

DUKE PRESIDENT PRESENTS PAPER AT CHATTANOOGA

Address by Dr. Few Read at Two Educational Conferences
in Tennessee

HE TELLS OF UNIVERSITY

In Discussing "Training of College Teachers as Graduate Students" Dr. Few's Address Outlined System Employed at Duke; Dr. Few Unable to Attend personally Because of Funeral of Mr. Duke

Address by President W. P. Few was read at the tenth meeting of the educational association of the Methodist Church, South, and the fifteenth annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges, both in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Friday, January 15, and 16-17, respectively, in Chattanooga, Tenn. Dr. Few was unable to attend personally on account of the funeral of the late B. N. Duke.

Dr. Few had for his subject at the Meeting of the Methodist Educational Association, "How Education and Research Can Work Together." Dr. Few emphasized in his paper on this subject that education and research are not conflicting. His words at this point in the treatise were: "We are aware of the long historical conflict that has been waged through all civilization between the material and the spiritual, the body and the soul, the flesh and the life without a moral meaning, on the one hand, and religious intensity and earnestness on the other hand; and we realize that it is only through a fusion of the two that a synthesis of these two divergent elements can be effected."

Religion and education do not contain such grossly varying elements that they cannot be indubitably interrelated. They are different shades, and so Dr. Few expressed his belief that the greatest benefit of the liberal university should be to bring the two together.

In the meeting of the Association of American Colleges Dr. Few spoke with the subject of "Training of College Teachers as Graduate Students." "In this subject," he said, "we discussed the system employed by Duke. He stated that the purpose of the Graduate School at Duke is to train the future teachers of the nation."

WILSON SPEAKS AT POLITY CLUB MEET

Price Essay Contest Sponsored by Carnegie Foundation Offers
Free Trip to Europe

The Polity club of Duke University held its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday evening, January 10. The meeting was presided over by Everett B. Wetherington, president of the club. Dr. Robert W. Wilson was introduced as the speaker of the evening, and he gave an interesting and instructive talk on the recent Washington conference.

President Wilson began his discussion by giving a brief history of the former conferences of the nature of the Washington conference, and he summarized the conclusions of these conferences which were held in an effort to secure a better understanding of international relations. He then went into a more detailed discussion of the Washington conference, and he pointed out the most important points of the conference and the most important points of the conference.

Dr. Wilson, who is a member of the American science department of Duke University, is one of the most popular members of the faculty here, and he is a very interesting speaker. He received his doctor's degree in political science at Princeton University. At the close of the meeting of the polity club, Dr. B. N. Duke made an announcement concerning the trip that is going to be made to the next summer by the American students. These students will be under the auspices of the Carnegie Foundation, and they will be given the expense of their trip to Europe.

Graduate Club Will Meet Tomorrow Night

President Ivey Allen of the Graduate Club announces that the club will hold its January meeting on Tuesday, January 15, in Room 20, West Duke, at 7:15 P. M. The club has been so fortunate as to secure Professor W. P. LaPrade of the Department of History to address the club at this time.

His subject will be "Problems in the Study of the History and Influence of Public Opinion." Professor LaPrade is well-known as one of the most interesting speakers in the Duke faculty, and the members of the club will doubtless take advantage of this opportunity to hear him discuss the methods of studying public opinion. This will be an open meeting of the club and all members of the University community are welcome to attend.

WHITE BACK FROM TOUR OF ENGLAND

Studies in British Museum on Life and Reputation of Shelley,
English Poet

Dr. N. J. White, professor of English here, returned to the campus about the middle of December from London, England, where he had spent several weeks studying in the British Museum.

Dr. White has been away since last June, when he was granted a month's leave of absence for the purpose of travel and study in England, Scotland, and the continent. Dr. White devoted a large portion of his time to research in the life and reputation of Shelley, the English poet. He has collected some very interesting material on this subject, and he has been able to bring back to the campus a wealth of information on the life and reputation of Shelley.

Dr. White will use this material in the preparation of his studies on Shelley, which will be published in the near future. Recently there appeared an annotated edition of Shelley's works, and Dr. White has been able to bring back to the campus a wealth of information on the life and reputation of Shelley.

Changed the Problem of Education

Mr. Allen first Outside of Students and Alumni to Be Initiated

Archer Turner Allen, State Superintendent of Schools of North Carolina, was taken into Kappa Delta Pi, an international honorary educational fraternity, on Monday, January 7. The initiation of Mr. Allen is significant in the fact that he is the first person outside of the students and alumni of Duke who has been taken by this chapter of the fraternity.

Mr. Allen arrived here on Monday, and he remained at the campus until 6:00 o'clock that evening. Following the initiation a banquet was held at the Union which was attended by the President and alumni members of the organization. At this dinner Mr. Allen gave an informal talk on the problems of education in North Carolina. The following morning, during the chapel service, he addressed the students and gave a speech showing how changing conditions have changed the problem of education.

Dr. W. H. Longley, noted scientist of the University, who has been in the service of the University for many years, was introduced as the speaker of the evening, and he gave an interesting and instructive talk on the recent Washington conference. ## German Girl Pictures Homeland in Interview

By Marjorie Peoples

"When you are in Rome, do as the Romans do," and "when you are in America, speak the English language," are sayings that almost hold true. But when Shakespeare's English is the language you are acquainted with, well, you don't try to speak at all. At last, according to Miss Gretel Hermsdorf, who found when she first came to America that such speech quite as necessary as any requirement. It is easy to the plight of a young German girl on first reaching America and trying to understand our Southern drawl with only six years of classroom English in her experience. Indeed, it must have been a sorry plight.

