UNIVERSITY FILES REPLY TO SUIT OF DURHAM MAN

As a result of an alleged illegal autopsy performed on the two-year-old son of James Walter Foster, Durham man, who filed a $50,000 suit against Duke university, the university has answered the suit by claiming that permission to perform the autopsy was given by an uncle of the child.

The complainant claims that the university obtained possession of the body under the pretext that it was to be embalmed and that it was horribly mutilated by the removal of the heart, the lungs and other organs.

Other than saying that permission to perform the autopsy was obtained, the defendant's answer describes the institution as being one "to advance learning in all lines of truth, to defend scholarship against all false notions and ideas, and to develop a Christian love of freedom and truth."

Barrymore, Shearer Draw Largest Student Crowds

By JOHN MOREHEAD

If box-office receipts may be taken as a criterion, John Barrymore and Norma Shearer are the most popular stars of Duke cinema-goers.

This conclusion and these following were made after a study of financial returns of shows playing at the Duke Quadrangle picture house for the past year and a half.

Another member of the royal family, Lionel Barrymore, is the second biggest name to the Blue Devil movie fans, followed by George Arliss, and Lawrence Tibbett. Norma Shearer's closest rival is Elsie Leland Ann Harding, who starred in "Holiday," the most popular picture to show at the school theatre last year. Slim (Bugsy Call) Summerville is the best liked actor appearing in comedy shorts, while the Zea Potts-Thelma Todd combination is the leading female laugh pull.

"Mickey" Mouse and "Betty Boop" are the most popular of the animated cartoons.

(Be Blessed Event) Tracy is all the rage here now but theatre-managers believe he is only fad and will not continue to hold his box-office power.

Like Polished Productions

Duke students demand of their shows, well written stories, good direction, and capable acting. Sexy pictures will not even crowd if their only quality is that they're "hot." No certain type of picture is a sure success, those possessing clever drawing-room conversation appear to be the best received.

Nor does the Duke audience always like shows which have been hits in other venues. For example, "I am a Fugitive from the Chain Gang" was wildly acclaimed throughout the country, yet it drew the smallest house for four months. The reason may have been, however, that most of the student went to theatres in Durham that ran the attraction first. Among the most popular pictures appearing here in the last 18 months were "Holiday" with Ann Harding; "Mad Genius" and "Singsong" with John Barrymore; "The Rogue Song" with Lawrence Tibbett; "Phantom President" with Jimmy Durante (another student favorite); "This is the Night," with Charles Huguley; and "Speak Easily" with Jimmy Durante and Buster Keaton.

Garbo, Fair Attraction Although Garbo Garbo's dance in "Mati Hari"—the dance done by a double—was the most-talked-of single shot to show here in a year and a half, the silent Swede does not enjoy a following compared to her national reputation.

Students are divided over the Merit of "Travelling" and Oliver and Hardy shorts; some like them and others think they are a bore.

Among the pictures which "were swan" failures here, Lillian Gish in "The Sinner" was outstanding.

Duke Assistant History Prof Given Research Opportunity

Every year the American Council of Learned Societies gives grants to professors who are interested in doing research work in the humanities which will be helpful to students in general. Such a grant has been given recently to Miss Dorothy Louise Mackay, assistant professor of history, for historical research and a project study in the history of the University of Orleans, France. Professor Mackay will therefore sail in June for a summer's work in Orleans.

LOCAL WOMEN TO SPONSOR PICTURE

Durham Branch of American University Women Selling Tickets to "Cavalcade"

The Durham branch of the American Association of University Women, of which Miss Elizabeth Anderson of Duke is president, is sponsoring the sale of tickets for the movie "Cavalcade," from the play by Noel Coward. Performances will be given April 19, 20, 21, and 22. The price for the tickets is the same as usual, including the regular bargain hour rates.

The proceeds from the sale of tickets will go toward a fellowship fund maintained by the A. A. U. W. for the aid of college graduates who wish to study either in this country or abroad. A number of these have been given in past years, and members of the organization invite inquiries concerning the granting of such fellowships.

"Cavalcade," which enjoyed a long run as a stage play, has received enthusiastic press notices. The movie has been playing to large audiences in New York. The story concerns the life of an English family from the beginning of the Boer War to the present time. Interesting, with the story of the family, are historical events of world importance. The authentic record of the progress of the world in amusements, costumes and the like, is amusing.

The filming of scenes requiring such a large number of actors as do some of the scenes in "Cavalcade" is almost unprecedented.

