year. Groups of these, fortunate sons may be observed in conspicuous places discussing in soft tones their lack of being able to finish this year, and note plans for the coming year. At best the coming year will find them nothing more than freshmen in the great struggle of life.

Cubans some of those graduating this year go into the business of cigarette manufacturing to secure funds, with which to endow their alma mater they must realize that they are going to be great disappointments to Duke university. They should consider that the chief reason for graduating now each year is to maintain an active alumni; alumni who are willing to give their loyal support in all phases especially to the student institution that fostered their education.

DELTA UPSILON BETA PETITIONS BAND FRAT

Yesterday afternoon, the members of Delta Upsilon Beta, local band fraternity, met in the parlors of dormitory number four and completed the initiation of their new members. Their initiation was started last Friday.

The local musicians decided not to get charms for the members this year, but the organization is planning to petition Kappa Kappa Psi, the national band fraternity, for membership into that order.

It was also agreed that the present officers of the organization will hold their respective offices until next year. The only change being the election of Layton Reams of Murfreesboro, Tenn., as temporary treasurer in the absence of Ray Haines, who will be director of music in Statesville next year.

SOPH ORDER ELECTS OFFICERS FOR YEAR

W. A. Simon is Chosen President of R. O. S.—Order to Award Cups For Accomplishments

On last Wednesday the members of Beta Gamma Sigma, an honorary sophomore order on the campus, met and elected officers for next year. W. A. Simon, of Wilmington, was chosen president to succeed Dayton Deane, of Mt. Airy. Other officers are: Jarrett Staton, Hagerstown, Md.; secretary, John Crute, Wilson, treasurer; Southgate Martin, Wilmington, sentinel; and Frank Mesick, Jr., Harrisburg, Pa., ritualist.

In its recent initiation, B. O. S. received 36 more from the class of '30 into its membership. Two men were taken from each fraternity and a number of non-fraternity men were also chosen. The silver loving cup which the sophomore organization offered the fraternity on the campus whose Freshmen members made the highest scholastic averages, was awarded to Kappa Sigma.

Next year the order will award three cups for individual accomplishments: one cup to be given to the student in this year's freshman class who has made the second in athletics; another goes to the student with the highest scholastic standing; and the third cup will be awarded to the student of this year's freshman class who has made the most significant contribution to the Freshman class accomplishments.

NEW SORORITY RECENTLY BEGUN ON DUKE CAMPUS

A new local sorority, Sigma Beta, has made its appearance on Duke University campus. The new order has been in existence for several months secretly, but its organization has been only recently announced.

The group is composed of five members: Edna Elias, who is president of the organization; Eva Malone, Marjorie Cannon; Margaret Lee, and Martha Gilbreth and D. K. Jackson.

At the meeting of the society last night the new officers were installed, and several short talks were made. The Hesperians are planning to put on a drive next fall for a goodly number of the choice members of the freshman class.

HERSPERIAN SOCIETY INSTALLS OFFICERS

Jennings King is New President; Society Awards Medals to Tuttle, Weatherston and Livengood

The meeting of the Hesperian literary society which was held on Tuesday evening, May 15, was given over entirely to the transaction of business in preparation for the close of the school year. The committees appointed by John C. Burwell, president of the society, announced that the exhibits given by the society will be awarded as follows: the orators medal will go to Robert G. QUADRANGLE PICTURES

Lon Chaney, the man of the thousand faces, will star in "Mr. Wu," popular Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer photoplay, at the Quadrangle theatre tonight at 7:10. Pictures will continue to be shown on the campus twice a week, a spite of examinations. Even Dean Wassamaker is of the opinion that it will not hurt a student to see a picture, even though it has a final exam the next day.

"Mr. Wu" has a Chinese setting. With strange China elephants, jade-encrusted furniture, the Orient, and brilliant ornaments of a far-off land, a Chinese garden and a section of a Chinese city were constructed in one of the most elaborate scenic undertakings in the history of a screen studio, for the filming of "Mr. Wu."

The scene, representing the palace gardens of Wu, the scenery mandarin played by Chaney, is an exact duplicate of a Chinese palace garden, from magic walls designed to keep out the evil spirits to the glittering pagodas of Gaiety.

Flowers and plants imported from China vied with domestic plants duplicating Chinese agriculture. Statues, ornaments and other details were authentic, many imported from China for the production. Bronze cranes, gold fish, import of Chinese lilies and many other difficult settings marked the work.

