Players Rise

next moment be "another," if in appearance only. Bolton's lines were as good as those of the other players. Carson Forness, a senior who will be remembered in Duke dramatic circles for a long time, seemed really to live his part as Joyce Struthers, the girl in love. That was not a noticeable improvement that could take her out of the part, even for an instant.

Carl Claver, another senior and veteran Duke Player, did a realistic and dependable job in the character of a man who has been a member since he was a child as Carole Anderson's manager. His rendering of the familiar Old Homestead was reminiscent of a scene in the play "Three Men On A Horse."

John Kern, as Gladys Kelly, the maid brought the comedy to the high-camp pitch in putting over a part with which the play would have been a flop. Her debut and finale was a triumph. It's unfortunate she wasn't found sooner.

True to Life
Susan Phillips and Isabel Krampf were true to life as Aunt Kate Baraboy and Mrs. Struthers. Krampf was a bit young in one or two of her scenes and her makeup, which has been a little heavier, may have added to that impression.

The smaller supporting parts were ably done by Paul Smith, Steve Lawrence, and Lois Colby. Colby really looked the part, although she was a whole, congratulations are due to all the actors and to A. T. Went. The stage hands were either silent or over anxious most of the time, but they got a laugh too. The set was good but if the play had lasted being the bright comedy, the dullness of the walls might have been noticeable.

editor of the Chronicle, was being strongly supported for the executive chair and that of an underdog campaign was in the works to make Barker the victor in the honorary election. The name of E. Gilbert Mathews, president of the Men's student government, was being whispered about. "Dark horse" candidates were not lacking.

No Combine
Reports that the Wilsons and Barker factions were effecting a combine for the support of an underdog candidate with a view to deposing Frangione were denied in both camps last night, according to Student Government President Dick Lewis.

Along the campus hotel row, Frangione is being quoted as an 8-1 favorite to win the presidency for the second consecutive year in "The Battle of the Editors." Davenport bookies are willing to lift the odds to 10-1 on Frangione, but Wilson money is reported as coming into evidence.

Although the actual choices have been well-worked in secrecy, little doubt existed that several of last year's choices on the various committees would again be named when the Olémenians appear this week. The Mathews, who made eight of the nine committees, is considered a sure-fire prospect for one of the vice-presidencies; he should graduate to a top spot with little difficulty.

Others seen as probable prospects for this year were Tom Sawyer, A. H. Reid, Cameron Forester, Jack Stannett, and Harold van Glines. The swimming team and tennis squad will make the list in a big camp, something seemed to derive.

But the big question concerns George Frangione's comeback. Can he go to 10-1 Members of Delta Omega Sigma—or at least some of them—feel that he can do most anything.