As she is the daughter of a professor in the University of Marburg, Germany, Miss Hermsdorf has known something of what a real German University life is like, although she was only a senior in high school when she left Germany five months ago. Since the first of the German University probably corresponds to the third year of an American University, she has been rated as a sophomore at Duke. Miss Hermsdorf says that their Universities are to be compared with our graduate schools in their scholarship and type of instruction. The students are required to attend classes regularly have optional schedule of courses, take examinations only at the end of their college course, and have more freedom outside of classes than we do.

According to Miss Hermsdorf, the students in Germany enjoy the same type of social life as in our universities. However, there are to be seen in Germany fewer elaborate parties and fewer picture parties, since automobiles are not as common there and these entertainments of a higher order are attended. The opera, symphony concerts, and musicals are more in vogue. Their fraternity dances are similar in every sense of the word to ours. The fraternities are called corporations.

As far as the girls in Germany are concerned, only the most serious and "clever" ones go to the Universities, and in Miss Hermsdorf's opinion, girls never think about going to America. They, it will hold the secret for a natural blond. German girls often speak of some subject in connection with which prepares them for a profession.

After spending the Christmas holidays here, Miss Hermsdorf is in a position to compare our celebration with that of her countrymen. She says that we seem to put upon a different interpretation upon the significance of that holiday than we do. To them, Christmas Day and New Year's Day are really of religious significance. After Christmas Day and celebration with the presentation of gifts, a Christmas tree, singing of hymns, and the reading of the Biblical Christmas story, the families attend morning and afternoon church services on Christmas Day. Fire works, turkey dinner, wholesale snatching of gifts, and gay celebrating

The conference will close during the evening with a formal dinner at Hotel Richmond.

FEW STUDENTS CONFINED IN INFIRMARY WITH FLU

The influenza situation at the university has apparently quieted with the past week. An official of the infirmary reports that there are now only ten patients under the university physician's care.

All available nurses in the boys' infirmary was utilized before Christmas and were for the first wave of the epidemic. All patients were discharged before the termination of the holidays.

First Volume of Archive Made Appearance 40 Years Ago With Debate Societies As Sponsors

By J. Sidney Shaw
(Staff Feature Writer)

Four decades and one year ago the members of the Christian and Hesperian Literary Societies brought forth on this campus the first issue of the Trinity Archive. That was back in the good old days when a literary society was literary; they were also social and political in those days. A little over above—"this campus" was not this campus then. Volume 1 of the Archive made its appearance before Trinity College was moved to Durham.

In size it was considerably smaller than ours, though it was often thicker. It continued in the same size for over thirty years. The first copies which are available are for the time (1891-92). Its advertisements were quaint for advertising as it is done today is a comparatively recent development. In those days before the appearance of the Chronicle, it served as both literary magazine and newspaper.

The policy during the first fifteen years of its existence was constantly that it should be the organ of the student body. How it has changed during the last few years! Now we get the skinned milk of student writing combined with professional and semi-professional efforts which together make a small literary review that is little more than the conventional college magazine. Shortly after the Chronicle broke forth in the midst of the former issue of the campus of old Trinity, the Archive changed its policy by announcing that its purpose was to foster the literary spirit among the students of the college. That was the best of all their policies. "This term-behave to hold it tight."

Its policy has changed no more in the type of writers that appear in it. In its early issues there were articles on "Negro Preachers in Durham," "Hacks and Hackmen in Durham," and "Art and Literature in Herts." (This was the suburb of Durham and not the island republic). You know well what we are offering in our little literary review now. The first issues were filled with literary criticisms, poems, exchanges, alumni news, college news, Y. M. C. A. news, literary society news, and editorials. The literary reviews to appear were reviews of current magazines.

Some of its volumes and some of its numbers have been known to me. I read one very humorous account of the Spanish-American war, a volume of just the kind we now greatly cherish, and the first issue of the Archive after the death of Ralph Palfrey who drew a few for the archival year.

Among the most dusty files of the library I found the seventh issue of the Brown, head of the department of English at Duke University, was the principal speaker at a joint meeting of the Wednesday Afternoon Study Club and the Wednesday Book Club of Greensboro this afternoon. He spoke on "Psalms Songs and Ballads of North Carolina." Theronburg, Va. held the home of Mrs. H. H. Hale.

I read in a number of 1898 that a science club and a current events club had recently been organized, and that they were expected to be of great benefit and interest to the students. If the last generation could have foreseen the complications there were to arise from the appearance of so many "honorary" fraternities, they would have contained them selves without forming societies which would be neither honorary nor beneficial.

COLLEGE TEACHER IS SUBJECT OF MEETING

Dr. Few Unable to Attend Conference in Account of Mr. B. N. Duke's Death

The death of Benjamin N. Duke prevented Dr. W. J. Few, president of Duke University, from attending two conferences held last week in Chattanooga, Tenn., and from actively participating on the program of each. Dr. Few had been invited to speak at the 15th annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges, and the 10th annual meeting of the educational association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The president of Duke University's greatest benefactor, he immediately returned to his home in Chapel Hill when he learned of the death of Duke University's great benefactor. This was the first time that the meeting of the association of American colleges has been held in the south. At this meeting, President Few was to have presented a paper on "What Special Training Should a Prospective College Teacher Receive While a Graduate Student?" In his absence, the subject of Mr. Few's address at the church education meeting was, "The

THE ANATOMY OF SMOKE PLEASURE

You see the fact is that once you've chosen Camels, you're somewhat the fair-haired boy. Perhaps a word of explanation is in order, but we're disinclined to elucidate at length. We could probably trace the cool course of a mellow Camel-club through your smoke-channel—and explain what makes it "click." But as the osteopath said to the bacteriologist, "Don't bacilli." Have a Camel!
