ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF SERVICE

DUKE UNIVERSITY DAY

December 11, 1937

1838-1839—Union Institute, formerly a private school, re-organized through the joint efforts of the Methodists and Quakers of Randolph County under the leadership of Brantley York.

1841—Incorporated by Legislature of North Carolina as Union Institute Academy.

1842—Braxton Craven became head of the institution.

1851—Re-incorporated as Normal College, its graduates licensed to teach in the common schools of North Carolina.

1853—Affiliated with the State of North Carolina and was authorized to confer degrees. Governor became ex-officio President and Superintendent of Common Schools, ex-officio Secretary of Board of Trustees. Received loan of $10,000 from State Literary Fund. First degrees conferred at Commencement, 1853.

1856—Affiliated with the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Church.

1859—Re-incorporated as Trinity College.

1882—Death of President Craven. Succeeded by Marquis L. Wood (1883-84).

1884—Julian S. Carr, J. W. Alsbaugh and James A. Gray, members of the Board of Trustees, assumed financial management of institution for two years.

1887—John Franklin Crowell, of Pennsylvania and Yale, elected President.

1889—Trustees voted to move college to some "prominent center in the State."

1891—Authorized by Legislature to move to Durham and alumni given representation on Board of Trustees. Julian S. Carr gave the site and Washington Duke contributed $85,000 for buildings.

1892—Trinity College opened at Durham.

DUKE UNIVERSITY CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

1838-1839 — TRINITY COLLEGE — 1938-1939

Nazi Foe

KLAUS MANN
Klaus Mann, German author and lecturer, who will speak on "Germany and the World" Wednesday evening, December 12, in the Women's college auditorium. His lecture will be the second of the East campus Student Forum Lecture series.

Delta Phi Alpha Presents Germant Detective Movie

A German detective motion picture, "Enil und die Detective", will be shown Monday evening at 8 in the auditorium under the sponsorship of Delta Phi Alpha, German fraternity, with the cooperation of the German department.

Enil, the hero of the opus, is depicted by an ingratiating stranger who robs him of the money he is carrying to grandmother in East. Subsequently, young Enil sets out to track down the thief. With the aid of his gang of boys, Enil captures the thief. Although the locale and cast are German, universal appeal is claimed for the picture. English subtitles are used throughout the picture.

The New York Times comments upon the "delightful" picture and only regrets that its youthful cast could not appear in person. From the New Statesman and London comes this report: "If ever a film were made for the general public, it is this one."

Papers Given At SMA By Medical Faculty

At the meeting of the Southern Medical Association in New Orleans, November 30 to December 2, the following members of the Medical School faculty gave papers:

- Drs. J. M. Arena, Angus McElroy, R. S. Crispell, Fred M. Hanes, W. M. Nicholson, J. L. Calloway, W. W. Eagle, R. J. Reeves, E. P. Ayres, W. C. Davidson, W. D. Forbes, D. H. Sprunt, Leroy Baker, E. A. Ross, W. B. Anderson, and J. M. Rutlin.
- Drs. Angus McElroy and J. M. Arena passed the examination of the American Board of Pediatrics.

Duke Press Publications Displayed In Union; Books And Periodicals Shown

Now on display in the Union are many of the publications of the Duke university press, including 32 books by past and present members of the faculty and 14 periodicals that are in publication today.

The most recent periodical to be established here is the Journal of Parapsychology, a quarterly magazine that has created much interest because of its connection with the experiments in clairvoyance and telepathy that are being conducted by Dr. J. B. Rhine. Many of these "extra-sensory perception" experiments have appeared in the Journal.

Edited by England by Charles Spearman, noted psychologist, and in the United States by Karl Zener of Duke, Character and Personality is an international quarterly which is published in 10 languages. It has been published continuously in Great Britain, Germany and the United States, but recently Germany has ceased to publish it. Another psychological magazine published here is Contributions to Psychological Theory, Edited by Donald K. Adams and Helge Lundh, this magazine appears irregularly.

The oldest periodical published by the Duke university press is the South Atlantic Quarterly. This magazine, while it serves primarily as a medium of expressing opinions concerning problems of the South, also carries articles of national and international interest.

on the average excellent. The Mind's Concept of Yerechts, Dorothy Stone, looked very much the part of the harlot, she stood the abuse cast at her by the Mind and Emotion with great equanimity. The Emotion's Concept of Yerechts, Teresa Harris, did well with the small part of the beautiful and wicked element of the plot. Cameron Forbes, the ideal wife, was necessarily colorless and looked the home-loving type. The Emotion's Concept of the Wife, Charlotte Miller, offered a strong argument for his case. The Subconscious managed to walk off the stage with a great deal of aplomb after lying on a slab for thirty minutes. Walt Mason took this part "Theatre of the Soul" is worthy of no little praise.

"You on a Host" was a dull play even with all of its scenes and characters. The point of the play, if any, was slight and hardly justified the whole work. The three hanged men were Edward Kelly, Carl Lutz, and Richard Northrup. They, together with Jim Rose, did their best to give the play body, but the odds were against them. The scenery and lighting for this drama were excellent.

The settings generally were very attractive and managed to give the plays more of an atmosphere than some of them deserved. The scenery was moved with a minimum of confusion—the stage crew worked well. This was one of the most encouraging things which the Players did last night. It is evident that there is some little talent in the organization which could be put to better use than it was. The Duke Players do much better than they have so far this year.

Committee Decides On Key

Selection of a key which can be bought by all co-eds who have served on the Social Standards Committee was decided at the committee meeting Sunday, December 4.