In order that the proceeds will go to the A. A. U. W., the college community is asked to purchase tickets from A. A. U. W. members or from members of the senior class. Among the A. A. U. W. members who are in charge of the sale of tickets are: Dean Alice M. Baldwin,

Mrs. Haas Smith, Miss Elizabeth Anderson, Miss Grant, Miss Cerde, and Miss Alma Wyles.

Ever smoke
"whittle"
tobacco?

Well . . . here it is . . . already whittled FOR you. GRANGER Rough Cut is tobacco whittled right . . . that's one reason why it burns so slow and cool.

WHEN we started to make GRANGER Rough Cut we knew that fine tobacco burnt hot because it burnt so fast. It kept your pipe hot. You could hardly hold your pipe in your hand, it got so hot at times.

Then we remembered that some folks back yonder used to "whittle" their tobacco. So we made GRANGER just like "whittle" tobacco — "Rough Cut." It smokes cooler and lasts a lot longer. And also, you'll find it never gums the pipe.

So far, so good. Now we wanted to sell this tobacco for 10c. Good tobacco—right process—cut right. It was a question of how to do it for the price.

So we put GRANGER in a sensible soft foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke a package. We gave smokers this good GRANGER tobacco in a common-sense pouch for 10c.

GRANGER has not been on sale very long, but it has grown to be a popular smoke. And there is this much about it—we have yet to know of a man who started to smoke it, who didn't keep on. Folks seem to like it.

ELLIS-STONE'S—SECOND FLOOR

Writer Discusses Rise Of Duke With Few At Helm

By Louis A. Gans

Dr. William Brewster, president of Duke University, is approaching the twenty-fifth year of his incumbency. In exceeding more than a score of years as head of the institution that has risen to world-wide importance with the gifts of unprejudiced generosity by James B. Duke, Dr. Brewster has established himself as the foremost educational leader of America. It is, therefore, hardly anomalous that this thing, with another year rapidly coming to its close, should point out the many things that have been instrumental in bringing Duke to its pre-eminent position, mainly through the efforts of its president.

For a quarter of a century, Dr. Brewster has constantly kept his shoulder to the wheel, in his attempt to bring life to college to the place he thought it deserved. Always probing ahead with all the resources at his command, both material and mental, the president sacrificed all personal aggrandizement, or rather, all opportunity for such aggrandizement, so that he could be solely engrossed in the ultimate realization of his ideal. He has not, however, neglected to give of his time and energy to civic affairs, and he has, therefore, rendered notable service to the South, to North Carolina, and to the Nation.

Possessing a rare serenity, a patient disposition, an ability to grasp facts and situations, and the power of construction, President Brewster combines the traits desired in the successful executive. With all of his many responsibilities, he is in command of his fellow men, democratic, and an alumnus of Duke.

Dr. Brew is a graduate of Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C., receiving his A.B. degree there in 1888. In that same year he taught at St. John's Academy, Darlington, S. C. He was an instructor in the Wofford College Fitting School in 1890-91, and instructor in English in Wofford College in 1891-92. In September of his latter year he enrolled in the graduate school at Harvard, where he remained for four years, getting the A.M. degree in 1895 and Ph.D. degree in 1896. While at Harvard, Dr. Brew specialized in modern literature, and was one of the ablest young men who made the nineties the most impressive decade of Harvard's history. According to that gentleman himself:

FRENCHMEN FEEL LET-DOWN BY U. S. STATES RAYMOND

Duke French Instructor Speaks to Raleigh University Women Association

POLICY HARD TO FOLLOW

French Cannot Understand American Unwillingness to Follow Wilson's Terms

Miss Mary Lois Raymond of the Duke department of Romance languages, later national relations chairman of the Durham branch of the American Association of University women, spoke in Raleigh Thursday evening, April 6, to the Raleigh branch of the Association on the subject of Franco-American relations. Miss Raymond told some personal anecdotes of four years spent in France as a student, and then as interpreter and translator, and discussed French complaints in regard to tariffs and war debts and disarmament.

She said: "A great deal is always said about the 'traditional friendship' of France and the United States, but since the war misunderstandings have grown constantly more bitter. The United States, in the comparative security of isolation, cannot understand the fear complex of the French in regard to their ancient enemy, Germany."