Walker Whitehead played the story on the stage, and the screen directed by William Nigh, has a cast that includes Rene Adore, Ralph Forbes, Gertrude Olmstead, Claud King, Anna May Wong, Hume Herbert and others of note.

EDUCATION FRATERNITY INSTALLS NEW OFFICERS

The formal installation of the recently elected officers of Kappa Delta Psi, national educational fraternity, was held Wednesday evening in the Southgate parlors. The meeting was presided over by the retiring president, Miss Gladys White, who administered the oath of office to each of the new officers. The new officers are: Dennis Cook, presidency; Mae Fordham, vice-presidency; R. B. Starnes, secretary; and Elizabeth Montgomery, Treasurer.

Kappa Delta Psi was formally installed at Duke university a year ago with 30 charter members. Membership is based on scholarship and interest in the promotion of teaching. The local chapter now includes about 90 members.

Good. That's what it is...

No use trying to put a definition around Camel. It is as diverse and fugitive as the delicate tastes and fragrances that Nature puts in her choicest tobaccos, of which Camel is rolled. Science aids Nature to be sure by blending the tobaccos for subtle smoothness and mildness. One way to describe Camels is just to say, "They are good!"

Somehow, news of Camel has got around. "Have a Camel!"

Each smoker telling the other, we suppose. At any rate, it's first—in popularity as well as quality. It has beaten every record ever made by a smoke. Modern smokers have lifted it to a new world leadership. Camels request a place in your appreciation. Try them upon every test known. You'll find them always loyal to your highest standard.

to Two Bingles

With Captain Bobuk Weaver having a perfect day in the field and hitting 600 for the game the Duke Blue Devils took the last game of their schedule from Carolina Tar Heels to the tune of 7-5. Captain Bobuk felled 14 chances without a single mis-hit, and then to give an admirable clinic to his athletes, career at Duke, poked one over the center-field fence for what proved to be the winning run. Weaver, who is one of the few three letter men in school, was playing his last game, and the way in which he played it will give him a place in any Duke Hall of Fame for a long time to come.

Coach DeHart started Lefty Jenkins star Blue Devil portlander who took the Tar Heels down in the first inning. Jenkins held the Carolina scoreless in the fourth, however, the boys from Carolina got next to Jenkins in the fourth, a single and two walks to score four runs. Jean Belue, who relieved Jenkins, came into the box with three men on and pitched himself out of a hole by forcing Morgan to roll out an easy one, and then by striking out Barnhill to close the inning. During the remainder of the game he held the Tar Heels to one scratch hit. Carolina scored her other run in the sixth when Dean, Weaver, Warren and Adams three hits to let Jennings go all the way around the path to score.

The Blue Devils started the scoring in the first inning when Adams, second, went to third on Jackson's error, and then stole home before the Carolina infield could decide what to do with the ball. They scored another in the second, and in the third, scored 3 runs when Weaver hit for the circuit with Kistler and Werber on base. The Dukes also scored in the fourth and the eighth.

Henry Kistler, giant Duke left gunner, pitched his ball on an Albatross position when he made several nice catches long hits. It seemed that Westmoreland was afraid of what Henry would do to his ball game if he pitched them over, for he walked Kistler several times.

Weaver led the hitting with 5 hits out of 4 trips, while Belue hit twice out of two times at bat.

MATCHES ARE THRILLING

Carolina Has to Fight Hard to Win—
Captain Waddell Defeats Captain
Rogers in Feature Singles
Match of Contest

The Duke tennis team was defeated on home courts by the Carolina racketeers last Wednesday after a hard fight. Carolina's net stars found stiff opposition in the Duke outfit, and the visitors had hard going, but finally emerged victors by a 5 to 4 score. The Tar Heels won three of the singles matches and two of the doubles events.

The most spectacular play of the meet was that between the captains of the two teams. These net experts of long standing had met before in championship play and are very evenly matched. After playing Captain Waddell, of Carolina, took to the first set captain Rogers, weakened in the final stages and lost the second by a score of 6 to 1. The first set went to sixteen games before the Tar Heels finally emerged victor 9 to 7. This was a fast and flashy match and much skill was exhibited.

In the second singles event of the day, Hargrove, doubles mate of Rogers, was defeated in a hard fought match by Wilson, of Carolina 6-8; 1-6. The third, fourth and fifth singles players of the Duke sides performed exceedingly well and won their respective matches. Holton, of Duke, defeated Bill Scott, a Washington boy of tennis fame. This match went to three sets, when Holton, having dropped the first game back with force and took the next two sets, 6-3; 6-2.