Christmas Skit To Be Given At Sing Sunday

"The Trial of Father Christmas," a skit, will be presented at the Community Sing, in the Women's College auditorium, Sunday night at 7:30 by Dr. Spence's religious drama class.

Frankie Gerard, aided by his D-Men, will lead the Sing. A male quartet and a women's quartet will take part in the Christmas program.

ceivably have done better with his part since he offers a great opportunity for genuine acting. Cameron Forbes was a perfect small-town girl with above average intelligence and a haunting memory of Shakespeare. She was perhaps the best character in "The Valiant". Leigh Diamond did a good job as the Warden, but he was a trifle awkward in places and lacked sparkle. Carl Lutz was a little pontifical in his role of the prison chaplain. He looked the part, but this was offset by lack of complete familiarity with his lines. Paul Curtis and Tom Morrow, the heavies—Yes, etc.

"Bitter Herbs" written by a Duke alumna, Sheldon Harris, was too hysterical for even such a plight as the Jewish family Frank was in. Embarrass and comical plots came with annoying frequency and regularly. The cast did very well with this vehicle and made the most of the frequent good spots of the play. Teresa Harris again scored as the passionate, impatient Jewish girl who burns under the sun of Hillman. Carl Lutz redeemed himself in the role of Herr Frank, the ousted Gymnasium professor. Lutz was very impressive and was at least on a par with Miss Harris. Richard Monk did fairly well with his part; he must be considered inferior to Lutz and Terry Harris. Edward Satterup and Virginia Grainger were not at all outstanding, and the Nazi officer turned out to be human after all. This play also left a fair impression.

"Theatre of the Soul" was the one really good play. There was not a weak character in this performance. The prologue was very well done by Walt Mason, who described the relations of the three parts of the soul, the Mind, the Emotion, and the Subconscious, Carl Claver, the Mind or rational part of the soul, acquitted himself in an intellectual manner and very nearly prevailed over the Emotion. Jim Rose stormed the heights of drama at times, but fell down in several places. His performance was cent, and without a determined stomach, in the last round to win the match.

The Coffee Shop's other champion, Harry Welch, gained a very close decision over a House I. freshman named Clarence Lewis. It was a close fight all the way, but Coach Warren, the referee, gave it to Welch on his aggressiveness.

Other victors were: Tom Mees in the 115-pound class; Gene Davis at 125 pounds; Bob Little in the 135-pound division; and Tom Latimer in the 145 bout.

ball and basketball. The Delta Sigma are now in second position in "A" league basketball with three wins and one loss. If they can upset the strong Kappa Rho they will be in a tie with that same team and in position to win their first major cup in several years.

For the past four years they have always had one outstanding participant in all events. Last year it was West with his steady play being most noticeable in football, but his services as an official here, and will limit his playing for his fraternity.

The finale in the wrestling tournament will be held next Wednesday night in the gym. If you want to see some good matches mixed in with some good comedy you should attend. A summary of these wrestling matches and the boxing matches completed Wednesday night will be published the first issue after vacation.

The same holds true for the basketball championship which is to be played next Tuesday night. Because there will be only one issue of the Chronicle next week it will be necessary to withhold these results until after the holidays.

Duke Day

Mary Threlkeld, editor of the Chronicle and president of the Women's Student Government, respectively, will also speak.

The luncheon will be the feature of the campus observance of annual "Duke University Day," which this year takes on added significance in connection with the celebration of the school because of the industrial building employees strike at

Students Offer Arbitration For College Strikers

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(AP)—Students at Washington University have offered to arbitrate the month-and-a-half-old building employees strike at the school because "the picketing is a black mark against the university, unless we are sure that the university is standing behind a just cause."

Thus an editorial in Student Life, criticized the editors for "padding" in the most important hour of the school year by failing to bring campus newspaper, explained its offer and suggested a student assembly at which both sides would be heard in the dispute which began September 30 when 39 janitors and building service employees went on strike.

Sigmund Barack, law student and former managing editor of Student Life, criticized the editors for "padding" in the most important hour of the school year by failing to bring campus newspaper, explained its offer and suggested a student assembly at which both sides would be heard in the dispute which began September 30 when 39 janitors and building service employees went on strike.

Washington University has been placed on the unfair list of the American Federation of Labor because of the refusal of the university's trustees to enter into a contract with the local branch of the Building Service Employees Union.

Duke Night in Washington
Duke alumni and undergraduate students in Washington, D. C., will observe Duke night on New Year's night at the Shouchem Hotel. All students passing through the Capital City have been requested to make the affair a success. Those interested have been asked to get in touch with Cliff Velen.

Fewer Entertain

President and Mrs. W. F. P. Per entertained Dr. and Mrs. F. P. Keppel and the members of Duke university faculty at a tea yesterday afternoon in their residence. Dr. Keppel, author of several books, is president of the Carnegie Corporation.

difficultly walking around the house. Friends and neighbors are interested in the family and have been giving them valuable aid, but they have no regular income. The budget for minimum weekly expense has been suggested by the Durham county welfare department as follows:

Expenses:	$2.50
Food	1.00
Gas	1.00
Laundry	1.00
Medical care	1.00
Household needs	1.00
Water	1.00
Restoration	1.00

Income: $4.42
Charity, friends, welfare dept. $2.42
Weekly deficit — $2.12

"The family," reports the welfare department, which has selected the three neediest cases especially for the Chronicle's Christmas Fund, "is in need of medical attention and financial assistance. They appear cooperative and intelligent, so would probably be willing to accept any plan that would be to their advantage." Amount needed, to meet deficit in weekly minimum budget for one year: $256.