At the Peace Conference when forced to yield their claims to both banks of the Rhine, the French believed themselves partly compensated by a security pact with England and the United States. They have never been able to understand how the United States could disavow the commitments of President Wilson in the treaty and in the proposed League of Nations. They feel that the United States has "let them down" constantly since the war, since we would not even agree to enter a consultative pact, nor have we adhered to the World Court. Although giving us credit for the Kellogg Pact, they can not understand our unwillingness to "back it up."

"An error absolutely abroad," said Napoleon, became a virtue in the eyes of posterity. To the French the influence of succeeding United States authorities that war debts and reparations are wholly unconnected seems such an error—a thesis without justification logic or in fact. They point to the Hoover moratorium of 1913 as linking the two inseparably, and the Laval-Hoover discussions on basis for the French assumption that further reduction in reparations would bring a reduction in their own debt to the United States.

"French political writers speak of the moratorium as a 'crime' and at France, and of refusal to continue debt payments as being the moral duty of France.

"Since my financial difficulties of the last month the French have shown a more friendly and sympathetic spirit, and are advocating the delayed payment of the December 15 installment on the war debt as an indication of their good will."

A re-examination of the whole question must certainly come soon in preparation for the World Economic Conference."

Statistics On Med Service Are Obtained

The medical service under the direct supervision of Dr. Speed has during the past year performed fine work. An example of the work done by Dr. Speed and his staff in their hardest month, from February 1931 to March 1932, is shown in the monthly report:

Coughs, colds, sore throats, 2,899; constipation (internal upset), 286; eyes—conjunctivitis, 61; feet (ring worms), 11; skin diseases with secondary infections, 164; autogenous vaccines given, 91; physical education transfers to correct gait classes, 214; total ambulatory cases, 2809.

Total bed cases numbered 1188; cases referred for consultations with specialists, 174; total cases for the month, 4,593.

A summary of the cases handled by the Medical Service in 1931 through 1932 is as follows:

13,242 ambulatory cases; 878 bed cases—treated; 1,188 consultations.

There were no deaths and no cases of severe illness.

Rare Specimen Of First Saw Gin Now In Library

Cotton Gin Relic Brought Here From Old North Carolina Farm; Recent Acquisition by Duke Student Recalls Unusual Facts About Invention of Seeding Process

An antique saw gin of unusual value, historically, is at present in the hands of Duke library officials. It was brought here recently from a farm in Edgecombe county and is the property of R. R. Walton, a student in the school of religion.

This old hand-made, hand-driven machine belonged originally to Silas Everett, who died in 1841, and it is a known fact that the gin has not been used since that date.

The actual date of its making is not known, but since power was applied to all gins very soon after they came into existence, the hand gin probably dates around the year 1800.

It was given to Walton by his grandfather, who bought the Everett farm. The antique was found in the attic of the farmhouse, and has been lent temporarily to the university.

The gin is one of the very first cotton machines of its kind. Its discovery recalls, in addition to its own unique history, the conditions in the South upon the invention of the two types of cotton gins, the spike gin and the saw gin.

Hodges Holmes of Augusta, Ga., was the inventor of the saw gin, a year following Eli Whitney's invention of the spike gin in 1794.

Mr. Holmes was successful in securing a patent on his invention in the year 1796, but antique works began to be made rapidly soon after the first invention, the two types of gin became common.

There was a large number of law suits over the question of who was the original inventor. Besides, there were many applications for patents from the government over minor technical differences in the construction of the gin.

Those latter were not given recognition, and the main point of divergence considered was whether spikes or saws would be employed.

Mr. Whitney got almost the whole credit publicly for inventing the cotton gin. He is supposed to have received in royalties from the southern states, $80,000 of his invention.

As a matter of fact the latter invention proved the more practicable because it was the first to be power-driven (1793).

The use of saws instead of spikes was found to be more effective in separating lint from cotton seed, and also a faster process.

The roller gin, the first gin of any sort, had its origin about the year 300 B.C. in India. It was used in the South up to the time when the first ancestor of the modern type was born. The process of separating seed from fibre was accomplished after a fashion on the roller gin by mashing the seeds between the two rollers, which formed the only mechanism of the machine.

The significance of Hodges' and Whitney's inventions is shown in statistics concerning with the production of cotton in the South, expressed in terms of 500-pound bales.

In 1790 there were 3,000 bales produced. In 1798, four years after the original spike gin appeared, 30,000 bales were produced; and in 1801 the output had increased to 400,000 bales.

The introduction of the more efficient methods not only increased speed of production but also made it profitable to cultivate the short-staple or upland cotton in the inland regions. Formerly the long-staple or Sea Island variety was the only kind that could be grown, because the other suffered too closely to the seeds to be separated by the use of rollers.