Perhaps the most interesting doubles event of the day was that when Holton and Dorsett, of Duke, defeated Merritt and Scott, of Carolina. The Duke men won the first set after a close play, 6-4. In the second set games went to 7-5 before the Carolina boys won the match. Rogers and Dorsett came back in the final set, however, to win 6-4 and took the match. Dorsett played with surprising skill in both doubles and singles, and his singles match was quite an upset. He took straight sets from Merritt, a Carolina player.

FIVE DUKE MEN
MAKE ALL STATE

Jenkins, Belue, Werber, Adams, and Kistler Picked by Chronicle Writers

This job of selecting an all state team is not so easy as it is cracked up to be, especially when you have such a number of really good players on the different college teams of the state. It seemed that this year furnished perhaps the most brilliant array of college baseball talent that has been shown in the south in the last few years.

Charley "Rat" Easton, Little State backstop seemed to have been the most likely of all the college catchers seen in action this season. In addition to being a reliable catcher, he is good with the bat, and led State this season in home runs. His performance in the Duke State game last Thursday was way off his usual standard. For pitchers, it seemed that Jenkins, and Belue of Duke and Westmoreland of Carolina were the pick of the pack. Jenkins and Belue, both pitchers are only Sophs and Westmoreland finished his career at Carolina this year. It is interesting to note, however, that every time the Duke Sophs and the Carolina Captains have met, the Carolina man has been defeated.

Mackie, another Carolina boy was the choice for the initial sack position. He is a heavy hitter and was picked for several all-state sides last year. Weaver, Duke captain this year ran Mackie a close race for this position. Satterfield, diminutive Carolina short stop was our pick for second base. He was a good player both in the field and at bat, so we shifted him to second, as Bill Werber had the short position scored up. Billy Werber, Washington flash is the fastest college ball player that has been seen in action in the south for quite a while and it seems that he will be a likely choice for All-Southern this year. Billy Farley should have gotten the third sackers job, but the unfortunate accident to his knee cut him out of the race.

Joyner of Wake Forest was the man picked to hold down the hot corner. In the outfield, Kistler and Adams had a big edge on any of the other boys seen this year. Captain Elmer Ratford of Davidson was chosen for the other place in the outer garden.

Lafayette was with State College last Thursday when the beat Duke on Hanes field, 11 to 10. The Wolfpack made eleven errors and nine hits while the Blue Devils made eleven hits and only three errors. But Duke could not take advantage of the breaks that came her way and let the game slip from her fingers. State scored five runs in the ninth inning to gain a one run lead. Jen served the Blue Devils a goose egg in the latter half of the inning. With two more strikes and a two run lead in the ninth inning, Lefty Jenkins passed in three runs to give the Wolfpack their margin of victory.

DeHart's cohorts started off like a house afire, scoring four runs in the first inning before Doug Cook could say "scat." Algood was taken from the box and sent to third until he could get lined up. He came back in the second inning and pitched creditable ball until the eighth when the Blue Devils relied upon him for six hits and four runs.

Thomas started the game for Duke but could not get his curve ball working and was relieved in the fifth in favor of Johnson after allowing seven hits and five runs.

Blindfolded ... in scientific test of leading Cigarettes, Princess Paul Chavchavadze selects OLD GOLD

"I was much intrigued by the invitation to make a blindfold test of your leading brands of American cigarettes, to see how they compared with each other and with those I had smoked abroad. Could one really taste the difference? I wondered.

"But when I was handed these cigarettes, one by one, I realized at once that there was a difference and that the test was conclusive. One cigarette was so much more appealing, so much more delicate in flavor. Oh, and so much smoother!

"When the test was over and I was told that the cigarette of my choice was OLD GOLD I understood at once why this cigarette is so popular among my American friends."

Nina Chavchavadze

PRINCESS PAUL CHAVCHAVADZE, Sister of Mrs. Wm. B. Leeds

How Test Was Made

Subject was blindfolded, and in the presence of two responsible witnesses, was given one each of the four leading cigarettes to smoke. To clear the taste, coffee was served before each cigarette. The Princess was entirely unaware of the identity of these cigarettes during test. After smoking the four cigarettes, the Princess was asked to designate by number her choice. Without hesitation she replied: "No. 3", which was OLD GOLD.