The saw gin was born in the library made almost entirely of wood. No machinery must have been used in its construction, for the saws were probably fashioned by the local blacksmith.

There are about eight saws and an equal number of rows of brushes. The brush mechanism revolves four or five times as fast as the saws.

Sheets of metal pressed closely together, leaving only slits for the saw blades to pass through, prevent the cotton seeds from going through the machine when the saws catch up the three and the seeds are forced to drop out at the start. The fibre is taken up by the brushes and allowed to collect, finally to drop down a chute ready to be packed into bales or set on the family bonnet.

AIMS OF WOMEN VOTERS LEAGUE ARE DISCUSSED

A meeting of the League of Women Voters was held Thursday, April 6, at the home of Mrs. F. A. G. Corper. Mary Sinter, president of the group, presided. In a speech on "National Organization," Mrs. Corper outlined the origin and purpose of the league. She told of instances when the work of the league has influenced legislators, stressing the fact that the organization is entirely non-partisan in its outlook. Mrs. Corper was formerly head of the state league, and active in the national organization.

Following Mrs. Corper's talk, committee reports were given. Eleanor Rodgers, head of the welfare committee, told of the work of her group in investigating city and county welfare centers. Helen Clark, a member of the committee on efficiency in government, presented a tentative plan for revision of the present manual of college elections.

"GROWING LARGER BY SERVING BETTER"

Why is the Stem removed from the tobaccos used in Chesterfield?

That's a very simple question to answer. The stem in a tobacco leaf, like the stem in most other plants, is "woody". It hasn't any of the flavor or the aroma that you want when you smoke. And it doesn't burn right.

So after tobacco has been properly aged, one of the first things to do is to remove the stems.

But what has this to do with your enjoyment of Chesterfield cigarettes? Just this. It means that we start right when we make Chesterfield—the right kind of leaf with the stem removed, the right manufacture—everything that science knows that can make CHESTERFIELD a milder cigarette, a cigarette that tastes better.

That's why people say "They Satisfy."

Tobacco used to be stemmed by hand—Now this machine stems 14,300 leaves every hour.

SPAIN ASKS DUKE MAN TO LECTURE

At present Dr. Hamilton is engaged in research work in Spain as director of the International scientific committee on price history, a committee subsidized by the Rockefeller foundation.

He is also preparing three books for publication, "American Treasure and the Price Revolution in Spain, 1501-1600," which will probably be published this fall; "Money, Prices, and Wages in Navarre and Valencia, 1348-1500," will probably appear in 1934; and "Money, Prices, and Wages in Spain, 1601-1800," for which the date of publication has not been set.

Other works now being prepared by Dr. Hamilton are a biographical article and one essay for a memorial volume to Professor T. N. Carver, of Harvard university, to be published in 1934.

Dr. Hamilton is on leave of absence from Duke, and will return this September to resume his teaching here.

BASEBALL TEAM FACING SIX GAMES IN FOUR DAYS

Virginia Tech, Guilford, Maryland, and Durham Bulls play During Easter

With two victories already hanging in their belts, a much improved Blue Devil baseball team faces a strenuous week of work. Six games in four days is quite a task for any club, but it will give Coach Coulton a chance to send for his good pitchers to the mound for duty.

Virginia Tech starts things off tomorrow with a game here; then the Guilford Quakers will try to upset the home team on Friday; Maryland for the second straight year comes here for a double header on Saturday; and if the Devils get through all or most of these games safely, then can expect plenty of trouble with the Durham Bulls on Easter Monday.

Of these three contests, it looks as though the boys will shoot the works against Maryland and V. P. I. Both of these schools are in the Conference and since the Southern championship is decided on paper, the team will be doubly anxious to come out on top. Last year the Blue Devils met the Old Lineers immediately after the holidays and managed to put on a rally in the eighth inning to triumph. The College Park boys will be intent on the services of Ben Berger but are expected to put a good club on the field. V. P. I. has started about this year and will be the under dog. Duke teams have been fortunate with visiting teams during the last four seasons.

Facing the Durham Bulls is another matter. Professional ball clubs always given Duke plenty of trouble, but the Blue Devils will be finding a team that has not played together much. This will be the only time in their favor, for the boys will be tired after four games.

The schedule for the week:

Thursday—V. P. I.—here.
Friday—Guilford—here.
Saturday—Maryland—here, two games.
Monday—Durham Bulls—21 Toro park. Two games.
